10,000 WILL JOIN TODAY IN URGING MAYOR TO RUN

Men of All Parties and All Industries to Unite in City Hall Demonstration.

TAMMANY THE COMMON FOE

BENNETT IN FIGHT TO FINISH

Declares His Americanism and Adds That It's No Reason for Voting For or Against Him.

On the steps of City Hall at noon today Mayor Mitchel will be asked to accept an independent nomination for reelection at the hands of prominent Republicans and independent Democrats. It is expected that fully 10,000 persons, many representing the various industries of the city, will be present to demonstrate to the Mayor that there is a popular demand that he run on an independent ticket against Judge John F. Hylan, the Tammany candidate, and William M. Bennett, who defeated the Mayor in the Republican primaries, according to the new count of the ballots.

It is thought that the Mayor will be sufficiently impressed by the demonstration to admit that there is a real demand for his nomination, and that he will then announce that he will enter the race independently. The Mayor has said that he will run independently only if there is a popular demand that he do so. Working on the theory that the Mayor will enter the race, the Fusion Committee of 1917, which nominated him and a full city, borough, and county ticket, has begun to organize in every section of the city. At least fifty headquarters and many lesser organizations will be established in every borough. Beginning tomorrow night the Fusion Committee will open its campaign with a vim. There will be a meeting at the Academy of Music in Brooklyn and another at Cooper Union. The City Democracy, which has already put the Mayor in the field under the emblem of the rooster, will have charge of the latter meeting.

The speakers at the City Hall Park mass meeting will be Charles E. Hughes, Henry Morgenthau, Alton B. Parker, Oscar S. Straus, George B. McGuire, Vice President of the State Federation of Labor, and Alfred E. Marling. These men will urge upon the Mayor the necessity of his running for re-election in order to keep the control of the city government out of the clutches of Tammany Hall. Eugene H. Outerbridge, President of the Chamber of Commerce, will preside and introduce the Mayor. It was said yesterday by those having the meeting arrangements in charge that the affair would be on a much larger scale than the meeting four years ago, when Mayor Gaynor was tendered a "popular nomination" at the same place after Charles F. Murphy, Leader of Tammany Hall, had refused him a renomination. There will be a large outpouring from the east side, it was said, as well as representations from all other parts of the city. Labor will be represented, and there will be a delegation of women. Since the mass meeting was announced the Women's Committee of 100 have received many messages from organizations of women that they will be present.

Colonel Roosevelt is also expected to be on hand to urge the Mayor to make the race. However, everything will depend upon whether the Colonel, who has been in the West, will arrive in the city in time. He has already indorsed the Mayor, but he has sent word that he is anxious to speak for the Mayor publicly. He wired yesterday that he would make every effort to be present at the proceedings.

Republicans Offer Support.

"The Mayor will be convinced tomorrow that the people of New York City want him to remain in the City Hall for four years more," said Emory R. Buckner, campaign manager of the Fusion Committee. "The Mayor will have to accept a renomination, and we are convinced that we can elect him. Thousands of Republicans, who took no interest in the primaries but took it for granted that the Republican organization would support him, have notified me that they will gladly march to the City Hall and impress upon the Mayor that he is their choice for the Mayoralty. This great Republican strength will offset the Republican vote that went for Bennett in the primaries. These Republicans are not going to be cheated of their choice. They want Mitchel, and they do not want Tammany.

"The Fusion Committee is in better shap now that it was before the primaries were held. The people are aroused. The prospect of Murphy running the city government has been brought forcibly home to them as a result of the Bennett vote, and they are not going to let anything like that occur. Their opinion will be expressed at the polls in November. We have already obtained more than the necessary 3,000 signatures to a petition putting the Mayor in the race as an independent candidate, and more are coming in every minute. Within two or three days a will be organized in every Assembly district. Many people have volunteered to help, and they have been put to work. As fast as the volunteers appear they will be assigned to special duty. Those registered for Mitchel cross..."

Meatless Days End in France; Bread Cards Will Be Employed

PARIS, Sept. 30.—Maurice Long, the new Minister of Provisions, announced in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday that the program of two meatless days a week would be abandoned on Oct. 15, as the economy resulting from it had been insignificant. Bread cards will be instituted.

Outlining his program to the Chamber, M. Long expressed the belief that the importation of wheat to the amount of 40,000,000 quintals (66,666,666 bushels) would suffice, instead of 68,000,000 quintals (113,333,333 bushels,) which it had been thought would be required. He said it was the intention of his department to reduce the sugar ration from 750 grams to 500.

The bread cards, the Minister said, would be employed as an aid in deciding the amount of breadstuffs necessary. His aim, he explained, was to give a better quality and a diminished quantity.

The food allowance for the middle class inhabitants of Berlin last July was given by M. Long as: Bread, 228 grams daily; potatoes, 128; meat, 71; sugar, 73; fats and butter, 11; eggs, 3 weekly.

FALL FROM HORSE KILLS I.N. SELIGMAN

Banker Found Unconscious in Broadway, Not Far from His Home in Irvington.

SKULL FRACTURED AT BASE

Hurried to Hospital for Operation That Fails—Career as Financier and Citizen.

Isaac Newton Seligman of the banking house of J. & W. Seligman & Co., 1 William Street, died at Mount Sinai Hospital at 3:30 yesterday afternoon from injuries sustained when he fell or was thrown from his horse near his Summer home at Irvington.

Mr. Seligman left his home, Willowbrook, on Sunnyside Lane, Irvington, shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning for a horseback ride. About an hour and a half later, Harry Beckley and Frank Yaeger, who are employed as chauffeurs in the neighborhood, found Mr. Seligman lying unconscious near the curb in Broadway, in front of the Irvington Presbyterian Church. His horse was standing a few yards away.

Recognizing the banker, who was a familiar figure about Irvington, having been accustomed to ride or walk every morning he was there, the men picked him up and laid him on a grassy bank beside the road. Then they hailed a passing automobile and asked the owner, Patrolman William Straus of the Sixty-ninth Precinct, New York, to get help. The policeman summoned Dr. Evan J. Smith, who lives a short distance from the scene of the accident.

Dr. Smith had Mr. Seligman taken to his home, and there it was decided to call in Dr. John Gerster of Mount Sinai Hospital. Later examination disclosed that the banker's skull had been fractured at the base, and preparations were at once made to take him to Mount Sinai Hospital for an operation.

An ambulance was obtained at the Dobbs Ferry Hospital, and, with Drs. Gerster and Smith attending the patient, a start was made. Three other machines followed, carrying Mrs. Seligman, her daughter, Miss Margaret V. Seligman, and several close friends of the injured man.

Fails to Regain Consciousness.

The banker's condition became so serious that a stop was made at the Dobbs Ferry Hospital for fresh bandages. From there on a quick trip was made, the ambulance covering the distance of twenty-one miles in less than forty minutes.

At 1:30 o'clock an operation was performed on Mr. Seligman's skull by Dr. C. A. Elsberg, with Dr. Bernard Sachs present. Mr. Seligman did not regain consciousness, and died two hours later.

Before noon yesterday a message telling of the accident was sent to Joseph Lionel Seligman, the banker's only son, who is at the National Guard camp at Spartanburg, S. C., and word was received that he had started for New York at once.

The funeral services, which will be private, will be held tomorrow, and the body will be interred at Salem Fields, Cypress Hills.

Mr. Seligman was a brother of Mrs. Theodore Heilman of 831 West Seventy-first Street, and a brother-in-law of Jacob H. Schiff and Paul M. Warburg.

Mr. Seligman was born in New York on July 10, 1855. His father was Joseph Seligman, a native of Bavaria and founder of the banking house of J. & W. Seligman. At the age of 10 Isaac N. Seligman entered the Columbia Grammar School, and in 1872 entered Columbia College, from which he was graduated with honors in 1876. He was prominent in athletics, and was a member of the famous Columbia eight which in 1874 won the race from Harvard, Yale, and nine other crews on Saratoga Lake. He was always an active and loyal alumnus of Columbia, and for many years President of its boat club and helped to raise funds for its new grounds.

By the time of his graduation from Columbia the Seligman banking house had grown to large proportions, and for the next two years Isaac N. Seligman was associated with the San Francisco branch. In 1878, Mr. Seligman was associated with the New York house of the Seligman bank, and then was a large force in it. In 1883 Mr. Seligman married Hannah, a daughter of Solomon Loeb, banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. They had two children, Joseph Lionel and Margaret V. Seligman.

BOND CAMPAIGN ON; M'ADOO EXPECTS 10 MILLION TO BUY

Opening of the Liberty Loan Canvass to be Celebrated Throughout Nation Today.

$5,000,000,000 IS THE GOAL

Secretary Starts on Tour and Appeal Is to be Spread by Every Possible Agency.

BELLS HERE RING OUT CALL

Steamship and Factory Whistles to Announce Mayor's Ceremony at the City Hall.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—With $5,000,000,000 and 10,000,000 subscribers as the nation's goal, the campaign for the Liberty Loan will begin tomorrow morning. The official circular for the loan issued by Secretary McAdoo tonight fixes the amount of the loan at $3,000,000,000, reserving the right to allot 50 per cent. of the oversubscriptions. He hopes that the subscriptions will amount to not less than $5,000,000,000, and that the number of subscribers will be at least 10,000,000.

Secretary McAdoo left Washington tonight for Cleveland, where he will officially open the campaign tomorrow with a speech. The Secretary's trip will extend to the Pacific Coast, and he will deliver many speeches to arouse the interest of the people in the loan and the necessity of placing their funds at the disposal of the Government.

A Treasury announcement of the fact that Secretary McAdoo will make his opening speech tomorrow at Cleveland said tonight:

"America's second great bond issue to prosecute the war in defense of outraged American rights and in the cause of democracy against autocracy will then be before the people of the country, to whom is again afforded the opportunity to show the Kaiser of Germany that the American Republic intends to bring this war to a victorious conclusion as soon as possible."

From the moment when its doors open tomorrow morning until the close of business on Oct. 27, the last day of the campaign, the Treasury Department will put on full steam to make the Liberty Loan bonds the topic of discussion in schoolroom, workshop, office and home.

Many cities have made preparations to open the campaign with distinctive demonstrations. Factory whistles will blow, aerial bombs will be sent up, flags will fly, and various other features will be employed to arouse enthusiasm. In the evening meetings will be held in many cities and towns throughout the country, with addresses by speakers.

Badge for Each Subscriber.

Each subscriber to a Liberty Loan bond will receive a "badge of honor," as the official Liberty Loan button is described by Secretary McAdoo. Ten million of these buttons have been ordered and are now in the hands of the Federal Reserve District Liberty Loan Committees. Five million Liberty Loan posters, in ten designs, 500,000 Liberty Loan window cards, 5,000,000 Liberty Loan automobile windshield pasters, and 22,000,000 Liberty Loan poster stamps have been prepared and are ready for circulation.

Banks, newspapers, business men's clubs, chambers of commerce, societies, church and school associations, women's organizations, the Boy Scouts, and school children will co-operate with local Liberty Loan Committees in this nation-wide campaign.

Every railroad company in the country has arranged to display a large poster in the waiting room of each station; the express companies have arranged to carry posters on their wagons and to display them in their offices. The Post Office Department will carry Liberty Loan posters on its mail wagons, and every Post Office in the United States will display posters. Special canceling stamps carrying Liberty Loan slogans will be used by the larger Post Offices.

A speakers' bureau, in co-operation with the Federal Reserve District Committees, will send speakers throughout the country to tell the people what Liberty bonds are and why they are issued.

Placards in Street Cars.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the lakes to the Gulf the 44,000,000 daily passengers in the street cars will read the appeal for subscriptions which every car will carry. One appeal shows a gray-haired mother grasping the hand of her soldier son, saying, "You help my boy win this war." Another shows a regiment of soldiers marching away with the legend, "Every man who shoulders a gun risks his all for his country. What are you doing to back him up?" Still another reads, "Every Liberty bond you buy is a shot at a German submarine." These street car appeals are in a series of ten designs.

Theatrical and moving-picture stars have taken part in a series of 500-foot moving-picture films, which will be shown in practically every moving-picture theatre in the country. These films are five in number, and will be known as "The All-Star Production for the Second Liberty Loan of 1917."

London Again Attacked by German Airmen; 11 Killed, 82 Injured, in Saturday's Raid

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The London district was again raided tonight by German airmen. There are persistent but unconfirmed reports that three enemy machines were brought down.

While there was a bright moon there also was a slight mist, and the raiders were invisible to persons in the streets, but from the sounds of the anti-aircraft guns in action the indications were that the raiders were moving over various quarters of the district.

Field Marshal Lord French reports that two groups of enemy machines, followed by others flying singly, crossed the Kent and Essex coasts between 6:40 and 8 o'clock tonight. They came toward London. About ten penetrated the outer defenses, but only four or five got through to London itself.

In expectation of nightly raids, the streets of London were much less crowded tonight than ordinarily. A majority of the people got early to their homes and the services in the churches were held at 5 o'clock, instead of 7. Hence, when the warning was issued, the streets were quickly cleared.

Eleven persons were killed and eighty-two injured in last night's raid, it is announced officially. The material damage was not great.

Latest reports show that a determined and simultaneous attack was made upon London by three groups of raiders. Each of these groups, which approached from different directions, was broken up by anti-aircraft gunfire, and only two or at the most three machines penetrated the defenses. Bombs were dropped in the northeastern and southeastern districts.

A fourth group of enemy machines, which attempted to approach London later was driven off, none of the raiders penetrating the outer defenses of the capital.

Bombs also were dropped at various places in Kent and Essex. Full reports of the casualties and damage have not yet been received, but both are believed to have been comparatively light.

While the raid was at its height a large convoy of wounded from the west front arrived at the London terminal and was transferred to ambulances with the customary calm and celerity.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Tonight's raid was, so far as central London is concerned, more deafening than Saturday night's. More raiders penetrated the outer defenses of the metropolis, but according to all reports late tonight the damage is relatively small.

Londoners generally took the raid with philosophy. At the tube stations where crowds had sought refuge, there was no evidence of panic. In one station the crowd was singing ragtime. In another place a phonograph was reeling out a hackneyed tune.

The five nights of raids have done little more than stimulate the press into somewhat hysterical writing, calls for more warnings, more guns, and more airplanes for retaliation.

BERLIN, Sept. 30, (via London.)—The following official announcement was given out here today:

Our aviators attacked docks and warehouses in London, as well as Ramsgate, Sheerness, and Margate. The effect of the bombs was recognizable from conflagrations caused. Our airplanes returned undamaged.

SAY MANY BANKS HERE AIDED BOLO

Paris Papers Assert That Nine to Twelve Transmitted German Funds to Him.

SUSPECT TAKEN TO PRISON

Crowd Cries "Death to the Traitor!" as He Is Borne from His Hotel on a Stretcher.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—Captain Bouchardon, examining Magistrate for the court-martial of Bolo Pasha, charged with having relations with the enemy, after examining the Levantine suspect for two hours decided that, although he had been ill, his condition would permit his transfer to prison. A private ambulance conveyed him to Fresne jail, where he was placed in a hospital cell.

It is now said Bolo Pasha received $1,600,000 from the Deutsche Bank. In the transfer the sum was divided into several parts, passing through a number of hands before it finally reached a New York bank. By that time all traces of its origin had been lost.

Wrapped in blankets, his face covered with a white cloth, Bolo Pasha was carried on a stretcher from his room in the Grand Hotel, being taken out by way of the baggage elevator. As he was borne through the door a crowd of about 2,000 persons, which had collected when it became known that he had been arrested, gathered around the ambulance, shouting: "Death to the traitor! Throw him into the Seine! Kill him!"

Before the prisoner was transferred to Fresne Prison, Captain Bouchardon questioned him as to his identity, as is usual in such cases, and then read to him a telegram from Ambassador Jusserand at Washington. Bolo, drawing himself up from his couch, cried: "It is false! It is false!"

The prisoner appealed to the Police Inspectors for a respite of two days before being taken to prison. This was refused. Bolo then resisted all attempts to get him dressed. He was finally rolled up in blankets and carried on a stretcher to the ambulance. He is confined in the infirmary at Fresne in a cell near that in which Editor Almereyda of the Bonnet Rouge died.

American Banks Reported Involved.

No further official information has been given out as to the contents of the cablegrams from the United States concerning the activities of Bolo Pasha, but the Matin says the messages contained the results of the investigation made by the American police in regard to various banks, and that financial institutions in New York and other cities were listed in connection with payments made on behalf of Bolo. The newspaper says that in 1916 more than 10,000,000 francs was paid by the Deutsche Bank of Berlin on behalf of Bolo, a great part of this sum being remitted to him by transfers to a French bank. The Matin adds that nine American banks figured in these transactions, and that the American police have been able to make out a list of names of persons in America to whom checks were drawn by the Deutsche Bank, with the intention of making payment to secret German agents in France.

The Echo de Paris says twelve American banks were utilized in this manner, and that one of the intermediaries in the sending of money to Bolo was a relative of an official of the Imperial Bank of Germany, who is connected with a German-American bank.

Arrest Causes Feeling of Relief.

The arrest of Bolo and the disclosure of tangible evidence as to the source of enormous sums expended in France to corrupt the press and organize a propaganda of depression and discouragement among both civilians and soldiers have created a great sensation, but at the same time a feeling of relief that the scandal which has been clouding France for many months was on the point of being cleared up.

POPE MAY ASK ENTENTE'S TERMS

Geneva Hears He Will Offer Teuton Replies as a Basis for Discussion.

ACT NOW, SAYS KUEHLMANN

Issue of Peace or Continued Slaughter Rests with the Allies, He Asserts.

PARIS, Sept. 29.—A dispatch to the Temps from Geneva says that Pope Benedict, in transmitting to the Entente Allies the replies received from the Central Powers to his peace proposals, will set forth in an accompanying note the theory that Germany and Austria have accepted a basis of negotiations satisfactory to the Allies, and will ask the Allies to state their conditions.

Another Temps dispatch points out what the correspondent regards as fresh German manoeuvres to create a division among the Entente Allies. He quotes a person in the German diplomatic service as having stated recently:

"The war henceforth can lead to nothing but a triumph for Great Britain and its American and Japanese allies. The interest of France is well understood, would be to exploit the need for peace which manifests itself in Germany. She would thus succeed in getting back part of Lorraine, if not all of Alsace and Lorraine, providing Germany was allowed to round out her territories in the direction of Russia."

Peace Ready with Foes, Says Kuehlmann.

BERLIN, Saturday, Sept. 29, via London, (delayed.)—In concluding his speech before the Reichstag Main Committee Dr. Kühlmann, the Foreign Secretary, said:

"The Papal note has once again brought the nations of Europe to a parting of the ways, and once again the possibility has been created before beginning the Winter campaign to march forward toward the reconstruction of a new Europe, wherein each nation, though bleeding from deep wounds, may bear an unsullied shield.

"It now lies with Germany's enemies to prove whether they also have scented the breath of this new spirit, and the next few weeks will settle the great question of whether friend and enemy, each out of respect for a powerfully armed opponent, will sheathe the bloody sword or continue to call for a brazen decision by arms.

"A united Germany never can be beaten. Our unity in questions of high policy such as are embodied in our reply to the Pope is complete and the fact that this has been brought about on the basis of a clear and sincere peace program gives it double effect. Thus, the German nation, in this serious hour of fate, stands strong, but not arrogantly, quietly, prepared for battle as ever but also prepared to co-operate toward a realization of the world's peace on earth."

QUESTIONS SILENCE POLICY.

Berlin Tageblatt Not Sure Terms of Peace Should Be Hid.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 30, (via London.)—The statement spread abroad by the foreign newspapers, and especially the French press, that the German Government had directed a second note concerning Belgium to the Vatican and Mr. Asquith's latest speech has had decided influence on the session of the Reichstag. At an Executive Committee the Chancellor and the Foreign Secretary, Dr. Kühlmann, made short but very significant speeches. These have not yet been made public in full; but the Chancellor's speech or what is known of it [illegible] hint at information regarding [illegible] that was probably impressive to all the [illegible]

It is significant that, despite the rather meagre outline of the Chancellor's speech, the papers on the whole seem to be satisfied with it, making [illegible] Asquith's speech and the impudent invention of another German note to the Pope shows them that at present, when the enemy is again in a hysterical convulsion, it is no use to argue with him."

It is in that spirit also that the papers hail the Chancellor's remark "that the German Government could not possibly

BRITISH TAKE TURK GENERAL AND ARMY; ITALIANS BEGIN NEW DRIVE, CAPTURE 1,400; HAIG'S MEN CONFIDENT, FACING BIG EVENTS

Big Stroke by British Army in Flanders Forecast by Washington, Which Expects Foe's Retirement

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Military men in Washington believe that when the veil of secrecy now concealing Haig's new offensive in Flanders is lifted news of British gains of great strategic value will be announced from London.

The most recent disclosure of the activities of the British Army indicated that a great movement generally east of Ypres was being undertaken toward the Ghent triangle. While it is not expected that the present offensive will give Ghent to the British, it is confidently believed here that when the press correspondents are again permitted to send reports on results the British will be found in possession of an important new position toward the Thourout-Roulers-Courtrai line.

The central point of the British offensive is believed to be Roulers. This is the middle point in the base of an isosceles triangle extending eastward from the Thourout-Roulers-Courtrai line, tapering toward Ghent. That the Germans, although fighting hard, are prepared for the worst in this sector has been indicated in several ways. As long ago as Sept. 4 THE NEW YORK TIMES published a dispatch to the effect that Paris had heard that the Germans were evicting civilians in West Flanders back to the Courtrai-Roulers-Thourout line, and it was suggested then that another German retirement, similar to the last in France, was in order.

Yesterday word reached Washington from a source thought trustworthy that the Germans were removing the textile looms and machinery from the Belgian mills in Roubaix and Tourcoing, and that machines which could not be removed and transported were being destroyed with hammers or dynamite. Why the Germans should so ruthlessly destroy these valuable looms and this machinery if they did not expect to give way before the Haig offensive is not explained.

It was suggested here tonight that, in view of the information that the Germans were dealing ruthlessly with Belgian textile machinery, part of Haig's drive was toward Lille. Whatever his objective, there is no discounting the fact, it is believed, that important military projects are in progress along the British front in Flanders.

Heavy Gunfire Prevails Along the Lines—German Assaults at Ypres Fail.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRITISH FIELD HEADQUARTERS, Saturday, Sept. 29, (via Paris, Sept. 30.)—Never before have I found conditions so favorable on the British front as they appeared this week. A fortnight ago London began to show restlessness at the suspended movement east of Ypres, and a portion of the press was demanding an explanation from Field Marshal Haig. He gave it in the action which began on the Menin Road on the 20th.

The effect of that and other favorable developments turned London optimistic, but on the battle front there is a quite solid confidence that will not be changed by the ups and downs of the British offensive. There is no underestimation of the German Army, but among officers and men alike exists the calm assurance that the enemy calls arrogance. They feel that they have Fritz's measure at last; that they have learned all his tricks and adapted the best of them to their own use. Before they go into action nowadays every detail is rehearsed over and over again. Not only every squad, but every man knows exactly what he is to do. The barrage is timed to the minute, and the troops have learned that feature of the offensive so thoroughly that they make the fullest use of its protection with minimum danger to themselves.

I saw one division headquarters field war vaudeville, including the following features:

Almost immediately overhead captive balloons were observing the Boche lines, about four miles distant. The German guns were firing at the balloons, and several black splotches left by the bursting shells were always visible, and the sound of shrapnel falling to the earth was plainly audible. A German airplane suddenly came out of the northeast and attacked one balloon with a machine gun, bringing it down, the pilot dropping in a parachute and escaping unhurt. The British anti-aircraft guns opened fire promptly, but the German got away.

Meanwhile the sports, including polo and baseball, were not interrupted. Today, a short distance behind the hottest portions of the line, thousands of men who may take part in tomorrow's attack will dawn, and who know it, enjoy the Saturday sports as light-heartedly as if they were an old-time London week-end. And, indeed, the war has settled down into business. The novelties and surprises have all been exploited or exposed, the possibilities of military st...

REPEL COUNTERATTACKS

Air Squadrons Again Raid Pola Naval Base and Depots in Nabresina Region.

ROME, Sept. 30.—In another powerful drive the Italians have captured the high ground to the south of Podlaca and southeast of Madoni, in the Isonzo sector. The official announcement of this by the War Office reports also the capture of 1,400 prisoners. The text of the statement reads:

By a sudden bold action we improved our position toward the southeastern edge of Bainsizza Plateau, capturing some high ground south of Podlaca and southeast of Madoni. We also captured forty-nine officers and 1,360 men.

Subsequently violent attacks, accompanied by a heavy bombardment, were repulsed and the positions maintained.

Friday night and Saturday fresh attempts to dislodge us from the positions we had occupied between the saddle of the Dol and the northern slopes of Monte San Gabriele failed completely. Eighty-six prisoners, including six officers, were taken.

On the remainder of the front there was considerable artillery activity, and numerous patrol actions took place.

Air fighting was very brisk on the whole Julian front. Our air squadrons yesterday bombarded enemy depots at Berie, northeast of Nabresina, and last night military works of the fortress of Pola with excellent results. The reaction of the enemy was vigorous everywhere. One of our machines has not returned. Two enemy airplanes were brought down in aerial combat in the neighborhood of Monfalcone and east of Ternova.

VIENNA, Sept. 30, (via London; British Admiralty, per Wireless Press.)—The official report from Austrian headquarters tonight reads:

A detachment of our naval planes sought out the Josis Airship Works near Ancona. An airship shed was hit, and an airship therein exploded, causing flames to leap up 150 meters. One of our naval plane squadrons dropped bombs during the night on Palmanova, causing a large fire in the fortress.

Isonzo Front—There were lively engagements yesterday at Monte San Gabriele. After several small attacks, which were immediately repulsed, the Italians attacked yesterday morning our positions on Monte San Gabriele. This attack also was repulsed. Since last evening Monte San Gabriele, as well as the southern portion of Bainsizza Plateau, has been subjected to continuous and heavy artillery fire and mine throwing.

Artillery and Supplies Given Up—Another Column from Bagdad Captures Supply Train.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—A British official report concerning the operations in Mesopotamia announces the capture Friday of Mushaid Ridge, (about sixty miles northwest of Bagdad, on the River Euphrates,) in the region of Ramadie, from the south, east, and west, and continued the attack Saturday, the enemy everywhere surrendering. The captures by the British include guns, ammunition, and several thousands of prisoners, including Ahmed Bey and his staff. The report of Major Gen. Frederick S. Maude, commander of the expedition, says:

After an advance Thursday night we attacked the enemy's advanced position at Mushaid, four miles east of Ramadie, early Friday morning. Mushaid Ridge was occupied with little difficulty. A column, continuing to advance, manoeuvred away from the river, attacking the Turks' main positions about Ramadie from the southeast, while our cavalry moved wide around to the west of Ramadie.

Fierce All-Day Battle.

A severe battle ensued, lasting throughout Friday. By nightfall our troops had carried the main positions and were encircling Ramadie from the east, southeast and south at a distance under two miles from the town. Our cavalry completed the land cordon west of Ramadie, while the Euphrates runs on the north side of the town. The enemy during the night attempted to break out westward, but was headed back by our cavalry.

Our troops resumed the attack vigorously Saturday at daybreak, with the result that at 9 o'clock in the morning the enemy was surrendering everywhere.

Included in our capture are guns, arms, ammunition stores, and equipment and also much other booty, several thousand prisoners, Ahmed Bey, the Turkish commander, and his staff.

The enemy was taken entirely by surprise, and practically the whole garrison of Ramadie fell into our hands. Our troops displayed great gallantry, determination, and endurance under the most difficult conditions.

During Thursday night another column moved out northeast of Bagdad after a sharp skirmish with a Turkish cavalry detachment, inflicting casualties and capturing four prisoners and 300 Turkish supply camels.

Heat Had Interrupted Operations.

Following the capture of Bagdad early in March last, General Maude pursued the Turks along the River Tigris, giving them no rest for thirty miles beyond the ancient capital of the Caliphs and among the booty that the enemy were forced to abandon in their precipitate retreat were the British guns taken when General Townshend was compelled to surrender at Kut-el-Amara.

In April the British arrived before the defenses of Istabulat, covering Samara, head of the railroad line from Bagdad. These positions were stormed and on April 24 Samara itself was occupied. Beyond this point there is a break in the railroad line for eighty-five miles to Hoeul, (ancient Nineveh,) where it resumes its interrupted way toward Constantinople.

Meanwhile the Turks, having been reinforced, had massed an army corps, the Thirteenth—on the [illegible] a tributary of the Tigris, [illegible] empties from the northwest [illegible] south of Samara. The Turkish commander evidently had planned to cut off the force occupying Samara by a flank attack and drive them [illegible] but General Maude [illegible] and [illegible] his cavalry pursued the [illegible] the Jebel Hamrin [illegible] has been reported from Teutonic and Turkish sources Field Marshal von Mackensen will attempt to recapture with a powerful German-Ottoman army being concentrated for that purpose.

Since that time [illegible]

General Maude was appointed to succeed General Nixon after the latter's removal from the command of the Mesopotamian army, one of his qualifications being his great knowledge of the country, and it was due to his brilliant strategy and energy that Bagdad was captured.

General Maude is 58 years old and a veteran of several wars. In 1914, before the outbreak of the present war, he was on the General Staff at the British War Office. He saw service in the Sudan and participated in the advance on Kimberley. In the South African war he took part in the operations at Poplar Grove, in the Orange Free State, and in the Transvaal near Johannesburg, Pretoria, Bel, Diamond Hill, and Belfast. He received the Queen's medal with six clasps for his services in Cape Colony. He is said to have been wounded five times in the present war.

General Maude is well known in Canada, having served from 1901 to 1904 as the Military Secretary to the Governor General. In 1905 he was the private secretary to the Secretary of State for War in England. He was Assistant Director of the Territorial Forces in the War Office from 1909 to 1912 and was then appointed to the General Staff.

SWEDEN TO SEIZE FATS; CUTS WEIGHT OF SHOES

Lard Scarcely Obtainable and Butter Prices Soaring—Ban on Fashionable Shoes.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 30.—The Government has issued a decree, effective on Oct. 4, for the expropriation of all animal fats except butter and all so-called technical fats and oils. The order is of continuing operation, covering the specified products in existence and also those produced in the future. The last few weeks have been marked by a great shortage of fats. Lard has almost disappeared from the market, and when obtainable at all is very expensive. Butter is scarce at very high prices.

A decree effective on Oct. 8 limits the height of shoes to eighteen centimeters, thus stopping the manufacture of fashionable high boots for women. The order also provides that all cow hides weighing more than sixteen kilograms may be used only for the manufacture of sole leather.

AIRMEN BOMB GERMAN BASES DAY AND NIGHT

Gontrode Airdrome Is Set Afire and Billets, Dumps, and Railways Are British Targets.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—An offical statement on army aerial operations says:

"On Saturday the weather was unfavorable for aerial work. A number of valuable photographs were taken, however, and observations carried out for the artillery.

"Bombing of the enemy's airdromes, billets, dumps, and railways continued vigorously by day and night. The Gontrode airdrome was the chief target, and a large fire was caused there. One of the enemy's balloon sheds was also set on fire and destroyed by a naval pilot.

"The enemy s fighting machines were not very active yesterday. There were comparatively few combats. One German machine was brought down. Two of ours are missing."

Another successful aerial attack on German military establishments in Belgium was reported today by the Admiralty. The statement follows:

"On the afternoon of Sept. 29 a bombing raid was carried out by naval aircraft on the St. Denis western airdrome. Many bombs were dropped. Direct hits were observed. A bomb exploded among five machines lined up by the airdrome. All our machines returned."

LAUD RED CROSS LIBERALITY

French Appreciative of $1,000,000 Gift to Soldiers' Families.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—Announcing the decision of the War Council of the American Red Cross to appropriate $1,000,000 for needy families of French soldiers at the front, the Havas Agency says:

"Wishing to commemorate the ancient Franco-American fraternity of arms illustrated by Lafayette and Rochambeau, the War Council of the American Red Cross has decided to consecrate 5,000,000 francs to ameliorate the lot of necessitous families of men at the front. Part will be remitted to the military authorities for the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates who, wounded or sick, have suffered most from the war. The greater part will be reserved, however, for distribution by Presidents of general councils and prefects. The plan was developed under the direction and with the approbation of Major Gen. Pershing. Foreign Minister Ribot warmly thanked Major Murphy, who informed him of the Red Cross plan.

"French public opinion will highly appreciate this further precious evidence of American solidarity, and will be particularly touched by the reserving of a special part of this magnificent liberality for invaded and devastated districts."

Major James H. Perkins, former Executive Manager of the National City Bank of New York, who has been Director of the department of military affairs of the Red Cross, has been appointed Commissioner for the American Red Cross in France.

KERENSKY ACCEPTS DRASTIC PROGRAM

Agrees to Moscow Proposals for Halting Sedition and Strengthening Army.

MINISTERS WANT COALITION

Bolsheviks Hold Lenine in Seclusion, Fearing to Bring Him Out Lest He Be Seized.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 30.—It is announced that Premier Kerensky has agreed to a program submitted to him by M. Buryskin and M. Tratyakoff, Moscow leaders, who at present have no political affiliations, which has been approved by the business, banking, and manufacturing interests. The principal points of this program are the immediate adoption of measures to put the army and navy in fighting condition, the merciless suppression of anarchy, absolute independence of Cabinet Ministers from parties, and the taking of measures to guarantee the selection of the members of the Constituent Assembly which is to decide on Russia's future form of government in such a way that the assembly will express the free will of the Russian people.

The formation of a new coalition Cabinet is reported to be the decision of Premier Kerensky.

Socialist ex-Ministers, including M. Skobeleff, Labor, and M. Yaroudny, Justice, speaking at the Congress, urged the necessity of a coalition Cabinet as the only means of saving Russia. M. Skobeleff declared: "The Government which expresses in its activites the need of all Russia will best serve the interest of the revolution." M. Avksentieff likewise appealed to the Bolsheviki element to submit to this plan.

The session of the Congress, fixed for noon today, was postponed until 3 o'clock in the evening, while anti-Kerensky elements held a mass meeting in an effort to agree upon a program The sessions of the Congress will be continued into next week.

Commenting on the statement made by Premier Kerensky in his speech to the Democratic Congress that a German fleet was menacing Petrograd from the Gulf of Finland, the newspapers say every means of repulsing the enemy is at hand, but that it remains to be seen whether the revolution has impaired the fighting power of the Russian fleet.

"It is not the first time that Germany has menaced us from the Baltic," says the Novoe Vremya. "It is vitally important for the enemy to seize some part of the coast for a landing base, but in 1914, 1915, and 1916 our fleet was on the watch and all attempts were unsucessful. Let us hope the revolution has strengthened rather than weakened the fighting power of our fleet."

The Bolsheviks have abandoned the idea of having Nikolai Lenine, the radical pacifist agitator, appear as their representative in the Congress on account of the firm determination of the Government to discover and arrest him. After Premier Kerensky had given the order to bring Lenine into court it was learned that at the time the Democratic Congress opened he and his associate, Zinovieff, were in the vicinity of the Alexandra Theatre awaiting the results of the Bolshevik leaders to procure from the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates a guarantee of their immunity. This guarantee was refused on the ground that the presence of Lenine might lead to disorders which would result in the premature closing of the Congress. The Bolshevik plan was therefore abandoned.

Official announcement is made that the Military Counterespionage Bureau made many arrests last Thursday, particularly among foreigners suspected of participating in an espionage organization masquerading as a commercial bureau. An inquiry has been begun, but no details have been divulged.

Many arrests also have been made in Petrograd of Finnish agents who were purchasing arms. The newspapers say the arrests revealed mysterious arrangements for the arming of Finland, and that some purchases were made openly in the streets and cafés, and even at arsenals.

Disorders are reported at Tambov, 300 miles southeast of Moscow, and at Kozlov, in Crimea, where mobs led by former criminal exiles to Siberia burned and destroyed much grain and other property. The towns are under martial law, and troops have been sent from Moscow.

Rioting also is reported in Turkestan, whither troops have been dispatched.

RAISES BRITISH ARMY PAY.

Cabinet Also Increases That of Men in Naval Service.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The Cabinet has increased the army and navy pay, although the increases are small compared with the American and Colonial standards. "Proficiency pay," at the rate of from threepence to sixpence a day, will be given after six months' service, instead of two years, as under the present army rule. There is also an increase of a penny a day for each year of war service. The present compulsory allotment of sixpence daily for privates and tenpence for sergeants is abolished.

The navy increase is at about the same rate, and the allowances to the army and navy now amount to £22,00.,000 yearly. The increases involve £50,000,000 for the first year.

investigation by order of Aristide Briand, former Premier, for several months, but all the threads in the affair led to Switzerland and the United States, both of which countries then were neutral and unable to give facilities for an investigation as to the banking operations in the case.

Cashed Three Big German Checks.

It was affirmed that Bolo Pasha had cashed three checks for 735,000 marks, each drawn by a German bank on Swiss and Italian banks in 1915. The voyage he made to New York in February, 1916, also was the object of an inquiry, but no proofs were obtainable of the sources of the funds which he disposed of at the time, notably 5,500,000 francs, which were turned over to the Journal of Paris as a loan without interest, and in consideration of participation in the profits of the Journal this loan was to be reimbursed only upon the liquidation of the stock company owning the newspaper.

The Swiss bank refused absolutely to disclose any of its records, but at the time Premier Briand ordered a judicial inquiry it was known that Bolo Pasha was in intimate and constant relations with the former Khedive of Egypt, who was living in Switzerland. The British Legation at Berne, which was watching the former Khedive, furnished evidence that established a connection between Bolo Pasha and German agents through the former Khedive.

One Paris newspaper asserts that it has evidence that Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, former German Foreign Secretary, passed upon the proposition to use Bolo Pasha in propaganda in France and agreed that the experiment was worth 5,000,000 francs. The arrest of M. Duval and Miguel Almereyda of the Bonnet Rouge drew attention more closely to the Bolo Pasha affair, which soon afterward became public.

The accused still being at liberty and his supposed effort to control the journal not having been followed by any change in the policy of that paper, which had been steadfastly patriotic since the outbreak of the war, the case could not be cleared up.

One result of Bolo's arrest will be the sequestration of all his property in France.

According to the Journal, Bolo's condition is most grave, as he is suffering from a violent attack of uraemia. Injections of serum and inhalation of oxygen are said to have produced little effect, and his physicians are doubtful of his recovery.

In La Victoire Gustave Hervé says, in commenting on the Bolo case: "I know our poilus. I can hear them saying already that 'it is for rottenness like that we are risking our lives.'" M. Hervé assures them that there are only a dozen or two knaves, and that they are fighting, not for these men, but for a great cause.

One Lawyer for Bolo and Turmel.

Jacques Bonzon, Bolo's legal adviser, has sent a letter to Premier Painlevé, complaining that he has been unable to deliver to the Premier the letter written after his arrest by Bolo, urging that his case be expedited. M. Bonzon says the Premier's Secretary asked him if he desired to see M. Painlevé in regard to a political affair, to which he replied that he was there as a lawyer to make a demand on the supreme head of military justice. M. Bonzon's letter says: "Undoubtedly, Mr. Minister, you will soon see what disagreeable consequences your refusal can have."

The prison authorities have been ordered to treat Bolo Pasha as an ordinary prisoner, without either privileges or unusual severity. M. Bonzon called at the prison today to confer with Bolo, but Captain Bouchardon told him he could not converse with the prisoner except in the presence of the Warden or of some person designated by the Captain.

Legal sparring continues in the case of Deputy Louis Turmel, whose affairs are being investigated to determine the source of large sums of money in his possession. M. Bonzon, who is his attorney as well as Bolo Pasha's, insists that his case be joined with that of an usher in the Chamber of Deputies charged by Turmel with extracting 2,000 francs from an envelope found in his locker. M. Gilbert, the examining Magistrate, has steadfastly declined to join the two cases. Turmel and Bonzon have been unable to find a bailiff to serve notice on the Magistrate in a proceeding for the denial of justice. They have threatened, therefore, to take the case before the Parliamentary Commission which decided upon the demand for permission to prosecute the Deputy.

BRITISH THROW BACK THREE YPRES ASSAULTS

Break Up German Offensive, Preceded by Drumfire, Near Tower Hamlets.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Heavy German bombardments in the Ypres sector, followed by three infantry attacks, are reported in Field Marshal Haig's statement from Headquarters in France tonight. All of the attacks were repulsed.

The text of the statement follows:

Early this morning the enemy heavily bombarded our positions between Tower Hamlets and Polygon Wood and subsequently launched three attacks, all of which were repulsed with loss. The first was delivered south of Reutelbeke. It was beaten off by our fire before reaching our positions. Shortly afterward hostile infantry advanced astride the Ypres-Menin road under cover of a thick smoke barrage and accompanied by Flammenwerfer detachments and succeeded temporarily in driving in one of our advanced posts. An immediate counterattack recaptured the post, together with a number of prisoners and machine guns.

Later in the morning an attempt to repeat this attack was broken up by our artillery.

The enemy raided our trenches early in the morning east of Loos, and captured one of our garrison. As the raiders were attempting to withdraw across No Man's Land they were pursued and attacked. Our man was recaptured, and a number of the enemy were killed and taken prisoners.

The hostile artillery was active today along our front between Ypres-Comines Canal and Zonnebeke, and in the Nieuport sector. Our own artillery activity on the battle front continued.

The text of the afternoon report follows:

The artillery was active during the night on both sides in the battle area. A concentration of German infantry east of Polygon Wood was dispersed. East of Loos a hostile bombing attack was driven off. We captured a few prisoners as a result of patrol encounters south of Lens.

German Aisne Assaults Fail.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—A heavy artillery action has been in progress on both sides of the Meuse. (Verdun sector,) while on the Aisne front the German infantry attacked the French trenches, but were repulsed with considerable losses. The official communication issued by the War Office tonight also reports air raids around Dunkirk, where several civilians were killed.

The text of the statement reads:

On the Aisne front, after artillery preparation, three enemy detachments attempted this morning to reach our trenches north of Berry-au-Bac. One German group, which succeeded in entering an advanced element of our lines, was driven out immediately. At the other points our fire arrested the advance of the enemy, who suffered considerable losses.

A very spirited artillery action was maintained all day on both banks of the Meuse, particularly north of Hill 344 and near the Bois le Chaume.

German airplanes bombed the region of Dunkirk on Sept. 27, 28, and 29. The first two bombardments caused only material damage. The last, which was particularly violent, caused several casualties among the civilian population. Two German machines were brought down by our pilots on Sept. 29.

On the night of Sept. 28-29 our airplanes bombed the station at Colmar and enemy establishments north of Soissons, dropping 4,000 kilos [8,800 pounds] of projectiles with success.

Following is this afternoon's official communication:

There was very active artillery fighting in the region of the Panthéon, Hurtebise, and Craonne, and also on the right bank of the Meuse. We repulsed an enemy attack east of Auberive. We penetrated the German lines west of Cornillet and brought back war materials. On the remainder of the front the night was quiet.

BERLIN, Sept. 30, (via London.)—Heavy artillery fighting on the Belgian Coast and along the northern end of the Western front is reported in today's official communication. The British undertook reconnoitring expeditions at many points. The statement follows:

The visibility being poor, the activity of all our armies was less than on preceding days. In Flanders the artillery duel was severe on the coast and, in the evening, from the Yser as far as the Comines-Ypres Canal. Advancing British reconnoitring parties were repulsed at many points.

Before Verdun there was only moderate activity, apart from a temporary increase in the firing.

ROME, Sept. 29.—The first American war bulletin issued at Washington is published in all the papers with large heads and is greeted with great enthusiasm as a good omen for the beginning of Winter.

Italy always has had immense admiration for, and faith in, the great Republic as the fountainhead of democracy, of which so many of her children have become loyal citizens. This faith has been amply justified by the results already accomplished, alike military, economic, and political.

make further public statements concerning Belgium and other peace aims and could not commit itself at this early stage to a solution of problems of the highest importance because "any such public statement would only confuse the nation and compromise its interests."

The Tageblatt calls attention to the repeated use of the word "public" in the Chancellor's speech, which it believes was intentional and meant that what in the circumstances was publicly impossible might well be done privately.

The Tageblatt, however, quotes other reasons, too, why no further special mention of Belgium was necessary. It says that the Chancellor in the note replying to the Papal message accepted the principle of peace without annexation as proclaimed in the Reichstag peace resolution, and that that ought to suffice at present.

"The main thing today," it goes on, "is to make the Entente Governments see the necessity of sitting down at a green table, but as these Governments are still talking very big this will be impossible until large circles of their people realize the madness of further fighting."

The paper, however, does not refrain from arguing with Dr. Michaelis whether, after all, there was a "technical necessity" for this silence on Belgium because sometimes the ancient mercantile and diplomatic trick to say as little as possible might lead to or confirm misunderstandings. The Tageblatt would have preferred to have had the Chancellor again clearly outline Germany's peace conditions.

FRENCH IN VICTORY LEAGUE.

"No Peace with Assassins," Motto of New Oranization.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—A new organization called the "Republican League for National Defense," with Antonin Dubost, President of the Senate; Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, and Léon Bourgeois, Minister of State, as Honorary Presidents, is causing widespread comment in the press. The keynote program of the league appears to be "no peace with assassins before our victory and their chastisement," and the direct object of the organization is to fight against all tendencies toward a premature and inconclusive peace.

The membership of the league includes representatives of all political parties, from Conservatives to Liberals of the Radical and Radical Socialist Parties, and comprises even some former extremists, such as Leopold Lacour, who was once a contributor to the anarchist organ Libertaire.

Other conspicuous members are A. Aulard, the historian of the Revolution; Emilie Boutroux, the philosopher; Ferdinand Buisson, President of the League of the Rights of Man; Ernest Lavisse, the Academician; Maurice Barres, the Academician, and Deputy Stephen Pichon, former Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The Conservative organs see in the league "an organisation against treason," while the Socialist organ Humanité inquires whether it is intended to support the proposition for annexation to the left bank of the Rhine. Members of the league say that what they propose is "to denounce every cowardly argument, every sophistry, and everything depressing and equivocal which, under the color of humanitarianism, would betray humanity."

PUSHES PAN-GERMANISM.

Official Support for Agitation Aginst Reichstag Majority.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 30.—The Catholic Germania of Berlin prints new evidence of official support of the pan-German agitation against the Reichstag majority and a peace without annexation. It reproduces a circular sent with the approval of the head of the State railways in the Breslau district to all railway officials and employes, calling upon them to sign a monster petition circulated by a conservative newspaper in Breslau and headed: "An Appeal Aginst the Reichstag Majority."

The Deutsche Tageszeitung can see no reason for excitement over the part of the Moderates in the agitation. The Government employes, it says, are not ordered, but merely recommended by their superiors, to sign the petition, and are not subjected to any improper official pressure.

Advance in Albania Continues.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—A bulletin issued by the War Office today concerning the operations on the Macedonian front shows that the Italians, with Essad Pacha's Albanians, are continuing the eastward progress through Albania. It reads:

Eastern Theatre, Sept. 29.—Between Lakes Pressa and Ochrida the enemy carried out two attacks which were vigorously repulsed.

On the extreme left Albanian contingents, driving back Austrian posts, occupied the village of Cesme, in the upper valley of the Skumbi.

Between Lake Ochrida and the Cerna the artillery was more active.

DOUBLE-7 COMMITTEE DROPPED BY GERMANY

Dissolution of Much-Heralded Body Is a Blow to Parliamentary Reform.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 30.—The "Double Seven" Committee of the Reichstag and Bundesrat, under the Chairmanship of the Imperial Chancellor, has been dissolved and the event draws attention to how little is left of the widely hailed constitutional reform movement in Germany.

The committee, the establishment of which was proclaimed by the Liberals and the Chancellor as a great step forward on the path to constitutional progress and as a permanent intermediary between the Government and Parliament, dissolved itself and disappears, the members considering their mission finished with approval of the German reply to the Pope.

Of the work of the Reichstag's Constitutional Committee, the only part found acceptable at the time by the Government was a resolution calling for the division of overgrown Reichstag districts and a measure concerning this. Minor Reichstag reforms adding thirty more seats was promised for this session of the Reichstag, but it has not yet appeared.

The Constitutional Committee at the present session adopted by the narrowest of majorities a resolution in favor of annulling the clause in the Imperial Constitution, forbidding one person from sitting simultaneously in the Reichstag and Bundesrat.

Earlier declarations of Chancellor Michaelis and his subordinates leave little doubt that the resolution will meet with slight grace at their hands if adopted by the Reichstag. But, according to German newspapers, the indications are that the Reichstag itself will scarcely accept the recommendation of the committee, as the majority in the committee does not represent the majority in the Reichstag, owing to the large number of Centrists and National Liberals opposed to the resolution.

AIR RAID BY RUSSIANS.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 30.—The following announcement was made today by the War Office:

On the northern, western, southwestern, and Rumanian fronts there were fusillades and reconnoissances. On the Caucasian front there were no events of importance.

On the southwestern front 360 pounds of bombs were dropped in various places by our light airplanes and 1,800 pounds by our Muromets machines on enemy troops and transports. Near the village of Ohlenovka a German airplane was brought down by one of our Muromets machines. On the same front one of our aviators, Lieutenant Dobrukhotoff, brought down an enemy airplane in flames.

A report received on Sept. 29 shows that forty-three men were saved from the torpedo boat Ochotnik (the sinking of which by a mine in the Baltic was announced on Friday.) All the officers and men voluntarily remaining on the ship perished.

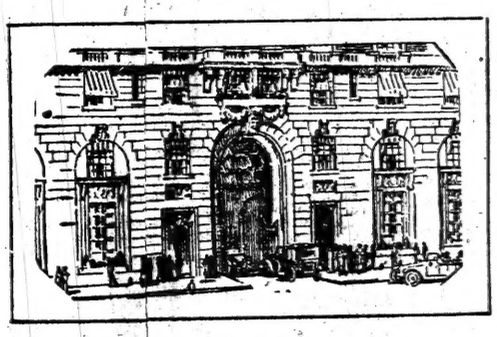
THE MANSIONS
Forty Seventh Street — Park-Madison Avenues — Forty Eighth Street
—with a distinctive restaurant service under RITZ-CARLTON direction



Through an Apartment
By The Particular Person
By kind permission of The New York Evening Post.

TO reach an apartment in "The Mansions," you pass through the Gardens. There's no hardship in that! Bits of shrubbery, green lawns, plants are to make them the sort of place one likes to linger in. Never mind—there are new wonders within. Step into the private elevator that is to lead to your particular apartment. Uniformed concierges stationed about will be on hand to direct the visitor.

Mansion-like Spaciousness

When the elevator stops, and you step out, you are within the private vestibule that leads to a spacious foyer. No crowding of arriving guests! Roomy closets conveniently await discarded wraps and hats. Dining room, living room, and library adjoin in triple glory. How spacious, how high the ceilings, how cleverly planned the details. No disfiguring radiators to mar the precious space. They are concealed within the wall in the deep window-space. Floors of "herring-bone" design, walls panelled and painted, generous windows smiling out upon the quiet of Park Avenue—what more could one ask? Why, a fireplace, of course! A room without a fireplace is like a home without a hostess—there's something lacking. And so here in dining and living room and main chamber there is a great open fireplace just waiting for the roaring log, or quiet coal fire that is to give an air of welcome and hospitality.

Perfect Domestic Facilities

Out through one side of the foyer are the pantry, kitchen, scullery, and servants' rooms. Those quarters will inspire efficiency, there's never a doubt. White tiled walls in the kitchen, and cement sealed floors for cleanliness, a great store room, and plenty of closet space for order. What a model cuisine that invites! An individual laundry is an added pleasure.

Out from the other side of the foyer, one finds the master chambers. Pass along the noble hallway. There is nothing mean in height or width. What a picture gallery that would make for the connoisseur. A favorite picture here, a priceless painting there, and the hallway would suddenly assume an enviable air of interest and importance.

Comforts and Conveniences

Open this door. Do not mistake that for a room. Its size is deceiving. It is just one of those comfortable closets that abound to delight the heart of the housewife, or the woman with a generous wardrobe. The chambers themselves might have been transplanted from some palace, they are so handsome and dignified. All about are the convenient touches that are to delight the occupants—fixtures for the reading lamp, private bath with sunken tub, and needlepoint shower. Even electric lights in the roomy closets have not been forgotten. A study at one end of the hall gives a private corner for the delightful reading hour, or forms a guest room instead.

There are apartments with a Southern exposure to be had. People who are in search of a city home that is to be as imposing as a mansion should see "The Mansions."

TAMMANY CHARGES FALSE, SAYS MAYOR

With Controller Prendergast, He Gives His Side of Seaside Park Purchases.

EVADES NO RESPONSIBILITY

But Says Dreamland and Rockaway Park Deals Were Started by Tammany Officials.

Mayor Mitchel and Controller Prendergast, through the Fusion Committee of 1917, issued a statement yesterday giving in detail the administration's side of the city's purchase of two seaside parks, Rockaway and Dreamland. The Mayor and the Controller asserted that for the last two years Tammany Hall and its agents have been conducting a campaign of falsification concerning the matter, and that since the opening of the present municipal campaign District Attorney Swann has employed the influence and machinery of his office in the interest of his own candidacy and that of his associates on the Tammany ticket. The statement says:

We are very glad to proclaim full responsibility for all we did in the acquisition of these two parks. We know, and the District Attorney knows, they were necessary to the proper development of the city, and, while we cannot claim credit for beginning the movement for the parks, we do claim that we did all we could in responding to the popular demand for ocean beach parks, while at the same time taking unusual measures to safeguard the financial interests of the city.

Although the responsibility of Mayor Mitchel and Controller Prendergast was limited to their action as members of committees of the Board of Estimate in recommending the purchase of these park lands, and in later voting for their condemnation, Tammany has sought to make it appear that these two officers have been responsible in some way for the price paid by the city for Rockaway Park and the price which the city may be called upon to pay for Dreamland.

That this suggestion is false is known to Tammany and its agents and particularly to the District Attorney, who is a lawyer, and who knows that we had no more to do with the price than he had. The facts concerning the acquisition of these parks loom up so large that they cannot be hidden by even the mass of misstatements heaped up by Tammany in its two-year campaign of falsification.

Tammany Started Rockaway.

The Mayor and the Controller sum up the record of the purchases as it is shown in the public records and documents which are open to public inspection, as follows:

Rockaway Park was put on the public map and condemnation proceeding instituted by a Tammany Board of Estimate three years before we were elected to the Board.

Condemnation proceedings, again instituted in 1911, were conducted by the Corporation Counsel appointed by Mayor William J. Gaynor, who was elected on the Tammany ticket.

The Corporation Counsel made no appeal from the award of $1,250,000, as confirmed by the Supreme Court, and the award was paid.

The New York American, now trying to discredit the park acquisition, claimed blatantly and proudly in 1909 that it was the originator of Rockaway Park, and fought then for an appropriation $250,000 larger than the final award.

Frank L. Dowling, Tammany candidate for President of the Borough of Manhattan, introduced the resolution calling for the purchase of Dreamland Park, and, as a result of his resolution and the act of a Tammany Board of Aldermen, the Board of Estimate voted to acquire the park.

Mayor Mitchel's Corporation Counsel vigorously opposed an award of $1,014,000 for the Dreamland property, and succeeded in having the confirmation of the award reversed by a higher court.

Not one cent has ever been paid to Senator Reynolds or any other owner of the Dreamland Park property, and Mayor Mitchel's Corporation Counsel is still fighting before a new commission in condemnation to procure the lowest possible award.

Despite all these facts of record, says the statement, Tammany has attempted to make it appear that both parks were purchased as the result of close affiliations between members of the Fusion Board of Estimate and a "real estate gang." According to the Mayor and the Controller, the movement for the acquisition of the present Rockaway Park and its official beginning in 1904, when George B. McClellan was Mayor. Public hearings were held upon the matter, and among those who appeard in support of the proposition was Frank L. Dowling, then an Alderman. The Legislature authorized the Board of Estimate to appropriate $2,500,000 for the purchase of the land. The park plan, according to the statement, had the support of the leading citizens and humanitarian organizations of the city.

When the matter came before the Board of Estimate in 1907, it is set forth, Controller Metz was its leading champion, and the Tammany Board voted unanimously to buy Rockaway Park. A resolution changing the map of the city to provide for the park, including the lands later acquired from the Neponsit Realty Company, was approved by Mayor McClellan and the Corporation Counsel was instructed to start condemnation proceedings. In September, 1907, the Tammany Board of Estimate attempted to buy the land at private sale, but another resolution was adopted providing for condemnation. Because of the financial panic of 1907, it is set forth, the board directed the Corporation Counsel to take no further action until 1909.

Questioned the Title.

When the matter came before the board again in that year, it is stated, Controller Metz fought to the last to have the city buy the park. The purchase was again halted by the question of Government title. Bird S. Coler, then Borough President of Brooklyn, raised the question, claiming that the title was vested in the United States Government. The matter was then referred to the Corporation Counsel, with instructions to report upon the question of title. The statement says:

"We have recited this lengthy record in order to demonstrate the amount of public interest in this proceeding, the support which the purchase of Rockaway Park had from distinguished and public spirited citizens, and the readiness evinced by a Tammany administration to acquire this land.

The statement then recites editorials and news articles from The New York American to show that William R. Hearst was in favor of the plan. The matter came before the Fusion Board of Estimate on Oct. 7, 1910. The Corporation Counsel reported that there was no claim to the title of the land on the part of the Federal, State, or City Governments. In the Board of Aldermen, Mr. Dowling introduced a resolution which led to the purchase of both Rockaway and Dreamland Parks. In July, 1911, the corporate stock budget committee, consisting of Controller Prendergast, President Mitchel of the Board of Aldermen, and Borough President McAneny, rendered a report favoring the acquisition of both parks.

On July 27 the Rockaway Park special committee recommended the acquisition of the park and the acceptance of options tendered by the Neponsit Realty Company. One of the options was for the sale of the land at private sale for $1,225,000 and the other was an option to sell to the city at $1,225,000 in case any award might exceed that sum. The Board of Estimate accepted the options and, with Mayor Gaynor presiding, directed the Corporation Counsel to begin condemnation proceedings. The Board, it is set forth, did not in any way attempt to fix a price for the Rockaway property, but that was left for decision by condemnation commissioners. The board did take precautions, however, to assure through options, that the price would not be excessive. The statements continue:

The options were in a sum less than any one of three independent appraisals made by well-known real estate men for Jacob A. Riis of the Parks and Playgrounds Association. The appraisers and the valuations they placed on the property were as follows:

Joseph P. Day—$5,000 an acre.
Robert E. Simon—$5,000 an acre.
John C. Fitzgerald—$5,500 an acre.

The District Attorney has charged that these appraisals obtained by Mr. Riis were paid for by the Neponsit Realty Company, owner of the property.

[illegible] that one of the [illegible] was [illegible] by the man [illegible] to [illegible] Mr. Fitzgerald, [illegible] Mr. Simon, both [illegible] they never received one cent from the Neponsit Realty Company or any one else for the appraisals made for Mr. Riis. They assert also that they have never received their appraisals, but still stand by them.

The action upon the award in condemnation accepted by the Board of Estimate on the recommendation of the special committee was at a rate per acre slightly less than the lowest appraisal made. The committee, therefore, felt that its extraordinary step in securing this option for the owners gave a peculiar protection to the city. Obviously, if the commission in condemnation should make an award at a rate higher than $5,000 an acre, the city would be in a position to exercise the option at $1,225,000, that is, at the rate of $5,000 per acre. If, on the other hand, the commission in condemnation should make an award at a rate less than $5,000, the city would stand upon the award and benefit by the difference between that and the option price.

All in Commission's Hands.

On Dec. 11, 1914, the Estimate Board adopted new resolutions definitely placing the acquisition of Rockaway Park under Chapter 456 of the Laws of 1906, and requesting the Corporation Counsel to apply for the appointment of a Condemnation Commission. The board on Jan. 23, 1912, adopted rule and damage maps for the condemnation proceedings. The statement then says:

"This closed all contact of the Fusion members of the Board of Estimate with the Rockaway Park proceeding. From that time forward it was conducted as a condemnation proceeding in the office of Mayor Gaynor's Corporation Counsel, Archibald R. Watson. No member of the Board of Estimate at any time had any responsibility with respect to the price paid by the city for this property. The responsibility was that of the Supreme Court and the Commission in Condemnation appointed by the Supreme Court. That commission was appointed by Justice Marean on March 7, 1912, and consisted of William S. Cogswell, Clarence Edwards, and John J. Goodwin.

"While neither Mr. Mitchel, Mr. Prendergast, nor Mr. McAneny had any responsibility for the conduct of the condemnation proceeding, or any contact therewith, or anything to do with the determination of price, we are convinced that the Corporation Counsel who conducted the proceeding discharged his duty well and in the public interest.

"We assume full responsibility for the decision to acquire this park. While responsibility for the price paid rests not upon us but upon the Commission in Condemnation appointed by the Supreme Court, we are of the opinion that the price awarded by that commission was fair and reasonable and that the transaction has been throughout creditable to the city."

Regarding the purchase of Dreamland Park, the Mayor and the Controller set forth at length all the proceedings and declare that a Tammany Board of Aldermen first asked that the city make the purchase, following a popular demand for its purchase in 1911. As in the case of Rockaway Park, it is stated that the purchase price was fixed through condemnation proceedings and that after the land had been appraised by the city's real estate experts the Fusion Board of Estimate had nothing to do with its acquisition. The proceeding, it is stated, was initiated by Mayor Gaynor's Corporation Counsel, Mr. Watson, and carried over into the present administration. Final award of $1,014,002.32 was made on April 5, 1915. The award was confirmed by Justice Blackmar and the city took an appeal, and the award was set aside. The Appellate Division on March 17, 1916, reversed the lower court and sent the matter back to a new commission in condemnation for a rehearing. The statement says that the claims of the owners are now being vigorously contested. The statement adds that not one cent has yet been paid out of the city treasury to the owners of the land and concludes:

"In place of receiving any special consideration at the hands of Fusion members of the Board of Estimate, Mr. Reynolds and his associates have received treatment more harsh than has been customarily accorded to claimants in other condemnation proceedings.

How utterly untrue have been the statements published concerning our connection with the above proceedings, how outrageously the office of District Attorney of the County of New York has been prostituted to political ends, is demonstrated by the foregoing recital of facts, all of which are of record and incontestable."

As an appendix to the Mayor's and Controller's statement, George McAneny added the following:

"I was, at the time, a member of the Board of Estimate committee recommending the acquisition of the seabeach parks, serving with the Mayor and the Controller. I have read their statement of the record in the matter, with which I am equally familiar, and concur in it wholly. There was no dissent from the general public approval when the Board of Estimate took the action necessary to secure these properties. There has been no dissent since. With the prices paid, or to be paid for them, or with the methods of payment, neither the Board nor any of its members had anything whatever to do."

SENATOR PRAISES MITCHEL.

Owen, a Democratic Leader, Denounces Tammany's Fight for Spoils

Robert L. Owen, Democrat, Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency of the United States Senate, who attended the dinner in honor of the Japanese Commission at the Waldorf on Saturday night, said yesterday, before leaving for Washington, that he had been deeply impressed at the ovation given to Mayor Mitchel by the diners, when they cheered six minutes for the Mayor. He said he was much disappointed that the Mayor did not receive an indorsement in the Republican primary.

"Mayor Mitchel has given New York a notable administration," he said. "No scandal with any foundation has appeared since he took office. It is beyond my understanding how New York could consent to his defeat now that he has so courageously consented to run again for Mayor.

"Certainly Mayor Mitchel could not enter the Democratic primaries, considering the autocratic control of the Tammany machine. Mayor Mitchel, believing in Democratic principles, holds the opinion that public offices are public trusts and not the spoils of organized political Hessians.

"The town and the country know of his early advocacy of preparedness, that he has served in two Plattsburg camps; that he called the Mayors of seventy-five of the country's greatest cities in a convention in St. Louis, where a strong resolution was passed in favor of universal military service and a great navy; that he has taken the most vigorous and efficient steps to protect New York against seditious plots; that he organized the Home Defense League, which is taken as a model by many of the cities throughout the country—in short, that he typifies the finest type of Americanism in our war with Germany.

"I have been impressed with the character of those especially hostile to him—those who hate the British and our other allies—those who urge pacifist measures, and those who sympathize with our enemies. From a national standpoint New York City ought to have a Mayor distinguished, first of all, for his stalwart, strenuous Americanism. It will be a distinct blow at patriotism to defeat such a man after four years of such exceptionally honorable service."

MAYOR POINTS OUT CAMPAIGN ISSUES

"Common Morality and Loyalty to This Country" the Principal Ones, He Says.

MUST UPHOLD GOVERNMENT

Keep Graft, Waste, and Politics Out of City Departments, He Urges in Grace M. E. Church.

"The issues of the campaign will be two," Mayor Mitchel said last night in an address at Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, in West 104th Street. "The first is common morality, or, in other words, whether this city will reinstitute graft and waste and politics in all city departments, which are now conducted on a clean, efficient, and nonpartisan basis. The second issue is loyalty to this country, and that is whether the people of this city want an administration which will support and uphold the National Government by every means in its power, or whether this city wants an administration which will seek opportunities, covertly or openly, to embarrass the Federal Government.

"The City of New York is not a part of the Federal Government nor is it charged directly with duties to the Federal Government," Mayor Mitchel added, "but, as the greatest city of the country, thousands of opportunities arise of necessity which enable the city either to support and strengthen the National Government, or to embarrass and hamper it. This administration has done everything in its power to support the National Administration. The issue is whether the people of this city wish to maintain in power a loyal administration, or to experiment with one of another type."

Mayor Mitchel said that the practice of Tammany, in regards to schools, hospitals, and child-caring institutions, had been to appropriate certain sums and to allow them to spend without supervision or control, so that large percentages of the public money went for graft or mere waste.

"This administration has proceeded upon a different principle," he said.

"We have not considered that our duty was done when certain sums of money was appropriated. On the contrary, we have watched the spending of the money and we have seen to it that every dollar was wisely spent and that the people of this city got a full return for their money.

"We found, when we began to investigate the city's charitable institutions, that the children in the feebleminded institution on Randall's Island were badly cared for. At a surprise visit one day, the controller and myself found twenty or thirty babies lying unattended in the broiling sun, covered with flies and suffering an extreme degree of neglect. Further investigation revealed numerous abuses, the burden of which was eventually borne by these youthful wards of the city. This neglect of the city's children was found here and elsewhere could be speedily traced to the fact that the rule had been previously to appropriate money and to consider the city's duty toward its children done.

"We have discarded that rule. We now not only appropriate the money, but we see to it that it is spent properly and effectively. The care of children in this and other institutions of the city has been completely changed, and children who were, before this administration entered office, starved, neglected, and kept in misery, are now well cared for and kindly treated. The question now before this city is whether the people

JEWISH RELIEF FUND GETS $500,000 IN DAY

Contributions Made on Yom Kippur Will Be Sent to Sufferers in War Zones.

The American Jewish Relief Committee announced yesterday that on Yom Kippur, or the Jewish Day of Atonement, about $500,000 had been contributed for the alleviation of distress among the 3,000,000 Jews left homeless by the war. A statement of thanks was given out by Jacob Billikopf, Executive Director of the Relief Committee. It read:

"The Yom Kippur appeal this year was made possible through the generosity of Sam C. Lamport, who, without solicitation, offered to pay the entire cost of the campaign. Mr. Lamport has for a number of years been affiliated with Jewish charities in this city and has given up much of his time and resources to the cause of the suffering Jews in Europe.

"The $10,000,000 asked of the Jews of this country is purely for life-saving. It will provide only the barest necessities for the 3,000,000 Jews in the warring regions. Their sons are in the trenches, leaving behind only the aged and infirm, the women and children.

"If every Jew in this country assumed his duty of giving according to his means, if necessary giving up luxuries for the cause, the $10,000,000 sought could be raised overnight. The Yom Kippur million asked for should be contributed without fail. It is highly important that it be realized, and those synagogues that failed in the task on Yom Kippur will have the opportunity to make the appeal today."

At a meeting of 600 members of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies at the home of Sam A. Lewisohn at Ardsley yesterday, Mr. Lewisohn and Felix M. Warburg urged all Jews to contribute all they could to the Jewish War Relief Fund and to the charities at home. Mr. Warburg made a plea for the institutions represented by the federation.

"There remains one duty that is less fashionable, but nevertheless crying, and that is to look after the people who are left at home," said Mr. Warburg. "We are charged with the duty to provide the charitable institutions with sufficient funds to enable them to maintain. We have raised about $700,000 more than the institutions ever had at their disposal, and still, in consequence of the war, we are not able to provide properly what the institutions need. Such an increase could never have been foreseen, and it is most fortunate that the federation has been established."

Mr. Lewisohn asked for volunteers for the committees to do social work, saying, "Let us all do our 'bit' in every sense."

Northcliffe to Speak at Rochester.

The building is valued at $1,000,000 and is the gift of George Eastman of Rochester. Other speakers will be Harry A. Wheeler of Chicago, formerly President of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Sir George E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce of Ottawa, Canada, and Newcomb Carlton, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

URGES MITCHEL TO RUN.

Henry A. Wise Wood Calls It an Important Patriotic Duty.

Henry A. Wise Wood sent Mayor Mitchel a telegram from Gloucester, Mass., yesterday urging him to run independently for Mayor. The telegram read, in part:

"It is unthinkable that you should permit a political accident to overthrow the superb governmental structure which you have built up for the City of New York. It is your duty instead and that of every decent citizen regardless of his party to fight for its preservation from destruction by the dark forces of disloyalty and sedition which are striving to throw the governmental influence of our city into the scales of war against the United States and its allies."

WANTS TO NAME PERKINS.

Mayor Asks for Power to Appoint Market Commissioner.

Mayor Mitchel sent a letter yesterday to Governor Whitman asking him to urge the Senate when the Legislature meets today to amend the Palisades Park bill so that George W. Perkins could become Market Commissioner of the city. The Mayor pointed out that the bill creating a Market Department for the city specifies that the Mayor should appoint the Commissioner, and he said it was his desire to appoint Mr. Perkins. The letter read:

"I understand the Legislature convenes again on Monday. May I ask you to urge the Senate to an immediate decision in the matter of amending the Palisades Park bill so that Mr. Perkins could become Market Commissioner of this city? You were good enough to recommend to the Legislature when it convened in special session that this amendment be made. The necessary bill was introduced in the Assembly and passed by a practically unanimous vote.

"The bill creating a Market Department for this city specifies that the Mayor should appoint the Commissioner. It is my desire to appoint Mr. Perkins, and as you have acquiesced in this view and the Assembly has concurred by an overwhelming vote, I feel that I am justified in urging that the Senate War Committee report the bill out, so that a definite decision may be had that I may know whether or not I can make the appointment I have suggested or must appoint someone else."

"Oh, Boy" Plays at Camp Devens.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 30.—The first theatrical performance given at the United States military training quarters at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., took place this evening at 7 o'clock when the entire "Oh, Boy" musical comedy company from the Wilbur Theatre, Boston, went through their complete performance as a free offering to the men in training. Comstock and Elliott, producers of "Oh, Boy," and the Messrs. Shubert, Directors of the Wilbur Theatre, were responsible for the free performance.

10,000 WILL URGE THE MAYOR TO RUN

Republican organization, is growing so fast that it is hard work to crystallize it in the various boroughs. That is being done, however, as rapidly as possible."

Mr. Outerbridge said yesterday that he is being swamped with requests from citizens who want to take part in today's mass meeting at City Hall. The proposition, he added, was receiving remarkable support from all classes.

Court proceedings to have Mr. Bennett's name substituted for that of the Mayor on the Republican election ballots, as a result of the overturning of the primary results, will be begun this morning in Part I. of the Supreme Court. Abraham S. Gilbert, representing the Mayor, and Theodore F. Baylor, on behalf of Mr. Bennett, had a conference at the Bar Association yesterday and agreed upon a form of order to be presented to the court. Both sides admitted that there was a possibility of the matter not being definitely settled for at least two weeks. They said it was doubtful if a Supreme Court Justice had the power to order the substitution of Mr. Bennett's name on the ballots and thus have it certified by the Board of Elections and the Secretary of State.

Both sides admitted that it might be necessary for every election district board to reconvene and certify to the new count of ballots before it would be legal for the election officials to act. If these boards reconvene it is expected that at least two weeks will elapse before the change is made. In this event considerable confusion will arise, as the corrected ballots must be sent to France in time for the New York soldiers there to vote on Election Day. Should the local district boards refuse to make the change without an official recanvass of the votes, it may take even longer than two weeks before the matter is definitely settled. Mr. Bennett reiterated yesterday that he would fight to a finish and would enter into no bargain, deal, or compromise whatever to withdraw from the ticket. He said:

"The situation as to the candidates at the coming Mayoralty election has now been fixed. Without taking into account the frauds committed at the recent primary, which deprived me of at least 5,000 votes, I have been nominated by a direct primary as the candidate of the Republican Party by a clear majority of 611, after a deliberately organized plan to count me out. Nevertheless, certain of the newspapers continue to state that delegations will wait upon me to urge me to retire from the field. It is time that these rumors were set at rest.

"I entered into this contest for the reason that I believed that the time had come when the City of New York should be governed for the interest of the citizens solely, and not for the benefit of large corporations and other special and financial interests in the city. I, therefore, made my appeal for the nomination directly to the people. The people have responded to my appeal and have nominated me by a substantial majority in the primary, at which more votes were cast than at any previous Republican primary. I accept this vote of confidence which the people have given me, and shall remain in the fight for decent government until the close of the polls on Nov. 6 as the candidate of the plain people.

"Mr. Mitchel, nevertheless, desires to run as an assistant to Tammany Hall he has that right under the election law. I am no longer interested in Mr. Mitchel as an opponent. He has given us the most lawless administration which the city has ever had, and the people have repudiated him. If he persists in running he will receive less votes than the Socialist candidate. My fight from now on is against Mr. Hylan. Before leaving Mr. Mitchel to his fate, however, I desire to refer to one matter. He states that if he runs he will make the fight upon the issue of 'Americanism.'

Approves of President's Course.

"My ancestors on my father's side were Quakers and settled in Pennsylvania over 200 years ago. My original American ancestor on my mother's side landed in Connecticut over 250 years ago, and ancestors of mine have served in the American Army during the Revolution, the War of 1812, and the civil war. That fact, however, makes me no better and no worse than any other true American citizen, whether he has just been recently naturalized or whether he is the son of a naturalized father, and is no reason why any one should vote for or against me.

"In the present crisis I approve of the President's course in backing up the honor and rights of the American people and in his stand in using the forces of the army and navy to protect and further the principles of democracy upon which this country was founded.

"When I was in the Legislature I voted for a bill making it a crime for a merchant to try to cover defects in his goods by using the American flag as a trademark. Mr. Mitchel apparently has no scruples on this point, but is trying to use the American flag in a vain attempt to cover up the defects in his administration. After I am elected Mayor I shall not use the American flag in order to enable me to tap the wires of business rivals of any financial interest, nor to cover up an attempt to make the State pay for real estate claimed to be owned by real estate speculators when it is really owned by the State of New York, as was done by the Mayor in the Rockaway Point fortification matter. Nor during the campaign shall I solicit any votes by the use of the American flag.

"I shall appeal to the voters upon the platform that it is time that the city was delivered from the rule of the financial interests and administered solely for the benefit of the citizens, and also upon the ground that my record shows that I am better qualified for the position of Mayor than any of my opponents. I expect to open headquarters on this week. I have already started to organize my Campaign Committee, and expect to have at least ten volunteer workers in every election district in the city. The campaign for my election starts today. If Mr. Mitchel does not run there will be three candidates. If Mr. Mitchel runs there will be four candidates. But it is immaterial who or how many candidates there are. I shall carry every borough in the City of New York. It is time now for everyone who believes in good government to take a stand. Those newspapers that hereafter support Mr. Mitchel will in reality be working for the election of Mr. Hylan, the Tammany candidate. Those persons and those organizations which hereafter support Mr. Mitchel will in reality be supporting Mr. Hylan, the Tammany candidate.

"I appealed to the plain people at the primary and received my nomination from them. I shall make my appeal from now on to the plain people and am confident that, having been nominated by the people, that nomination will be ratified at the polls on Nov. 6. This statement should set at rest all rumors that I shall retire in favor of anybody or enter into any bargain, deal or compromise whatever. In a few days I shall announce my platform."

More Revolts from Tammany.

The City Democracy, which was organized to fight Murphy's control of Tammany Hall and help in the re-election of Mayor Mitchel, announced yesterday that revolts from the Tammany organization by Tammany district captains and workers was continuing. Jacob Wals, who was elected last week as Vice President of the Shenandoah Club, the regular Tammany Hall club of the Thirteenth Assembly District, has withdrawn entirely from Tammany Hall and become the leader of the City Democracy in that district. Mr. Wals, it was announced, has established headquarters at St. Nicholas Avenue and 125th Street and has enrolled more than 150 Democrats of his section in his organization. Many of these were elected with him as members of the Tammany County Committee of the district last week. In announcing his withdrawal from Tammany Hall, Mr. Wals said:

"This is no time for politics. People today are not machine politicians. I have always been an organization Democrat and have tried to do my best to promote the best interests of the Democratic Party in New York City.

"Dark and sinister influences existing in New York have forced home to every New York man, woman, and child an issue which I had hoped and prayed would not be forced upon us. This issue is today the cleanest cut of any ever presented to the people of New York. It is simply a question if the groups of wicked citizens banded together to thwart and destroy what President Wilson and America are doing will achieve the foul purpose of showing the Central Powers in Europe that America is divided against itself and that these influences, operating through machine politicians, can punish a man who has stood for America and secure control of the leading city of the world. This issue is bigger than any ever presented before in any campaign to the people of New York. It is bigger than New York City. It is a national issue. It is an issue commending itself to every loyal and decent city in the whole United States."

Besides the meeting at Cooper Union tomorrow night, the City Democracy will hold another meeting at the same place on Wednesday night to ratify its nominations. This will take the form of a city convention, and delegations representing every Assembly district in the city will be present.

At the Fusion Committee headquarters, 244 Madison Avenue, the Irish Fusion Committee held a meeting yesterday and indorsed Mayor Mitchel. Colonel Charles Healy was elected Chairman and Colonel Edward Duffy, formerly of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, Chairman of the Executive Committee. A complete organization with a Vice Chairman will be formed in every borough. Mayor Mitchel, who was at Fusion headquarters, addressed the meeting. The Fusion Platforms Committee will meet this afternoon at the Park Avenue Hotel to draft its platform. Tonight at the same place the whole committee will meet to adopt it.

BUY a Liberty Bond, or die in bondage! "Shell out" to your country, or be shelled out by the enemy! Across the angry sea, Civilization is being crucified in the blood that runs warm and at the tears that run dry. To ravished Belgium, France in travail and England at bay, our ships are gleaming Galleons of Hope, but, man! it takes your dollars to float them over there.

Buy a Liberty Bond! Stand behind our Soldiers and Sailors who are standing in front of you. Patriotism is born in the mind, not in the mouth, and it isn't what the heart feels, but what the hand does, that counts in winning the war. Buy a Liberty Bond, and knock "schrecklichkeit" higher'n a kite!

COAL PRICES CUT

Limits Retailer's Margin So Cost to Consumer Cannot Exceed Average in July Last.

ORDER EFFECTIVE TODAY

Covers Both Anthracite and Bituminous, Also Coke, and Provides for Penalties.

MINE PRICES READJUSTED

Anthracite Pea Size Reduced, Some Exceptional Bituminous Classes Raised.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Retail prices of anthracite and bituminous coal and of coke will come under Government supervision tomorrow. Thereafter all dealers, except where bona fide contracts are in force, must sell under regulations set down by the Fuel Administration in co-operation with the Federal Trade Commission.

Dr. H. A. Garfield, the Fuel Administrator, made public tonight the plan under which the prices to the consumer were to be fixed, and sounded a warning that stern penalties would be imposed in the event of fraud on the part of any dealer.

The general plan is to permit dealers to add to their retail gross margins for the year 1915, when the industry was in a more normal condition, 30 per cent., if the total arrived at by this process does not exceed the retail margin for July, 1917. Sworn statements concerning such margins (the difference between the average cost to the dealer and the price at which they sell to the consumer) must be submitted. Fraud in statements of this kind will be rigorously prosecuted. Special provisions are made for price fixing by dealers who were not in business in 1915.

Dr. Garfield will endeavor to work out this scheme in co-operation with State Fuel Administrators and local committees which will be named. He has said that he would be very much surprised if there were not a considerable decrease in the price of coal to the consumer, and some decrease is assured by the fact that the margin allowed cannot be in excess of that applicable to coal sales in July, 1917, when prices were lower than they are today.

It is believed also that a considerable number of the sworn statements concerning dealers' margins will show a figure under the margin generally accepted by coal dealers in July. The plan was worked out carefully by Dr. Garfield and the Federal Trade Commission before the allowance of 30 per cent. was agreed upon. It does not represent a profit of 30 per cent. to the dealer over the 1915 figure, as costs are higher.

Dr. Garfield selected 1915 as a normal year because the coal shortage which resulted in continued rises in prices did not begin until 1916. The additional 30 per cent. is allowed to cover the increase in the retailers' cost of doing business, which has increased substantially during the last two years. Prices already fixed by the Government for coal at the mouth of the mine are near those charged in 1915, and with the jobbers' charge now limited to 25 cents a ton and the cost of transportation not materially increased, the consumer in every comunity should be able to get coal of any description approximately at the price he paid in 1915.

Some Mine Prices Raised.

The announcement of the retail price-fixing plan was but one of the important developments today, as Dr. Garfield reduced the price of pea size anthracite coal mined in Pennsylvania 60 cents a ton, free on board the mine. Increases in prices fixed by President Wilson for bituminous coal at the mine in a score of so-called "outlying districts" also were granted. These do not affect the prices fixed by the President for the principal bituminous fields, but were permitted at this time in "exceptional" cases, as many operators had stated that production could not be continued unless relief were given, and that a large number of the small mines already had shut down.

These new scales are subject to revision, but the fact that Dr. Garfield had granted substantial increases in these outlying districts was hailed with enthusiasm by the larger operators of bituminous coal, who saw in it the first step to a general increase in prices of from 30 to 50 cents a ton. An increase of about that amount, it has been held, would be necessary to meet the demand for wage increases. It was reported today that Dr. Garfield might agree to a compromise increase of wages to miners.

The reduction in anthracite pea coal mined in Pennsylvania districts will have a vital effect on the retail prices to be fixed under the Garfield plan. Here are the figures for this coal, free on board, mines:

| | New Price. | Former Price. |
|---|---|---|
| White ash | $3.40 | $4.00 |
| Red ash | 3.50 | 4.10 |
| Lykens Valley | 3.75 | 4.35 |

Producers to whom a differential of not to exceed 75 cents was permitted in the President's order of Aug. 23 may continue to add the same differential. Tons are to rate at 2,240 pounds.

A detailed statement of the plan for fixing retail prices, which included definitions of retail dealers and retail gross margins, was issued by Mr. Garfield.

Other important points in the ruling of the Fuel Administrator are:

Details of Retail Price Fixing.

On and after the first day of October, 1917, in making prices and sales to consumers, the retail gross margin (as hereinafter defined) added by any retail dealer to the average cost (determined as hereinafter provided) of any size or grade of coal or coke for each class of business shall not exceed the average gross margin added by such dealer for the same size or grade for each class of business during the calendar year 1915, plus 30 per cent. of said retail gross margin for the calendar year 1915; provided, however, that the retail gross margin added by any retail dealer shall in no case exceed the average added by such dealer for the same size, grade, and class of business during July, 1917.

By this order retailers are required to fix a retail gross margin which may be less than, but shall not in any instance exceed, the margin added by them in 1915, plus 30 per cent. thereof.

REPORTS.—From retail dealers in various sections of the country monthly reports will be required by the United States Fuel Administrator and the Federal Trade Commission on blanks to be supplied for this purpose. On these forms the dealers must return the cost of coal or coke received by them, their sales prices, and their gross margins. Whenever necessary, supplementary reports on accounting forms provided therefor will be required to show the actual cost of conducting the retail business and other information which may be required. The accounting forms will contain directions as to returning them to the State Fuel Administrators.

RETAIL DEALERS BEGINNING BUSINESS SINCE 1915.—Any persons, firms, corporations, or associations not engaged in the retail coal or coke business before Jan. 1, 1916, and consequently unable to determine their real gross margin during 1915 by the method above described, shall return at once to the Fuel Administrator at Washington, D. C., a sworn statement of the average retail gross margin which they have received during the period they have been in business on each grade and size of coal and coke and for each class of business. Pending investigation and action upon this information, such retail dealers may continue to sell coal or coke at a gross margin not to exceed the average gross margin which they have received during said period. Provided, however, that the above-mentioned increase of 30 per cent. shall not be added by them to such margin, and that the retail gross margin added by such persons, firms, corporations, or associations to their average cost of coal or coak shall not in any case exceed the average retail gross margin added by them for the same size, grade and class of business during the month of July, 1917.

RETAILERS' CONTRACTS WITH CONSUMERS.—Contracts between a retail dealer and a consumer made before this date are not affected by this order, provided that such contracts are bona fide in character and enforceable at law.

In making deliveries of coal or coke under such contracts a retail dealer will be expected to supply only the minimum amount of any coal or coke which under the terms thereof he can be obliged to deliver, unless and until he has met the reasonable requirements of other consumers desiring to purchase coal or coke from such dealer.

Immediate investigation into the cost of local distribution and the profits of retail dealers will be made by the State Fuel Administrators acting through local committees and with the aid of accountants. The State Fuel Administrators will be charged with the duty of recommending to the Fuel Administrator remedies for all abuses and avoidable hardships arising under the operation of this order.

Typical Mine Increases.

The increases granted in outlying bituminous coal districts were grouped in nineteen subdivisions. In most instances the increase in the price which may be charged for "run of mine" coal was the important feature of the readjustment; in a few cases the increases were for prepared sizes and slackings or screenings.

Here are a few typical examples of increases on run of mine coal, the prices quoted being respectively those now granted by Dr. Garfield and the prices fixed recently by Presidential proclamation:

Lafayette, Ray, Clay, Platte, and Lynn Counties, Missouri—$3.15, $2.70.

Appanoose, Wayne, Boone, and Webster Counties, Iowa—$3.15, $2.70.

Thin vein seams at Hartford, Midland, Hackett, Greenwood, and Deming, Arkansas—$3.05, $2.65.

Le Flor and Haskell Counties, Oklahoma—$3.50, $3.05.

Okmulgee and Tulsa Counties, Oklahoma—$3.10, $3.05.

Coal County, Oklahoma—$3.30, $3.05.

Pittsburgh and Latimer Counties, Oklahoma—$3.50, $1.05.

Bituminous coal mined in Walsenberg, Cannon City, Rout Garfield, Gunnison, Durango, Mesa, Pitkin, Montezuma, Delta, Montrose, and Rio Blanca districts, Colorado—$3, $2.45.

Bituminous coal mined in Trinidad District, Colorado—$2.75, $2.45.

Big seam district, Alabama—$2.15, $1.90.

Pratt, Jasper, Jefferson, Nickle Plate, and Coal City districts, Alabama—$2.35, $2.15.

Cahaba, Black Creek, Brookwood, and Blue Creek districts, Alabama—$2.55, $2.40.

Coronca district, Alabama—$2.85, $2.40.

Small block field district, Indiana—$2.95, (Brazil block) $1.95, (price for State fixed by President's proclamation.)

A few changes not in the above table quote the same figures as fixed by the President for run of mine, but change prices for other sizes.

Announcement was made also that smithing coal and cannel coal might be sold until further order at the prevailing market rate.

Hair Cutting Prices Going Up.

The barbers of Washington Heights have joined the ranks of the price-raisers. THE TIMES, in a letter signed "Boss Barbers of Washington Heights," has been asked to announce a new schedule of prices. The boss barbers announce that they have raised the price of hair cutting to 35 cents for adults and 25 cents for children "on account of the high cost of material and the raise in salaries to the men."

Ship and Factory Whistles Also to Join Today in Call to the People for Funds.

CELEBRATION AT CITY HALL

Local Committees Prepare for Big Drive to Help Raise $3,000,000,000 in 27 Days.

This is the first day of the second Liberty Loan campaign, and it was heralded in New York City soon after midnight by the ringing of many church bells, and will receive the formal indorsement of Mayor Mitchel at a great reception on the steps of City Hall at 10 o'clock this morning. At the same hour the ships in the harbor that have whistles and are flying the flags of nations fighting for civilization will blow them, and there will be a greeting from the sirens of hundreds of factories.

The managers of the campaign in New York and the Second Federal Reserve District said last night that it would be no easy job to raise their share of the $3,000,000,000 in the twenty-seven days allotted to the task, and they have accordingly completed a program that will summon all the forces of patriotism available. From the moment Mayor Mitchel starts his address to the gathering of bond salesmen, campaign managers Liberty Loan posters put up last night by a "Flying Squad," headed by Guy Emerson, head of the Publicity Department of the New York Liberty Loan Committee. Mr. Emerson and his assistants, some of them well-known business men, left the headquarters at 120 Broadway in automobiles at 6 o'clock last evening to put up the colorful appeals that will decorate the billboards, stations of the elevated railroad, buildings, and store windows during the progress of the campaign. Last night, too, 1,000,000 other posters, subscription blanks, and literature for use in the "drive" were mailed from the New York office to bankers, business men, manufacturers, and others in the Second Federal District, so that there might be no delay in taking the subscriptions.

At 8 o'clock this afternoon hundreds of women will meet at the Chamber of Commerce under the leadership of Mrs. John T. Pratt, Chairman of the Women's Executive Committee for the Second Federal Reserve District, and Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, Chairman of the New York District, to make final plans for their part in the campaign.

Some time during the week, there will be a great parade of sailors and marines through the city in behalf of the loan; on Oct. 16 there will be a mass meeting at Carnegie Hall, and on next Wednesday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon there will be a meeting of the representatives of more than 500 trade, civic, industrial, financial, labor, and patriotic organizations in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, to make arrangements for another parade on Oct. 24, officially designated as Liberty Loan Day throughout the nation.

In the meantime, every one of the 320,000 owners of automobiles in the State will be asked to display stickers urging subscriptions on the windshields of their cars at his railroad siding, yard, pocket, or trestle, when such coal or coke is received by him by rail."

M'ADOO STARTS ON BOND TOUR TODAY

ing extended data about the war, the reasons why America is taking part in it, and what Liberty bonds are, and why they are issued have been prepared for the use of school teachers, speakers, &c. More than one million copies of these books will be distributed, one of them being sent to every school teacher in the United States.

Mr. McAdoo's Appeal.

Secretary McAdoo's statement follows:

"For the purpose of equipping with arms, clothing, and food our gallant soldiers who have been called to the field; maintaining our navy and our valiant tars upon the high seas; providing the necessary means to pay the wages of our soldiers and sailors and, if the bill now pending in the Congress passes the monthly allowances for the support of their dependent families and to supply them with life insurance; constructing a great fleet of merchant vessels to maintain the line of communication with our brave troops in France, and to keep our commerce afloat upon the high seas in defiance of the German Kaiser and his submarines; creating a great fleet of airplanes, which will give complete supremacy in the air to the United States and the brave nations fighting with us against the German military menace; and for other necessary war purposes, the Congress of the United States has authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to sell to the American people bonds of the United States bearing 4 per cent. interest, with valuable tax exemptions, and convertible under certain conditions into other issues of United States bonds that may be authorized by the Congress. The official circular of the Treasury Department gives full details.

"There is now offered to the American people a new issue of $3,000,000,000 of bonds, to be known as the Second Liberty Loan. They will be issued in such denominations and upon such terms that every patriotic citizen will have an opportunity to assist the Government by lending his money upon the security of a United States Government bond.

Wants No Gifts.

"It is essential to the success of the war and to the support of our gallant troops that these loans shall not only be subscribed, but oversubscribed. No one is asked to donate or give his money to the Government, but every one is asked to lend his money to the Government. The loans will be repaid in full, with interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum.

"A Government bond is the safest investment in the world; it is as good as currency and yet better, because the Government bond bears interest and currency does not. No other investment compares with it for safety, ready convertibility into cash, and unquestioned availability as collateral security for loans in any bank in the United States.

"People by thousands ask the Treasury constantly how they can help the Government in this war. Through the purchase of Liberty bonds every one can help. No more patriotic duty can be performed by those who cannot actually fight upon the field of battle than to furnish the Government with the necessary money to enable it to equip our brave soldiers and sailors all that they require to make them strong for the fight and capable of winning a swift victory over our enemies.

"We fight, first of all, for America's vital rights, the right to the unmolested and unobstructed use of the high seas, so that the surplus products of our farms, our mines, and our factories may be carried into the harbors of every friendly nation in the world. Our welfare and prosperity as a people depend upon our right of peaceful intercourse with all the natoins of the earth. To abandon these rights by withdrawing our ships and commerce from the seas upon the order of a military despot in Europe would destroy prosperity and bring disaster and humiliation upon the American people.

"We fight to protect our citizens against assassination and murder upon the high seas while in the peaceful exercise of those rights demanded by international law and every instinct and dictate of humanity.

"We fight to preserve our democratic institutions and our sovereignty as a nation against the menace of a powerful and ruthless military autocracy headed by the German Kaiser, whose ambition is to dominate the world.

"We fight also for the noble ideal of universal democracy and liberty, the right of the smallest and weakest nations equally with the most powerful to live and to govern themselves according to the will of their own people.

"We fight for peace, for that just and lasting peace which agonised and tortured humanity craves and which not the sword nor the bayonet of a military despot but the supremacy of vindicated right alone can restore to a distracted world.

"To secure these ends I appeal to every man and woman who resides upon the soil of free America and enjoys the blessings of her priceless institutions to join the League of Patriots by purchasing a Liberty bond."

TRIS SPEAKER TO GET BOND 1.

McAdoo to Sell It to Ballplayer in Cleveland Today.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 30.—Secretary William G. McAdoo will open the second Liberty Loan campaign by hoisting the Liberty Loan flag on the public square here tomorrow morning and selling the first bond for $1,000 to Tris Speaker, outfielder of the Cleveland American League team.

Secretary McAdoo will then address campaign workers in the Chamber of Commerce. In the afternoon he will go to Toledo to open the campaign there.

Aid From the Orient

The most frequent complaint of merchants today concerns itself less with high prices than with scarcity of goods, both due to the shortage of labor. Even the housekeeper has her problem of satisfactory domestic help at big wages.

There is one solution of the labor problem that has received so far but superficial consideration, and this is the importation of alien labor, with especial reference to those willing and intelligent workers, the Chinese. With the overflowing 413,000,000 population of China, there could be spared enough laborers to meet our needs, and for their importation the present legal debarments could be suspended.

With recognition of the industry and frugality of the Chinese, these laws were framed along high protective tariff lines, so that our native labor might not be compelled in competition to change its old habits or form new ones, and that it might not be lost to union control. But the times involve sacrifices even from labor, and the more labor gives now the less it will have to give with the inevitable readjustment of wages.

The customers of the Harriman National Bank in every field of activity would be benefited by letting down the bars at this time. A higher class of labor would be elsewhere released for their service, and wages would be price-fixed by the law of supply and demand.

DEPTH BOMBS PROVE DEADLY TO U-BOATS

British Admiralty Describes Recent Instances Where They Have Been Effective.

ONE U-BOAT TORPEDOED

Mine Sweepers Locate the Submarines After They Have Been Sunk—Raiders Suffer Heavily.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Another series of striking reports of recent naval actions against German submarines, illustrative of the manner in which the U-boat menace is being met, has been given out by the Admiralty. The records are official and authenticated, but no dates are given.

The statement begins by reciting how a torpedo gunboat sighted a periscope six hundred yards away and turned ship so that the periscope was traveling in the opposite direction to that in which it was first seen. When at a distance of fifty yards the periscope disappeared, and the gunboat, altering its course, passed over the submarine. The impact of the collision was felt, and when the Captain estimated that the submarine was under the after part of his ship explosive charges were dropped astern. A seaplane reported patches of oil on the surface, and a mineswe-per found an obstruction on the bottom at this point.

A torpedo boat patrolling in the Atlantic found a steamer torpedoed and sinking. The survivors were rescued, and then the torpedo boat circled about the locality for more than an hour. Finally, a white patch of water was seen dead ahead. The torpedo boat dashed over the spot, grazed the submarine, and dropped three submarine bombs. Oil and air bubbles reeking of gasoline came to the surface, and the minesweeper found another obstruction here.

Submarine Sinks U-Boat.

The next encounter described in the statement was that of submarine against submarine. A British submarine sighted a German U-boat while both were on the surface. The British submarine dived and later picked up the enemy through the periscope. A torpedo, fired at 800 yards, caused a violent explosion in the German vessel. When the Britisher arose he found a patch of oil in which Germans were swimming. They said that they had been blown out through the conning tower and that their craft had been hit amidships, overturned and sunk.

A story characteristic of the minesweeper's spirit is next recited. A flotilla of sweepers was engaged in Western Channel waters when an explosion occurred between a pair of them, the wire net parting. When the sweeping wire was examined two mines were found entangled, one on the ship's side and the other just under the surface.

The slightest roll of the ship striking the mine's "whiskers" would have been sufficient to set off an annihilating charge. The officer in command, being responsible for the lives of the crew, ordered them to abandon the [illegible] senior officer with volunteers [illegible]ended the mine sweeper and cut the wire. The mines fell into the sea without exploding. The mines that were towed away gingerly by another ship.

The statement points out the value of the trawler, which hardly costs as much as one broadside from a cruiser. Life-saving is not involved in this service, but the courageous spirit of the sweepers is evident.

Merchant Guns Effective.

The training of mercantile marine officers in gunnery tactics is bearing fruit. A British merchantman was attacked by submarine gunfire from a distance of three miles. The shots were wild and she immediately replied. At the sixth and seventh rounds, smoke and flame burst from the forepart of the submarine which abandoned the chase.

Another ship sighted a periscope twenty yards off the beam. While swinging on a "hard ported helm" a torpedo passed the stern. A minute later a periscope appeared on the surface on the other side. A shot was fired, quickly followed by another and the submarine disappeared. The surface soon was covered with yellow oil.

The determination of the merchant marine is evidenced by the instance of an armed ship proceeding to Liverpool convoying one which was unarmed. A submarine was sighted at the same moment a torpedo struck the defensively armed vessel. The master ordered the ship abandoned, but he and the two gunners remained aboard. The unarmed ship fled, pursued by the submarine, whereupon the master opened fire from the sinking ship and forced the abandonment of the chase. The submarine returned and torpedoed the ship twice more. It then took the master and the gunners prisoners. Such instances as these have been investigated by a committee of the Board of Trade, shipping interests, and an Admiralty officer. Meritorious conduct has been brought to the attention of the King for award of honors.

IN WAR, SAYS T. R., NOT FOR DEMOCRACY

America Entered Conflict Because of Special Grievance, Germany's Aggression.

MUST FIGHT TO VICTORY

Anything Less Will Mean Renewal of War and on This Continent—Again Criticises La Follette.

JOHNSTOWN, Penn., Sept. 30.—"Germany has reduced savagery to a science, and this great war for the victorious peace of justice must go on until the German cancer is cut clean out of the world body," declared Theodore Roosevelt in an address he delivered here today at the Workingmen's Red Cross Sunday Celebration.

"We did not go to war to make democracy safe, and we did go to war because we had a special grievance," the Colonel continued. "We went to war because after two years, during which, with utter contempt of our protests, she had habitually and continually murdered our noncombatant men, women, and children on the high seas, Germany formally announced that she intended to pursue this course more ruthlessly and vigorously than ever.

"This was the special grievance because of which we went to war, and it was far more than an empty justification for going to war. As you know, my own belief is that we should have acted immediately after the sinking of the Lusitania. But, in any event, no self-respecting American can doubt that we had to act when we did act.

"There are official records of more than 10,000 separate atrocities committed by the German armies, not sporadically," continued Colonel Roosevelt, "but as a part of the deliberate plan of 'schreckIichkeit' of horror upon which the German Government has counted."

Quoting from recent statements by the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis of Brooklyn concerning German outrages, Colonel Roosevelt added:

"The conditions thus authoritatively described by an unimpeachable witness should wake every man and woman in America to the need of trying to help the tortured people of Belgium and France. Your committee here in Johnstown should get in touch with Dr. Hillis and follow his advice as to how to proceed, and you should, of course, back up the Red Cross in every way.

Arraigns Hohenzollernism.

"France and Belgium, together with England, have been fighting our battle as surely as they have been fighting their own. The Prussianized Germany of the Hohenzollerns is seeking world dominion. It has shown ruthless treachery and brutality. Its course for three years has proved that it wants only the opportunity to strike down and plunder any power not able by military force to resist its attacks. In trying to save themselves, France and England and poor little Belgium have saved us; for this wealthy and helplessly unprepared nation would have been an easy and most desirable victim for Germany if it had not been for the allied fleets and armies which for three years have stood between us and ruin. During these years of ease our wealth has grown and all of us should give what we can to help the wretched victims who have suffered such intolerable wrongs in France and Belgium.

"But this is not enough. Merely to help the sorely stricken does not meet the situation. We must punish the aggressor in such fashion that never again will there be a repetition of such wrongdoing as Germany has committed in this war. Never again must we be put in such an ignoble position as to owe our safety only to others. Next time it may not pay other nations to save us from the effects of our folly. Uncle Sam must hereafter prepare his strength so that he himself can guarantee his own safety against any foreign foe.

"We shall fight in Europe—so as to save ourselves or our children from the necessity of fighting on our own continent against alien conquerors. We are also fighting the battle of the liberty-loving, self-respecting, decently behaved nations of mankind. We must back up the Red Cross and all similar organizations in every way possible.

"But we must remember that our first duty is to develop to the limit our military strength. Everything else is of secondary importance to this. If we of this great democratic Republic do not show that we are able to defend ourselves by our own might, if we do not teach Germany that she cannot commit acts of insolent brutality at our expense without being called to account, we will lay up either for ourselves or for our children a future of shame and disaster.

"If this war ends in a German victory or a stalemate we can count with absolute certainty upon Germany at her own time striking down this Republic, for she rightly feels that our existence is incompatible with the safety of that spirit of despotic autocracy which she embodies today more than any other nation in the whole world."

Parallel from Johnstown Flood.

Using the disastrous Johnstown flood of 1889 as an example, the ex-President drew a striking parallel as to the peril of the United States resulting from its unpreparedness. He said that the owners of the South Fork dam here, which broke, causing the flood, had hesitated to strengthen it because of the cost, just as the leaders of this nation, in the period since the outbreak of the European war and prior to our entry, had hesitated to strengthen the nation's defenses.

"The owners of the dam," the Colonel went on, "said to themselves that there had never been a flood, and probably never would be, just as many in this country said we were not endangered by the war in Europe. And then the flood came, with the awful death of many persons, the destruction of homes, and the misery of families. Now, what would you have thought of people who at the end of that time had said: 'Let's rebuild the dam as it was. There won't be another flood.' Yet there are many who advocate rebuilding our national defense after the war as it was prior to the war."

Colonel Roosevelt again referred to the "shadow Huns, men who sit in our national Legislature and serve the Kaiser," and to "the Huns within our gates." Reviewing remarks attributed to Senator La Follette, Mr. Roosevelt declared:

"You don't find any shadow Huns in Germany. If in Germany any man acted as La Follette in this country they would put him to digging trenches. I would send him as a gift to the Kaiser. Let the shadow Huns go back to their country."

SINKS U-BOAT IN FIGHT IN ENGLISH CHANNEL

British Freighter Arriving Reports Half-Hour Battle—New Device to be Used.

Officers of a British freighter which arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port told of a half-hour fight in the English Channel with a German U-boat of the latest type, which was finally sunk by a shot from the four-inch stern gun.

The submarine was sighted shortly after daylight on Sept. 21, about 1,000 yards away on the starboard quarter. Two shells from the U-boat whizzed over the steamship's quarter deck, and the British naval gun crew returned the fire from their stern gun. There was a little choppy sea, and the aim of the German gunners did not score a hit during the fight.

The gunners on the steamship hit the submarine forward of the conning tower, but it was not a serious blow, because she continued firing. Just after a shell had missed the steamship stern her gunners fired a lucky shot, which apparently struck the U-boat squarely amidships, and the craft instantly disappeared.

The British officers said there was no mark in the hull of the submarine above water to show what her number was, and there was no trace of wreckage on the surface of the sea afterward, except some small pools of thick oil.

It was said that the Admiralty had a new device for protecting merchant vessels from torpedo attacks in addition to the smoke boxes, which would soon be attached to all ships in the North Atlantic and Mediterranean trade.

The above statement made by the Patriotic Education Society is in conflict with the regulations of the steamship companies, which do not permit wireless messages to be sent to sea and neither passengers or members of the crew are permitted to strike a light or smoke on deck in the danger zone.

Members of the crew have to be provided with passports, bearing their photographs, and in addition to the special inspection squad from Ellis Island, which boards all steamships after they have left the pier, the Navy Department has a launch on patrol duty all day searching ships for alien enemies.

ROADS MOVE MORE FREIGHT.

War Economy Cuts 25,000,000 Miles Off Passenger Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Through co-operation of shippers and the traveling public, the railroads of the country have been able to reduce their passenger service by approximately 25,000,000 miles since May 1, says an announcement today by the American Railway Association's Committee on National Defense.

This has released thousands of train crews and locomotives for freight service, facilitating the movement of coal, food products, and other war supplies.

The campaign to "make one car do the work of two" has resulted in the saving of nearly half a million freight cars, the statement adds, enabling the roads to move approximately 25 per cent. more freight since war was declared than during the same period last year.

IMMIGRANT SCHOOL OPENS.

People's Institute Starts Training Classes for Workers Today.

In co-operation with the Mayor's Committee on the Americanization of immigrants who do not speak the English language the Training School for the Community Workers of the People's Institute will start today the first of a six months' course of instruction. Director E. F. Sanderson announced yesterday. The first part of this instruction is to include fifteen lectures, describing the aims and methods of the process of Americanization, the value of the immigrant to American life, the question of naturalization, industrial problems and outlining the training of immigrants for citizenship.

Arrangements have been made with various of the municipal departments permitting students to get in intimate touch with expert guidance. The worker will have his choice of these specialized lines: health, food, conservation and domestic economy, child welfare, vocational guidance, recreation and community singing and co-operative art.

Application for admission to the classes may be made at the People's Institute, Cooper Union, or to the Mayor's Committee.

REPORTS GERMAN SPIES ON AMERICAN SHIPS

Patriotic Education Society Says They Pose as Neutrals and Betray Merchantmen.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—A statement was issued tonight by the Patriotic Education Society, with headquarters in Washington, making the charge that German agents are being placed on board American merchant vessels to betray them to German U-boats when the submarine war zone is reached. The allegation is made that these agents, who are German seamen, pose as neutrals, and that some of them are neutral subjects in the pay of the German Government.

"German agents, it has now become certain," says the statement issued under the signature of the society, "have been placed upon American merchant vessels for the purpose of betraying them when the submarine zone is reached. These agents are German seamen, posing as neutrals, and neutral subjects in the pay of the Imperial Government.

"The wireless is frequently used to summon the U-boat to its prey. At night signals are flashed from the merchantman. In some cases the lives are risked in such a way that a few times

Mitchel—Our Fighting Mayor

Copyright by International Film Service

Keep him on the job

EVERY American likes a fighter, especially one who fights in the open for what he believes to be his duty.

Any man will fight for himself. It takes a big man to fight for others.

That is just what Mitchel has been doing for the past four years.

He has been everlastingly on the job, fighting to make New York cleaner, happier and a better place for us to live in.

Mitchel has never pussy-footed. He hits from the shoulder. He has fought more fights for our safety, comfort and honor than any other mayor we ever had.

Once started, Mitchel never quits. Look at the record.

There was the "Black Hand," preying on the decent Italians with blackmail and dynamite.

Where is it now? Mitchel has cleared it out.

What has become of the Gangs and Gunmen that four years ago shot up the town and laughed at the police?

Mitchel has cleaned them out.

The city was spotted with disorderly houses. Perhaps there was one in your block. Hundreds of them have been closed by Mitchel's administration, and many gambling dens besides.

The "Vice Trust" has been wiped out.

Now consider his work of construction:

Mitchel saw the need for and organized the Home Defense League, comprising 20,000 volunteer police.

When war came they were ready at a moment's notice to take the place of the regular police who were sent to guard bridges, water supplies, electric lights and other public utilities from the nation's foes.

Four years ago there weren't schools and teachers enough for the children to have full-time education. Mitchel stirred up the Board of Education to make improvements, including a trial of the so-called "Gary System." He wants every child to have a big, broad, full-time education.

The orphans of this city never used to see anything nearer to a home than the charitable institutions. Mitchel has made it possible for thousands of these little dependents to be taken into private homes with loving foster-parents.

Mitchel broke up the old Tammany garbage game. Under Tammany the city paid contractors to take the garbage away. Mitchel made contractors pay the city $180,000 a year to get it.

Mitchel has done more for labor than any other mayor New York ever had.

During the past three years he has been called upon to settle many difficult labor disputes.

As a result, the unions, the employers, and the public trust his leadership because they have found him absolutely square and straight.

As a war-mayor, Mitchel stands out as the clearest-headed, the most far-seeing, the most whole-hearted Mayor in America. He has made New York honored for its preparedness and patriotism.

For two years Mitchel took the Plattsburg training to make himself a soldier.

Right now he would prefer to be fighting with our forces in France, but the people have drafted him for Fighting Mayor of New York.

For New York needs his fighting stuff more than the army needs it.

DROP 25 GERMANS FROM ARMY LISTS

AT POSTS AROUND NEW YORK

Same Weeding-Out Process Going On All Over the Country—Navy Acted Early in War.

About twenty-five soldiers of the regular army, who at the beginning of the war with Germany were on duty at posts in and near New York City, have been quietly dropped as a result of investigations as to their loyalty. This became known yesterday. They were not dropped as "spies," but simply because they were of German origin and of known German sympathies in the present war.

The above information comes from a source of unquestioned authority, and the number of German soldiers refers only to this particular section of the country. Many other soldiers, it is understood, have been quietly discharged from the army in other parts of the country.

Some of the soldiers who are now no longer in the service held noncommissioned positions, and in a few cases came forward of their own accord and frankly stated that their sympathies were with Germany and that they would resent having to go to Europe to fight against men of their fatherland. In every instance, it was said, these men were discharged from the army, and all are now pursuing, unhampered, so far as is known, other vocations in civil life. Some of them, it is said, are working in New York City.

One Held Important Post.

A few days after Congress declared war on Germany an officer of the army, then stationed at one of the most important regular posts in New York City, informed a friend that a soldier of German birth and of noncommissioned rank held an important position in the office of the Adjutant at that post, and that many important orders had to pass through this man's hands. Whether or not that soldier, whom the officer in question stated he distrusted, is still in the service was not disclosed yesterday.

As to the situation in the navy, it can be stated that the number dropped is not nearly so large as is the case in the army. This is due to the splendid efficiency of the navy's own intelligence service, which weeks before war was declared began a round-up of the men whose services in time of war the navy did not desire. When war was declared practically every man whom the navy had reason to distrust had already been dropped from the service. A great many of these men were employes of the navy yards and other naval establishments on shore.

The nature of the evidence against the soldiers who have been dropped was a phase of the question that THE TIMES informant declined to discuss. The Secret Service agencies are already at work in the various guard and national army cantonments in the effort to discover whether or not any German spies have been able to enlist in the guard commands, or have been accepted for the national army. The fire which damaged one of the barracks buildings at Camp Dix a few days ago is one of the matters now under investigation.

Weeding Out Munition Plants.

It will be recalled that a few weeks after the first division of General Pershing's army sailed for Europe it was discovered by the Secret Service that more than 300 enemy aliens had assisted in the embarkation of the regulars. Following this investigation, all of these men were discharged and replaced, for the most part, by retired soldiers of the regular army.

When war was declared a large number of Germans were employed in two of the most important munition plants in New York City, both in Brooklyn. Next to the Government's own great munition factories, these two are perhaps the most important in the United States. Both are engaged in the manufacture of munitions, which, in some instances, embody secret devices. These Germans are no longer employed in these plants, and a number of them are now on Ellis Island, interned, or in the Southern prison camps.

There are now over 200 enemy aliens held on Ellis Island, and yesterday, for the first time, these men were not permitted to receive visitors. For months past relatives and friends of these enemy aliens have been able to go to Ellis Island every Sunday and chat for hours with the men held there, among whom are several who are considered as having been among the most active German agents who operated in this country after the beginning of the European war and up to the time of their arrest.

Scores of men and women sought to get to the island yesterday and were informed when they arrived at the Barge Office that visiting privileges had been entirely suspended for at least a week, if not for a longer period.

THIRD QUOTA OFF TO CAMP.

2,500 Called and 133 Fail to Respond on Time.

The third contingent of the New York selective draft soldiers left for Camp Upton yesterday morning. The next movement of draft troops, which calls into service 25 per cent. of New York City's quota, begins Monday morning and will continue for five days, and by next Sunday there will be in Camp Upton about 27,000 men from New York City and Dutchess, Westchester, Putnam, Nassau, and Suifolk Counties. The last 30 per cent. of New York City's men will go to camp some time during the week beginning Oct. 15.

Of the 2,900 men who were called into service yesterday morning, 133 failed to respond for the 7:30 A. M. mobilization, and their names were turned over to the Department of Justice and the police. About 350 men were reported as delinquents during the three days that the movement of the third contingent continued. The total number reported since the first call is between 650 and 700, and of these it is said that about 250 have been located and are now at Camp Upton. The others are being brought in at the average rate of about twenty-five a day.

Roger B. Wood, in charge of the draft in New York City, said last night that any man who has been called and has failed to respond had better think the matter over seriously before taking any chances. "The best advice I can give to these men," said Mr. Wood, "is for them to immediately report for service. A reasonable period will be allowed, and at the end the names of all men who remain listed as delinquents will be made pubic through the newspapers."

All five boroughs were represented in the contingents which went to camp yesterday. The units from the First to Seventh District in the Bronx and from 162d to 170th, inclusive, of Manhattan trained at the Pennsylvania Station at 10:30 o'clock, where a large crowd assembled to take part in the farewell demonstration. The jam in the station just before the first of the specials got under way was so great that several women fainted and had to be attended by doctors.

The Bronx units came to Manhattan on the Third Avenue elevated and formed in line at Thirty-fourth Street, after which, led by a band and drum corps, they marched cross town to the Pennsylvania Station, followed by several hundred of their relatives and friends. Every man carried an American flag, and the only persons in the parade who appeared unhappy were a few of the relatives of the soldiers.

The men from the Manhattan districts came to the station in Fifth Avenue buses, while two boards made the journey on big auto trucks. As did their comrades from the Bronx, they arrived waving flags and banners and appeared as happy as schoolboys because the time to get down to real work had arrived. Practically all of the Manhattan men were from Harlem, a fact which they advertised from more than a score of banners.

Fifteen Bronx districts were represented in the delegation which entrained at Long Island City. The Queens boards also left from Long Island City, going on the trains with the men from the Bronx. The Richmond delegation accompanied the Manhattan contingent, which entrained at the Pennsylvania Station.

The Brooklyn units entrained at the Carlton Avenue Yards of the Long Island Railroad. As was the case in Manhattan and in Long Island City, thousands of people witnessed the departure of the men.

CHEER KINGSBRIDGE MEN.

Home Defense Company Escorts 15 of Draft in Street Parade.

Fifteen drafted men who left Kingsbridge yesterday for Camp Upton were cheered on their way by a great throng of citizens. There was a parade, in which the soldiers of the National Army were escorted by the Home Defense Company under Captain Loomis and Boy Scouts. Two of the members of the Home Defense Company walked on either side of two drafted men.

There was lively music by the fifers and drummers. A banner carried by the drafted men bore the words: "From Kingsbridge to see Kaiser Bill later."

The parade wound up at the public school at Jerome Avenue and Fordham Road, where exercises in honor of the new soldiers were held.

FIND MANY RECRUITS UNFIT FOR SERVICE

SOME ENEMY ALIENS TAKEN

Ten Thousand Sunday Visitors Throng the Cantonment—Camp Population Now 35,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, Yaphank, L. I., Sept. 30.—If some of the local boards had been more careful in their selections of men for the national army, it would not be necessary to muster out 3.5 per cent. of the recruits reporting at Camp Upton, is the opinion of army officers here. Cases are reported where New York local boards attempted to send men to Yaphank who were already enlisted in United States service, and there have been instances where officers of the Reserve Corps have been drafted.

Practically all of the men discharged from this camp have been mustered out for physical disability, largely defective eyesight and hearing, and it is here that officers say that local boards might have taken more pains. At present, Captain Francis W. Perry, the mustering and personnel officer, has the authority to muster out all men sent to Camp Upton by their local boards who are already in the service or who are disqualified physically.

There are other recruits with dependents who were deserving of exemption, but were ordered by their boards to the Yaphank cantonment. Even some enemy aliens have been found. A test case has been instituted to determine whether or not the mustering officer possesses the right to muster these men out, but until a decision has been reached, the military authorities here are helpless, and must accept physically qualified men sent by the local boards. Several illustrations of carelessness have been found among recruits, who, through ignorance of English, declared themselves single, with no dependents, when in reality they were married and had children to support. Such cases are noted by the mustering officer, and undoubtedly the men will be mustered out as soon as Captain Perry receives authority to do so.

Today 600 recruits were mustered into the service in one hour. At their temporary barracks the men are questioned as to their previous occupations and preferences for different branches of the service. This information is noted on cards which are forwarded to the personnel officer, who, with this data, assigns the men to organizations according to their probable military efficiency. The camp hospital looks over the men to make sure that they are physically fit, takes their finger prints, and notes other identifying marks, finally passing them on to the mustering officer's clerks.

It is the mustering clerks who have the greatest opportunity at Camp Upton to catch the spirit of the recruits, for they question each man for about ten minutes.

Samuel Schlafmann was mustered into the Seventy-seventh Division today. He gave his occupation as salesman, but for twelve years he said he had been an expert stock taker, with twelve people under him, at a salary of $40 a week. Consequently, he had indicated on his personnel card a preference for the Quartermaster Corps. Following Schlafmann was Pietro Salvatore, who had served for three years as a Corporal in the Italian Army. He had been employed by a paper napkin manufacturer at $20 a week as a truck driver. His preference was field artillery, where his knowledge of horses would be useful. Should he die in the service he chose to leave his six months' Government death allowance to his wife and two-year-old son, Pietro, Jr., both of whom were entirely dependent upon him for support.

The next man to be mustered in was Joseph Rigler, who had left a burlesque show in which he held a part at Cleveland to report for duty at Camp Upton. Although he had been passed by the surgeon at the camp hospital, Rigler insisted that he was under a doctor's care in Pittsburgh for liver trouble, while a Cleveland physician was treating his face for poisoning from theatrical makeup. Rigler told the mustering clerk that he was all broken up at having to leave the stage, and that he had no idea who was fighting.

"You'll find out who is fighting when you get to France," said the clerk.

Rigler indicated preference for the Quartermaster Corps.

The next man was Thomas Jefferson Curry, a longshoreman, who elected the infantry. Curry said his job was "fine," he thought the food was "great," and he declared Camp Upton to be "grand."

Among the recruits was a lawyer with two college degrees, who arrived at Camp Upton with the first increment. This man had three years of military drill and, at the time of the second Plattsburg camp, tossed a coin with his law partner to see which should go. His partner won, the next week he himself was drafted, and the firm was dissolved.

While the recruits were being mustered in today, Captain Perry was signing the discharges of men selected by their local boards, but found physically unfit at the camp hospital. Although some of them have been at the camp only two days, they are now veterans of the national army, for they received honorable discharges. William Rafferty had been rejected from the navy on account of defects. His local board passed him and sent him to Camp Upton. Captain Perry signed his discharge. Joseph Friedman wanted to stay in the national army, but he was certified as physically unfit by army surgeons on account of the fact that he had a disease of the lower jaw that made chewing solid food impossible.

It is estimated that 10,000 persons visited the camp today. Owing to the large number of automobiles it was necessary to restrict them to certain roads and to set aside parking spaces. Many of the visitors watched the arrival of the final installment of the third increment of recruits this noon. There are now nearly 25,000 officers and recruits at the camp, which, added to the number of workmen employed by the contractors, brings the population of Camp Upton to 35,000.

MARINES CALL FOR SOCKS.

Navy League Reports a Request from France for 5,000 Pairs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—A statement was issued by the Navy League tonight carrying the inference that the American expeditionary marine brigade now in France is not supplied with enough woolen socks to keep them from shivering. In the statement it is announced that "already the United States marines training in France are beginning to feel the effects of the cold and damp Autumn weather for which Northern France is noted."

The marines appeal particularly for 5,000 pairs of heaviest knitted woolen socks, size 12 or thereabouts, for life out of doors in that cold climate where good heavy socks are an absolute necessity as a safeguard against colds and pneumonia.

PLATTSBURG CLASS AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

ARTILLERY FORCES IN LEAD

Big Trench Sector Finished and Is to be the Scene of a Big War Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, Sept. 30.—The close of the fifth week of the three months' tour of intensive training by the candidates for commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps finds the infantry regiments two weeks further advanced than was the infantry in the first camp and the regiment of field artillery four weeks further advanced. An interesting fact in connection with this progress on the part of the candidates is that two-thirds of the instructors are reserve officers. The reserve officers realized at the outset, when it was seen that the War Department had only a few regular army officers to spare to the camp as instructors, that it was "up to them," and they have made good.

Under the command of Lieut. Col. Hammond the field artillery training regiment has made wonderful headway and its being so far advanced over the artillery training of the first camp is accounted for by the fact that the men of this unit started right off at the beginning of the camp as artillerymen, while those of the first camp gave up the first month in the infantry branch and then, after going into the artillery, had only some old field pieces of the civil war period and pairs of wheels on an axle to represent caissons, the present artillerymen have had the three-inch field pieces and horses from the start.

The two infantry regiments put the finishing touches to the trench sector this morning and marched back to camp at noon. The trench field now takes in a plot about two miles square, and in this space has been dug a little more than ten miles of trenches, with a front zigzagged line trench of one and a quarter miles in length. It is the greatest undertaking tried out by any camp in America and the war game to be worked out over this sector during the week of Oct. 8-13 promises to be well worth seeing, especially for those who desire to obtain a fair idea of what is going on along the fighting front abroad.

A notice has been posted, upon orders from Colonel Wolf, stating that in view of the possibility of enemy agents presenting themselves at Canadian camps in uniform of American army officers and thus obtaining information, "the Secretary of War directs that officers of the United States Army who wish to inspect Canadian camps, fortifications, &c., will, first, through military channels, communicate with the military authorities at Ottawa for permission to make such visits of inspection."

The wits of nearly every one of the 700 candidates in the Field Artillery Training Regiment are at play upon camouflage, and some very clever ideas have been advanced by these men. Camouflage is now an organized sub unit of the military service, recognized as being of the utmost value. Commissions will be given to men who show adaptability for this branch. Instruction in camouflage in this camp, at present, comes under the command of Lieut. Col. Hammond, but is under the supervision of C. Arnold Slade, a former resident of Provincetown, but for the last twelve years a resident of Etoples, France. He is a painter and etcher.

SEARCH PLATTSBURG INNS.

But Military Officers Fail to Find Evidence of Liquor Selling.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Sept. 30.—A certain section of Plattsburg was somewhat shocked when, between the hours of 1 and 3 this morning, it found Colonel Merritt H. Smith and Lieut. Col. J. T. Delaney of the First Regiment, Field Artillery, escorted by the Chief of Police, making the tour of a certain class of hotels and going directly into the barrooms. In one place the officers entered every room in the hotel in search of members of the regiment who might be drinking in the place. None were found drinking, nor was any hotel discovered to have liquor in stock. Some twenty members of the regiment, without leave, were found in the streets and were placed under arrest.

Colonel Smith informed Colonel Wolf, camp and post commander, today that he had not found in his travels one member of the training camp.

The infantry training regiments will go on the rifle range tomorrow morning, and the week will be given over to rifle practice.

Captain George Busby, Fifteenth Field Artillery, U. S. A., arrived today from Syracuse and was assigned as one of the instructors to the field artillery training regiment.

Colonel Wolf expects the arrival of twenty Lieutenants from the recent West Point graduation class tomorrow.

THREE BRIGADES IN REVIEW.

40,000 Visitors Watch Troops Marching at Camp Mills.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP MILLS, HEMPSTEAD, L. I., Sept. 30.—Parades and reviews of three brigades, which brought out all of the chief units and nearly the full strength of the Forty-second Division, attracted 40,000 visitors to the camp this afternoon.

The Eighty-third Infantry Brigade, consisting of the 165th Regiment, the 166th Regiment of Ohio, and the 150th Machine Gun Battalion of Wisconsin, was reviewed by Major Gen. W. A. Mann, division commander, and his staff; Major Gen. W. N. Wotherspoon, retired, who was formerly Chief of Staff at Washington and head of the War College, and Major Gen. Daniel Appleton, formerly commander of the New York Seventh Regiment.

The Eighty-fourth Brigade, consisting of the 167th Alabama Infantry, the 168th Iowa Regiment and the 151st Machine Gun Battalion of Georgia, was reviewed by Brig. Gen. Michael J. Lenihan, U. S. A., and his staff in a field near the Meadow Brook Hunt Club. Out on the Hempstead Plains the artillery brigade passed in review before Brig. Gen. Charles P. Summerall and his staff.

To the Last Cent–To the Last Man
To the Last Heart-beat

WE HAVE been at war with Germany for six months, and—

To-night, in millions of homes in this fortunate country we shall be saying "good night," and seeking our pillows in perfect security only because in the shell-torn trenches of France, men of France by thousands are laying down their lives for us.

Our dreams will be peaceful, our rest unbroken, because men of Britain and Belgium in tortured Flanders awake from ghastly nightmares to ghastlier realities.

And on the morrow, because the British navy guards the gateways to the Atlantic, we shall go to our offices and about our profitable businesses as we always have.

We shall sit down to our noonday meal as usual, and as usual eat our fill, because patient, courageous, self-denying women of France, of England, of a dozen lands are accepting a food pittance which barely ties the soul to the body.

For three years we have been a sheltered people.

For three years we have watched from a safe place the flood of treasure and blood poured out by others in their effort to strangle a Beast, whose jaws were, from the very beginning, slavering with the desire to sink in our fat flanks, and thus recoup richly the cost of his European orgy.

Let us be candid for once. Is it not true that a good many of us from that safe place were busy digging channels to divert to ourselves a good bit of the flood of treasure? And as for the blood poured out by others? Did we want to save that for our Victor Chapmans and our Norman Princes—that race of "eagles" to whom strict neutrality even denied the name "American?"

Are we as yet fully awake to the great truths of this situation?

Do we frankly acknowledge now how completely our present allies have been standing—still stand—between us and the Beast?

And, are we at last prepared to play our part?

"To the last cent—to the last man—to the last heart-beat?"

It is a good time to take a sober inventory of ourselves in this respect, for we are on the eve of another great bond offering, and its fate will measure exactly the conscious or unconscious attitude of millions of individual Americans toward this war.

Suppose we approach the taking of this inventory from an unusual angle? What do our French comrades believe it to contain?

Here, for example, is what the eloquent Viviani, fresh from his mission to us, and in the presence of General Pershing, told his fellow countrymen in the French Chamber, were our collective motives and purposes:

> "To see a nation receiving fierce blows from an aggressor without crying out, and returning them without boasting; to see that nation united, the people of the factories and those of the trenches, the people of thought and the people of toil, to see these grouping themselves around their fighters; to see at the Marne the triumph of dash, at Verdun the triumph of patience; to see this palpitating capital, which German calumny had called the capital of pleasure and frivolity, so peaceful in tragic hours, so calm when glory later came to shine upon our banners, reserving its enthusiasm for the day when universal right, by force of our arms, shall be implanted throughout the whole world—that is the spectacle which, I assure you, stirred to its depths the American soul.
> "It would have been easy for America, if she had desired to stand aloof, to think only of her individual grievances at the hands of imperial Germany. She might have said that she could not tolerate on her own soil the tortuous intrigues of a faithless Ambassador. She might have said that she would never subject the honor of the land of Washington to the arrogance of Germany; that she could not bear to hear the cries of those unfortunate victims who, in summer evenings and winter nights, were hurled, without warning, by criminal hands, into the depths of the sea.
> "America did say these things, but she said more. Her merit after stating her own grievances, the thing that will constitute her historic honor before the world, is that she heard the cry of all humanity, that she invoked human right, universal right.
> "America has entered the war with the belief that there can be no peace without victory, unless we are to be recreant in our duty to the tomb and to the cradle, and by the barbarous system that returns every thirty years, are to allow our sons to go upon the battle-field and stand where their fathers have fallen. She has entered knowing what she has to do; not only to continue what she did while still chained to neutrality—render us financial and economic service—but to go to the end with her full might, giving to the Allies immediate aid of every kind until victory is won by constant cooperation."

Do you find a little tightening of the throat as you read this characterization of your America? If so—it is true so far as you are concerned, and your inventory is right.

Do you say: "It has not been true of me up to this time, but, please God, I shall make it true from this time on?" Then your inventory is hopeful.

Do you say: "What rot!" But this can not be—it is incredible that among EVERYBODY'S readers there is one content to purchase a sound night's sleep with the blood of men, the suffering of women, and the famine of children!

For America is going to justify France's splendid faith in her.

In that justification there is place for the courageous, self-sacrificing troops we can send to stand side by side with the men of our allies.

There is place for our ships-of-war beside those of England and France at the gateways to the Atlantic, and for our carrying ships with their cargoes of life-giving grains and death-dealing munitions.

There is place for the "eagles," who will fly wing to wing with their brothers of France and England, and for the great soldiers of the Red Cross, who, on the very field of battle, will bind up the wounds of the stricken and find shelter for the homeless.

Great place is there for all these, but they can fill the place only with Time and Money.

Time our allies can provide, and we can improve it by raising and arming our troops, and by gathering equipment; but the Money, both for ourselves and for our allies, we can and must find.

Shall we ask: "How much?" in such an hour?

Shall we, like a miser sitting among his money-bags, financing a doubtful venture, say to France: "Give us the reckoning of the billions of treasure you have poured out, but do not add to it the toll of your ruined cities and countrysides, and of your hero dead?"

Shall we say this to England, to Servia, to Poland?

Or shall we pour out our great wealth gladly, freely, conscious of the enormity of our debt to our allies—living up to France's splendid vision of us, willing, if need be, to go down with our allies to bitter poverty if only in that way the world may be made safe for all our children?

How different that picture for the ages from one in which America alone issued from this great conflict rich and forever contemptible!

REDS LOWER THE COLORS OF THE CHAMPION GIANTS TWICE IN A SINGLE MATINEE

GIANTS LOSE TWO BATTLES TO REDS

First Game Brings Woe to Sallee and Schupp Fails in the Second.

A RICH INNING FOR VICTORS

Cincinnati Takes One Fray with Batting Rally in Eighth — Ruether Blanks Champions in Final.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 30.—The Giants lost both games of today's double header to the Reds, dropping the first game by 9 to 5 and being blanked by Walter Ruether in the second, 4 to 0. In the opening game, Matty's men came from behind in the eighth inning and slugged Slim Sallee for six runs.

The Giants faced the offerings of Rube Bressler, Pete Schneider, and Fred Toney in this game, hitting Bressler and Schneider hard.

Fred Anderson started the first game in the box for the Giants and had a one-run lead to work on as his teammates nicked Bressler for a tally in the opening round. Smith doubled to left, and went to third on Murray's out. Smith and Thorpe tried a double steal, and the play was made for Thorpe. The Indian reached second safely, and Smith scored. The Reds came right back and knotted the count in their half of the first inning on a base on balls to Groh and error by Holke and infield hits by McKechnie and Mitchell.

The Reds took the lead in the second inning. Griffith beat a slow roller, which Rariden fielded, raced all the way to third when the catcher pegged the ball wildly past first base, and scored on an infield blow by Wingo.

Youngsters Get Early Lead.

The Giant youngsters forged ahead in the fifth. Anderson walked and Young doubled to right, putting Anderson on third. Smith boosted a sacrifice fly to Neale, scoring Anderson and putting Young on third, and Young scored when Murray also hit a sacrifice fly to Neale.

They increased their lead in the seventh. McCarty doubled to left and Sallee, who had replaced Anderson in the sixth, hit to Schneider, and McCarty was nailed at third. Young flied to Griffith, but Smith doubled to left centre, putting Sallee on third. Murray's double to left scored both men.

The Reds whittled away one run of the Giants' lead in the seventh, when Griffith singled to left, took second on Shean's out, and crossed the plate when Chase, batting for Wingo, doubled to left. The eighth was the big inning. Griffith's double, a single by Shean, a base on balls to Chase, Kopf's single, a pass to Groh, a single by McKechnie, Smith's sacrifice fly, and Neale's single netted six runs and clinched the game.

Ruether was in good form in the second game, and held the Giants to five blows, which he kept well scattered. He was in trouble in only one inning, the eighth, in which the Giants loaded the bases with two out, on singles by Schupp and Baird and an error by Ruether, but failed to score as Murray ended the inning with a fly to Magee.

Demaree and Schupp Fail.

Al Demaree and Ferdie Schupp divided the box work for the Giants. Demaree pitched the first five innings and yielded two runs. In the second frame Neale singled, stole second and third, and scored on Griffith's sacrifice fly to Thorpe. The Reds worked the squeeze play to perfection in the fifth. Griffith tripled and dashed over the plate when Shean dropped a bunt down the third base line on which he was thrown out by Demaree.

Schupp was nicked for a run almost immediately upon his entrance into the box in the sixth. He got rid of Ruether, but Groh doubled to right centre, went to third on a passed ball, and scored on a single by Chase. In the seventh Magee's triple and a single by Griffith accounted for the Reds' fourth run.

PHILLIES CAPTURE A PAIR.

Double Defeat of the Cardinals Is Achieved with Ease.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—Philadelphia recorded a double victory over St. Louis today. The scores were 11 to 2 and 10 to 6. The double header closed the National League season here.

After Meadows had held Philadelphia runless for four innings in the first game, which gave him a record of having pitched twenty-six consecutive scoreless innings, he retired for Goodwin. The visitors hit Goodwin hard, scoring two runs in the fifth and three in the sixth, and off Hitt, who succeeded him, Evers hit a home run with two on bases in the seventh.

Philadelphia won the second game in the second inning, when they pounded Doak and Packard for seven runs.

Boston Leaves Chicago in Gloom at Season's Close.

SERIES GIVES EACH PLAYER $8 A MINUTE

Winners in Baseball Classic Are Likely to Get Even Larger Pay This Year.

There is one record which is pretty sure to be smashed in the coming world's series between the Giants and the White Sox, and that is the amount of the spoils to be divided between the players of both clubs. The series is the ball players' greatest harvest, and there is an unusually high mark already established for the players to shoot at. No world's series of recent years has had the appeal to baseball fans as this coming strife. The sectional rivalry between the East and the West and the uncertainty of the outcome have developed an interest which is sure to result in the largest gate ever attracted to the baseball classic.

The high mark of financial gain was established in 1912, when the Giants and the Boston Red Sox clashed. In this series the players of the Boston club each received $4,024. As the players share in only the first four games, and as each game averages about two hours to play, the winners each received about $8.38 a minute, which, even in these days of high salaries, isn't bad pay. Some of the players, be it understood, received this amount for just sitting on the bench during the games.

The Giants-Boston series of 1912 broke all records for total receipts and attendance. The total attendance was 251,901 for eight games, an average of 31,487 a game. The total receipts were $490,449. Of this amount the players received $147,552 and the clubs $293,832. The National Commission's share in that record series was $49,045.

A vast amount of money is involved in world's series play. In the last thirteen years, the public has paid $2,874,224 to see the leaders of both major leagues in competition. A total of 1,701,777 fans have witnessed these thirteen series. The 1903 series drew only 100,429 fans in eight games and the receipts were just $50,000. This series, however, was not played under the National Commission rules.

This year's affair is going to give the players the largest dividend they ever received. The largest crowd which has ever witnessed a world's series game saw the Red Sox and Brooklyn last year in the last game in Boston, when the attendance was 42,620. The largest crowd which has ever witnessed a game at the Polo Grounds saw the Giants and the Athletics play in the opening game of the 1911 series, when the attendance was 38,281.

It is more than likely that this record will be equaled this year. With the normal seating capacity of the Polo Grounds about 35,000, and that of Comiskey Park about 33,000, there is no doubt that the total attendance figures will be smashed. When fans are clamoring at the gate for hours before a game, and plenty of seats are on sale at the ticket windows, both parks are sure to be jammed far beyond normal capacity.

In the division of the world's series receipts the National Commission first deducts 10 per cent. of the receipts from all games. The contesting players share in only the first four games, and receive 60 per cent. of the remaining 90 per cent., or actually 56 per cent. of the gate receipts. Of this amount the winning club receives 60 per cent. and the losers 40 per cent. In the games played the contesting clubs share equally after the players' and National Commission's share has been deducted. Each of the champion clubs, however, has to divide 25 per cent. of its share of the profits among the seven other clubs of its league.

CUBS TO KEEP GIANTS FIT.

Champions May Meet Bruins at Chicago Thursday.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—The champion Giants are going to avoid chances of going stale between the time their season closes Wednesday and the world's series opening on Saturday. For this reason McGraw wired President Weeghman today, asking him whether a Giant-Bruin game could be arranged at the Cubs' park next Thursday. The local magnate has no objection, so the match probably will be played, although nothing further was heard from the New Yorkers.

According to the plans of the National League title holders, they will finish their season in Philadelphia Wednesday and board a train for Chicago immediately after the game, arriving here Thursday morning. To loosen up stiffened muscles McGraw wants to put his men through a regulation nine-inning drill that afternoon against good pitching. Friday the Giants plan to take a long workout on the South Side field.

NEW YORK LOSES AT SOCCER

West Hudson Takes Opening Game of Championship Series.

Meeting a tartar in the West Hudson Football Club of East Newark, the soccer players of the New York Football Club made a bad start for the annual championship of the National Football League. New York was defeated by 5 goals to 2. New York was first to score, but at half time the West Hudsons led by 4 goals to 2, and added a fifth point in the second period.

Outplaying the redoubtable Overseas Wanderers in all stages of the game, the Clan MacDuff soccer eleven achieved victory by 5 goals to 1 at Lenox Oval yesterday. The Wanderers were shut out in the first half, the clansmen leading at half time by 4 to 0. McKenna and McLoughlin scored two goals apiece and Young one for the victors.

A notable victory in the National Football League was scored by the Babcock & Wilcox eleven over the Jersey Athletic Club by 2 goals to 0 at Bayonne yesterday. Sweeney scored first, five minutes from half time, and, with five minutes to go in the last half, Miller tallied.

The La Sultana soccer eleven of Astoria and the Visitation F. C. of Brooklyn, two of the twelve clubs entered in the Metropolitan League series this season, opened the soccer season at Marquette Oval in Brooklyn yesterday. The Visitations were at full strength, but the La Sultanas won by 2 goals to 1.

TENNIS TEAMS PLAY DRAW.

Columbia Oval Match Ends with Laurels Divided.

Teams made up of the most prominent players of the New York Lawn Tennis Club and the University Heights Tennis Club met on the neutral clay courts of the Columbia Oval yesterday in a contest of five singles and three doubles matches. At the end they were all even, since the New York players had won three singles and one doubles, as compared to the two doubles and two singles credited to their opponents.

Allen Behr, H. J. Steinkampf, and Vincent Richards, the national boy champion, the three leading players of the affair, all were unseated. Behr was pitted against Vance Oliver of the New York Club, and Oliver attacked his rival with such severe volleys and sideline shots that Behr was distanced at 6—3, 6—0. W. M. Fischer of the University Heights team disposed of Steinkampf at 6—3, 6—3, which was more decisive than expected even by Fischer. Ingo F. Hartman, the veteran, was the conqueror of the youngster Richards. Hartman's experience and superb placements were too much for the young champion. Sam R. McAllister continued his good tennis by defeating his opponent, but was forced to go three sets to accomplish this result. The summaries:

Singles Matches.—Vance Oliver, New York Club, defeated Allen Behr, 6—3, 6—0; W. M. Fischer, University Heights, defeated H. J. Steinkampf, 6—3, 6—3; Ingo F. Hartman, New York Club, defeated Vincent Richards, 6—0, 9—7; Sam R. McAllister, New York Club, defeated E. J. Clapp, 8—6, 3—6, 6—3; Paul Martin, University Heights, defeated Walter Touissant, 6—4, 6—3.

Double Matches.—Fischer and A. Mersereau, University Heights, defeated McAllister and Oliver, 6—1, 6—2; Hartman and Steinkampf, New York Club, defeated Richards and Behr, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4; J. F. White and Martin, University Heights, defeated Dr. W. Krugler and M. E. Fox, 6—4, 7—5.

PIETILA PROVES VERSATILE.

Takes All Around Title in Ulmer Park Contests.

A total point score of 2,332.96 points gave Mike Pietila of the Kaleva A. C. the all-around championship of the Scandinavian-American Athletic League at Ulmer Park yesterday. Pietila just managed to defeat R. Vickstrom, Swedish-American A. C., who finished second with 2,327.89. The events were run off in a cold wind which caused the officials to change the manner of throwing the discus and javelin. Eleven competitors were originally entered to try for the title, but six only appeared.

The all-around club championship was accounted for by the representatives of the Kaleva A. C., who compiled the winning total of 5,476.75, while the Swedish-American A. C. athletes finished second with 5,381.15.

One-Armed Tennis Player Wins.

R. H. Hathaway, formerly of Yale, a player with only one arm, defeated E. Byron in the final match of the singles tournament at the Arrowhead tennis courts, 177th Street and Fort Washington Avenue, yesterday, at 3—6, 6—3, 6–1, 4—6, 6—3. In the last set, with three games all, the winner broke through his opponent's service and took the next three games.

Match Play at Flushing.

Four of the twelve members of the Flushing Country Club who qualified for the match-play rounds were eliminated yesterday in the first round and four of the eligibles drew byes, leaving a field of eight to meet in the second round at match play. These survivors are R. H. Boyd, A. S. Andrews, C. H. Stevick, E. F. Oates, A. S. Chatfield, T. V. Ely, W. A. Mantle, and R. F. Phillips.

Rockwell Great Neck Leader.

YANKS BEAT ROBINS IN A WEIRD FRACAS

Seven Home Runs Recorded in Contest Staged for Edification of Soldiers.

Bill Donovan's lowly Yankees and the almost equally lowly Brooklyn Robins, champions of the National League last year, yesterday spent their Sabbath in a novel way. They journeyed to Fort Hamilton, where are stationed various military contingents, and there entertained the boys who are soon to enter a dire game in Europe with an exhibition that was half game and half travesty. Both halves were enjoyed by the crowd of about 3,000 soldiers and their friends. The jamboree resulted in a victory for the Donovanites by a matter of 11 to 8.

The field on which the players went through their paces was hardly fit for high-grade play, and this was directly responsible for the unusual score and for other unusual things that happened. The chief occurrence of note was the whaling out of seven home-run slams during the game, equalling a world's record that was made thirty-one years ago. In 1886 the Detroit Tigers and a team from St. Louis accomplished this feat in a regular game. Four of the continuous journey wallops were annexed by the Yankees, the perpetrators being the famous Home Run King of former times, J. Franklin Baker; Ruel, Elmer Miller, and King Brady. For the Robins Casey Stengel, the Brooklyn swatter; Ivan Olson, and George Cutshaw performed the feat.

While the infield was in fair condition, except for here and there a small gully, which gave the ball unexpected bounds when on its way, the outfield was miserable, and many slams that would have been taken care of inside a ball park went for hits, from the single to the home-run brand. In fact, as the game wore on, the outfielders adopted the tactics of standing with hands on hips and watching the balls hit to the far outfield being swallowed up by the soldiers.

A number of hits were also credited on flies which went out of the grounds and were never returned. Incidentally there was danger for a time of the game being called because of a lack of balls, for with every sound wallop made a ball disappeared somewhat mysteriously, until in the ninth inning the teams were playing with the last ball remaining.

The Yanks jumped into the lead in the initial inning with a brace of runs on Ward's pass and Baker's home run to centre. In their half the Robins came right back and tied things up on singles by Hickman and Stengel and Zach Wheat's double to right, which sent both runs home.

In the second, a single by Lamar and a double by Maisel put the Yanks into the van again. In the third, Jack Miljus had a tempestuous time of it and before the dust had cleared off four Yankee runs were tallied, on a triple by Hendryx, singles by Pipp, Miller and Lamar, and a circuit clout by Catcher Ruel. That put the Donovan clan way in the lead and they remained there to the finish. Miller crashed out his home run in the fifth, sending Pipp home ahead of him, while in the seventh, Brady connected with one of Miljus's slants for a homer, scoring Ruel too.

Olson gave the Robins another run in the third with a circuit clout to left centre—where all of these four-ply wallops went never to return—and in the fourth, a pass to O'Rourke, Zack Wheat's double and Miljus's sacrifice fly gave the Brooklynites another. In the fifth, Stengel rapped out his homer and Cutshaw reached second when Miller dropped his fly to left. From there George scored on Coombs's single to left through third. Cutshaw's home run drive, with Zach Wheat on the cushions, in the seventh, gave the Robins their last runs.

MISS GALLIGAN'S RECORD.

New York Girl Swims to World's Mark at 500 Yards.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30.—A new world's swimming record was set here today when Miss Claire Galligan of New York completed the woman's national 500-yard championship in 7 minutes, 31 2-5 seconds. This bettered Miss Fannie Durack's time of 7 minutes, 32 3-5 seconds made at Sydney, Australia, in 1915. Miss Galligan swam in a 75-yard tank. Miss Dorothy Burns of Los Angeles was second, and Miss Frances Cowells of San Francisco third.

MOHAWK RUNNERS IN LEAD.

O'Connor Helps Bring Club Laurels in Bronx County Meet.

Athletes representing the Mohawk Athletic Club won the Bronx County track and field carnival held yesterday at Macomb's Dam Park. Mohawk runners accounted for the five-and-one-half-mile road race run in conjunction with the games, and also landed enough places in the eight other open events to bring the point trophy, with a total of 49. The Bronx Church House team finished second, with 16 points.

The chief event of interest was the road race, which started and finished at the track. An unusually large field of harriers started, and remained closely bunched for the first half of the distance. T. O'Connor of the St. Anselm's A. C., with an allowance of three minutes, showed promising ability from then until the finish, winning in a close finish from C. Lauth, a clubmate. The fast time prize went to Julius Katz, Pennant A. C., who covered the course in 30:28.

The one-and-one-half-mile race was for the championship of Bronx County. It resulted in an impressive victory for E. Ostendorf, Bronx Church House, who ran in good form from the start and breasted the tape ahead of J. Carey of the Mohawk A. C. In an exhibition walking competition at one mile Eddie Renz of the New York A. C., former national title holder, led J. Plichta, Mohawk A. C., to the tape in handy fashion.

The summaries:

BOHLAND SHOWS THE WAY.

Paulist A. C. Man Wins Two-Mile Race at Catholic A. L. Meet.

Max Bohland, the Paulist A. C. road runner, yesterday showed his heels to a select field of athletes in winning the two-mile run, which was the feature of the Fall championship games of the Catholic Athletic League at Astoria Field, Long Island. The distance was just to the liking of Bohland, who, starting from the fifty-yard mark, had things practically his own way. His advantage over F. Lavery, a clubmate, at the finish was about fifty yards.

Paulist A. C. athletes occupied third and fourth places also, the occupant of the latter position being J. Phillips, who started from scratch.

In the five events contested the representatives of the Paulist showed strongly and won the point honors without serious opposition with a total of 25 points. The Presentation Club with 18 was second and the athletes of the St. John's Club were third with 14.

RUNNER IS STRUCK BY CAR.

Johnny Bell Injured While Leading in Brooklyn A. A. Race.

Johnny Bell, the former New York Athletic Club harrier, now wearing the emblem of the Brooklyn A. A., was painfully injured yesterday in his club's first invitation road race of the season when, as he was leading his field of rivals, an automobile entering Bushwick Avenue from a side street struck him and sent him sprawling on the ground suffering from a fracture of the right ankle. Bell was taken to the Bradford Street Hospital, where his injury, while painful, was found to be not serious.

The four mile chase resulted in a victory for G. Williams of the St. Christopher Club, who covered the distance in twenty-three minutes, thirty seconds better than L. Kaufman, Brooklyn A. A., who finished second.

SPEEDWAY TROTTER MAKES FAST TIME

Marion Toddington Covers Half Mile Journey in 1:03½ During Day of Many Events.

Eight trotting and pacing races were decided on the Harlem Speedway yesterday at the second Fall matinée of the Road Drivers' Association. The event around which the chief interest centred was Marion Toddington's effort against the time of 1:05 for a half-mile trot. The Murphy mare, driven by Dave McClark, came down the race stretch with the wind against her, but was clocked in 1:03½.

Mittie Bedworth, a chestnut mare, also owned by Murphy, again bid for the place of honor held by her stablemate, Clover Patch, for three years regarded as the Speedway pacing queen. In the 1:05 pace Mittie Bedworth easily outclassed her more prominent rival and showed the way to the judges' stand in straight heats in 1:05 and 1:05, respectively. Straight heat victories ruled in three other races, E. Carpenter's Bessie Baron gaining the ribbon in the 1:13 trot, J. J. Morris's Nell McLintock in the 1:07 trot, and E. A. Meckel's brown mare Countess Kohl in the 1:09 pace.

In the 1:11 trot Catherine P., E. Carpenter's bay mare won after three heats, in 1:08¾, 1:13½, and 1:10. Catherine P. led in the first and third heats.

Most of our tales are coat tails, but this is a hat tale and a true one.

Recently a bloody murder was committed in this city, the victim a policeman. The only clue, a hat left by the murderer.

The hat, bearing our trademark and a customer's initials, was brought to us by the detectives on the bare chance of supplying a clue.

Searching our delivery records revealed a customer's name with the same initials to whom a hat had been delivered nearly a year ago.

The owner, when interviewed by the police, was found to have lost his hat while motoring through a suburban village a few weeks before. In that village a store keeper had picked up the hat in front of his place and remembered to whom he sold it for a trifle.

The purchaser when located and confronted with circumstantial evidence as to his whereabouts at the time of the murder, confessed to having committed the crime.

Aside from the interest in the clever way the Police work, it serves to point out the advantage of keeping store in an orderly way. A careful record of sales is not only the foundation of good system, but it frequently enables us to accommodate customers who order "duplicates" by mail.

LA FOLLETTE.

The Public Safety Commission of Minnesota did not exaggerate the gravity of the offense of ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE in its petition to the United States Senate which was presented to that body by Mr. KELLOGG of Minnesota and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. The petition is moderate in its language and does not overstep the bounds of truth. The expulsion of Mr. LA FOLLETTE from the Senate is urged because he is "a "teacher of disloyalty and sedition, "giving aid and comfort to our ene- "mies, and hindering the Government "in the conduct of the war." The Minnesota Commission, fitly representing the loyal element of that State, which comprises a vast majority of its citizens, has a special grievance against LA FOLLETTE. Invited to speak in St. Paul at a conference of producers and consumers to consider the high cost of living, he delivered a speech which, it is said, has "already "served to create treasonable senti- "ment in the State." But the loyal citizens of every State in the Union have the same grievance against LA FOLLETTE. The loyal members of the United States Senate are justly grieved because he misrepresents them in his disloyal utterances. He has helped to spread abroad the utterly false idea that the people, or some considerable part of the people, of this country do not support the Administration in its prosecution of the war. He has worked deliberately, and with avowed purpose, "to hinder the Gov- ernment in its conduct of the war."

Expulsion of this disloyal and dangerous member would be creditable to the Senate. To do so it would be necessary to have an impeachment trial. But the result could only be wholesome. It would have the approval of the whole country. Deprived of his position as Senator, the privileges of which he has so shamefully abused, LA FOLLETTE could no longer be dangerous. But as long as he remains in that body his influence throughout the country and beyond its limits will be dangerous and his presence a dishonor to the Senate. He deserves expulsion.

STRENGTHENING THE FEDERAL RESERVE.

Strict constructionists have closely argued that the functions of the Federal Reserve and of banking institutions under State laws are so different that they should be kept apart in the public interest. But in times like these practical considerations should control. It may be regrettable in some degree to see commercial banks assuming trust functions and trust companies doing commercial banking. But the impregnability of the banking situation as a whole is a larger consideration, and it is not to be denied that the Federal Reserve is appreciably reinforced by the adhesion of the largest trust company in the United States.

The Federal Reserve is more important than any single bank of any description, but it cannot be indifferent to the addition to it of reserves corresponding to a half billion of deposits by the Guaranty Trust Company. On the other hand, considerable as the company is individually, it is fair to say that it gains more than it gives by joining the Reserve system. Conceding that any institution is strong enough to stand by itself, the inconveniences attending such a policy are considerable in easy times, and may be embarrassing in such a period as may lie ahead in this billion-dollar era.

The importance of the incident lies rather in its force as a precedent than in its individual aspects. The Federal Reserve cannot rank as it should as a representative national institution so long as it is a minority of all banks. In number there are three times as many banks outside the Federal Reserve as within it. It is true that the importance of the nonmembers among them are many powerful institutions, managed by high talent, and with ample resources. There are only eighty-four members of the Reserve among 20,000 State banks. It may be hoped that hundreds, perhaps thousands, of them will be moved to reconsider their position. There may be little hope of those of them who hold aloof because the Federal Reserve collects checks more cheaply than nonmembers can, and they would lose such business if they joined.

There are among them public-spirited officials, and bankers of high competence, who would be in company worthy of their merits if they should do as the Guaranty has done. The law has been modified to meet their views so that they lose nothing of their especial privileges by joining, but the country is losing something by their abstention.

A BEDEVILING BALLOT.

The examination of the ballots cast in the Republican primaries disclosed a certain amount of errors due probably to the hurried, careless, or incompetent mathematics of the election inspectors and further and more largely due to decisions including or excluding ballots marked in ways of questionable legality. Usually, these clerical miscomputations, on one side and the other, about balance one another. Toleration of the counting aberrations of the ordinary human is not difficult. Harder to feel is toleration of the ballot reformers, the worthy gentlemen who, in their zeal against the wicked, brazen, chronic partisan, that is, average citizen, and their desire to foment and encourage independent voting, an art that requires and presumes intelligence, have notably succeeded in boosting partisanship, bedeviling the easy public, and making voting an act that Sir ISAAC NEWTON, were he an enrolled voter of New York, could never be sure that he had performed according to the rigor of the game.

You get valuable advice and directions about your ballot if you have the patience to read and the mechanical docility to carry them out. At an election the good may be patient. At a primary, how many men, perplexed and irritated by the forbidding vastness of the ballot, lose their way on it, and have a remorseful sensation, as they leave the polling place, that they have strayed from the mark of their high calling as virtuous and independent primary electors, trying to live up to a complicated hocus pocus.

The object of an election law should be to make voting easy, not hard. It should require the smallest instruction to put the common voter, intelligent or unintelligent, in the way of voting as he wishes, and there should be as little as possible of interference, for mere technical reasons, with his ballot. His intention, if clear, should prevail.

The ballot reformers, with the utmost excellence of motives, have evolved a ballot which the trained hands of a party are taught to master, which is an obstruction, not a help, to the free expression of the popular will.

NO SLIGHT TASK.

The history of the world from its remotest beginning, with special attention to all collateral branches, side eddies, adventures largely begun that came to small endings, questions of every nature, ethnographical, climatical, moral, social, political, and religious, and much profound inquiry into the nature of man, all these are not merely germane to the work Colonel HOUSE has undertaken but are imperatively a part of it. He is to prepare the "case," all the multitude of cases, for the American Peace Commissioners who will have seats at the council table of the nations when the definitive treaties are to be drawn up that will restore peace to the world.

Lord SALISBURY was the one man in Europe who really did master the Schleswig-Holstein question. In his imperishable and unreadable work on those provinces all needed information can be had as to the rights and wrongs of the scandalous intrigue and the war that made them a part of the German Empire. So that will be easy. Alsace-Lorraine will demand much delving into Frankish history, but a year or two ought to suffice. Committees of the Congress of Vienna worked weary months over Poland and the line that was to divide Prussia from Russia. The general disposition to give the Poles their independence will much simplify the task of the Peace Conference and of Colonel HOUSE in that quarter. But the Balkan readjustments, the future of the Jugo-Slavs—there is a lifetime of labor. Shall Bosnia and Herzegovina be made a part of Serbia, and what is to be done about the Czechs and the Croats, about Bulgaria's gains in the second Balkan war, about Galicia, Bessarabia, the Dobrudja and Albania? Fortunately, the Sanjak of Novi-Bazar has been absorbed and will give Colonel HOUSE no trouble. But Armenia, indeed the whole question of the Turk in Europe and of the future status of the Dardanelles, that will require much investigation and profound study, if the American Commissioners are to be furnished with information of such fullness that they will be able to hold their own in the conference discussions with experienced statesmen questions, if an American position is to be taken, will have to be based on some predetermined principle, policy, or body of doctrine. Empiricism in a peace conference, particularly in this one, would be an unsatisfactory basis of action. The pacifists, who, consciously or unconsciously, are laboring to save enough of the German Imperial Power to serve as a continuing menace to the peace of the world, try to find crumbs of comfort in the language of the President's reply to the Pope. He said that we should deem inexpedient "punitive dam- "ages, the dismemberment of Em- "pires, the establishment of selfish "and economic leagues." Self-interest and the common sense of the world will avert the folly of selfish economic leagues; the assessment of punitive or even compensatory damages upon the Central Powers will be eliminated by the somewhat important fact that they will be too poor to pay their existing debts. But conditions do not sanction the strict interpretation which the pacifists would too gladly put upon the phrase "dismemberment of Empires." The restoration of Alsace-Lorraine to France is an indispensable condition to peace, but that would obviously involve an act of dismemberment. So would the detachment of Bosnia and Herzegovina from Austria. But it would be monstrous to permit the Dual Monarchy, after her defeat in a war which she was instrumental in bringing on, to retain, against the will of their people, these two provinces grabbed by her less than ten years ago by an act which was a defiant breach of a treaty based upon the joint pledge of all the great European nations.

The pacifists, here visibly working in the interest of Germany and apparently determined to leave the way open for future wars, are particularly sensitive about the Turk and the Dardanelles. They insist that the unfortunate Turk must be left in full enjoyment of his estate. That is inconceivable. Argument against the expulsion of the Turk from Europe disregards the teaching of centuries of history, flouts all morals and the commonest considerations of humanity. It is unlikely that the Peace Conference will renew the Turk's license to continue his career of murder and atrocity.

So the more diligent Colonel HOUSE and his corps of assistants show themselves to be in equipping the American Commissioners with historical material the less likely it is that the Commissioners will insist upon a point of view that will please the pro-German pacifists in this country. Our European allies, after all, are going to have something to say about the territorial readjustments, dismemberments, and other questions that will occupy the attention of the conference. The United States cannot determine them all.

SPLITTING THE NICKEL.

Those who buy their milk in certain popular restaurants have remarked that it costs them 10 cents a glass instead of 5. Also, those who used to buy collars two for a quarter have found that the price is now 30 cents, or in some cases higher. There is no coin between a nickel and a dime, and it is inconvenient to make or to take change in pennies. The buyers, no doubt, would rather do so than to pay the increased price, but they do not have the option. It is not given to them because of the pleasing effect upon the profits of the sellers through not splitting the nickel.

At 5 cents a glass a quart of milk brings 20 cents, and at 10 cents 40 cents. There can be no pretense that the increase in the cost of the milk accounts for the doubling of the receipts from the sale of it, and the same is true of most other articles sold in the retail trade. The nickel and dime chain stores are raising their profits, but are in danger of losing their trade. Accordingly, there is a movement for a coin between a nickel and a dime, say a six or seven cent piece. It would be useful to a hundred street car companies which have managed to increase their fares above a nickel, and it would remove the excuse for jumping small prices immoderately. On the other hand, it would make it easier to raise prices which in some cases have been kept down by fear of losing trade if the larger increase were made.

The tobacco trade finds no difficulty in using cents in making prices. Cigarettes are priced as closely as anything sold in any department store. Perhaps the reason is that smokers do not have to have "smokes" and that the trade would shrivel if prices were not kept attractive. The movement for a new coin centres in Scranton and is an encouraging sign of thrift. If the pennies are looked out for, the dollars will take care of themselves. It is just as necessary to buy bread and breakfast foods closely as cigarettes, and the new coin might do much for a cheaper breakfast table.

TWO CITY PROBLEMS.

No pedestrian on Central Park West can fail to note the urgent need of the long-talked-of improvement on that thoroughfare to separate the north and south bound traffic. The condition of the street seems worse this Autumn than it was a year ago. Tracks for the north and south bound trolley cars lie close together on the east side. There is a congestion of vehicles going

There are many accidents. After a long delay the Public Service Commission has held a hearing on the proposed improvement. The railway company persistently refuses to change the location of its tracks. Yet this must be done if the street is to be made as safe, comparatively speaking, as the other busy thoroughfares of Manhattan.

Shortsighted municipal management caused the present confusion. The width of the sidewalk along the park can be decreased fifteen or twenty feet without causing any discomfort, but this would only partly relieve the situation. The street car tracks should be laid in the middle of the thoroughfare, and then there would be ample room on both sides for other vehicles. No actual progress was made at the first hearing. Another will be held next Wednesday. A strong expression of public opinion in favor of the improvement is needed to spur the authorities to action.

Another matter of large public interest related to city traffic is the proposal to extend the tracks of the Eighty-sixth Street railway westward from Central Park West to Broadway. Though it affects certain west side property owners only, and threatens the destruction of one of the best residence streets, this is purely an east side plan. The people who are eager to have the railway extended are east siders who want to get to Broadway quickly and for one fare. How many of these there are nobody knows, but the scheme has won the favor of all who place the immediate gratification of any utilitarian impulse above public honor and prudence. West Eighty-sixth Street has been improved and built up with fine residences with the understanding that it would always be restricted. It has been a handsome parkway, and is a neighborhood of which every resident of New York should be proud. But it has long been the New York custom to tear down and destroy.

The Board of Aldermen will hold a public hearing on the railway company's petition to extend its tracks Oct. 26. It is well to bear in mind that the spirit which animates this movement to destroy a fine residence street, without a hint of compensation to the owners of the property, who have always had the assurance that the city would protect them, is precisely the spirit which animates those persons who would solve the Central Park traffic problem by leaving the railway tracks just where they are, removing the easterly sidewalk, and building a new sidewalk within the limits of the park between Fifty-ninth and 110th Streets. The destruction of a strip of the park, twenty-five feet wide, along its entire western side is approved by minds of the same quality as those which favor the deliberate destruction of the West Eighty-sixth Street neighborhood. There are saner and better ways of solving both problems. If street railway connection between Yorkville and upper Broadway is actually needed, it can be obtained without invading the handsomest residence thoroughfare in that section of the town. The invasion of Central Park for the purpose of building a sidewalk is happily out of the question. But the destructive utilitarians will stick to it until Central Park West is made safe by the adoption of some reasonable plan.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

She Misses Merry Yuletide.

A dispatch from Ottawa announces the death at the age of 98 of Mme. JEAN BAPTISTE BIGRAS, whose claim to fame is that she is survived by 331 descendants in direct line—2 sons, 10 daughters, 79 grandchildren, 212 great-grandchildren, and 28 great-great-grandchildren. If there have been any demises among her colossal progeny, the chronicler of the Bigras annals neglects to state the fact. He is equally silent as to whether or not the lady had any other claim to fame than the one he mentions, and he leaves the world uninformed as to whether or not any member of the family has ever done anything for the world except live in it. Even that is something, however, especially in a country like Canada, where living comes near to proving participation in one or another form of honest and productive toil.

A more interesting question, if not a more important one, is suggested by the approach of the holiday season. With what feelings could Mme. BIGRAS have awaited the arrival of Christmas? Did she buy her presents early or, after the commoner practice, wait till the last week had come and then rush wildly about in search of the proper something for each of the dear 331? Possibly she gave up living chiefly, or at least largely, because the economic difficulties that Christmas is going to bring to all of us this year were of such appalling size for her that even her sturdy spirit recoiled from the task of meeting them.

Many whose descendants number considerably less than 331 are already devoting anxious study to the 1917 Christmas problem. Not a few are pretending to solve it by deciding to divert all of what little money they could spare for presents to other objects connected with the war, but in their hearts they know that no such simple scheme as that will work—that when the time comes they will be unable to resist the inevitable pressure to give. As usual, part of the giving will be voluntary, and even glad, the rest compelled and reluctant.

Mme. BIGRAS has escaped it all, and there is temptation to congratulate her as fortunate, for she could not have been helped at all by determining, as others can, not to give anything more than a pretty card to anybody except "the children."

A Promise with a Perhaps.

For the first time there comes in the fast-following notifications of a rise in the price of milk one that is accompanied with something between a promise and a hope on the part of the dealers that some day the trend of rates will be the other way. But consumers have had no experience with changes of that sort for many, many moons, and so wonted have they become to paying ever more and more for milk and everything else that even the most optimistic of them will have no warmer welcome than the exclamation, "Important if true!" for the assurance that an expected drop in the price of grain will make it possible to lower that of milk.

Between the possible and the probable a cañon wider and deeper than that of the justly famed Colorado often yawns—and never so often as in these latter days in this very matter of prices. The old assumption that what goes up must come down was long since crated and dispatched to the limbo where rest so many other reverenced beliefs, and to replace it has come faith in the new law that what goes up will forever and forever go higher.

There may be an excuse, or even a reason some time, for selling milk more cheaply than at some as yet undetermined increment of the present price, but history tells us, and every schoolboy knows, that there will then be excuses, if not reasons, for keeping price and cost still further apart.

Meanwhile, the consumer can cut down his order or entirely go without. Of that precious privilege he cannot be deprived. He may lose a child or two as the result of exercising it, and that, of course, will sadden the producers and distributers of milk, but the revolutions of the worlds will not be measurably affected and everything will be all right in the end. It must be.

Count Luxburg's Perfidy.

As emphasizing the perfidy of Count Luxburg in his advice to sink some Argentine boats "without leaving any trace" I would like to call attention to a previous event.

On April 4 the Argentine boat Monte Protegido was sunk by a German torpedo boat. The Government presented a firm note demanding formal reparation and assurances that no such attempt should be renewed.

On the 2d of May Count Luxburg demanded an interview with the Argentine Minister of Foreign Affairs, in which he declared that the Imperial Government profoundly deplored the lamentable event in which they must only see an involuntary accident incident to intensive warfare and nowise a want of respect to the Argentine flag, "that symbol of the sovereignty of a friendly people honored and respected by all Germans."

Two months later they sunk two other Argentine boats. On the most firm protests, Count Luxburg, on July 9, endeavored to excuse it, but on the firmness of the Argentine demands the German Government finally promised to pay all reparations and to allow to pass their boats transporting the products of their country—an assurance of freedom of navigation.

And thus Count Luxburg is shown to be more perfidious than current accounts of the late incident indicate, and which I desire to recall to the attention of the public.

KULTUR SOCIALISM AND DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA.

The Former, the Work of Exotic Forces, Will Fall With the Fall of Kultur Before the Allies' Guns.

By FRANK BOHN, Ph.D.
(Third Article.)

At the coming election the Socialist Party in New York and in many other cities will cast an unprecedented vote. But this fact will have no permanent significance in American life. It will not be a Socialist vote. It will be a pro-German and anti-war vote. And it will be the last flare-up of the decadent Socialist Party in America.

Socialism, as taught by its first great leaders, scientifically explains the two fundamental changes which are now, in every great capital and in every nook and cranny of the world, revolutionizing industrial society. There is an irresistible trend toward two results: the public ownership and the democratic control of the industries. Governments are taking over the industries. The labor unions are everywhere rapidly gaining a larger influence in government. The United States by reason of its economic independence and its advanced state of industrial development should be the first nation to develop democratic socialism. As a matter of fact, it has been far outstripped by France, Great Britain, and even by Italy. The socialist movement in America, which should have given intellectual and moral leadership to the whole social and labor movement here, has most lamentably failed. The primary reason for its failure, both in the lesser field of politics and in the greater sphere of intellectual and moral guidance, has been because its leadership and its closely knit group majorities are the product of the two great American exotic groups—the German group and the Russian Jewish.

The foreign-language community is the unmitigated curse of immigration. The foreigner should learn English and mix with the native population. These foreign-language groups break up our city population into a score of rival and estranged communities. They are a greater hindrance to the social movement in general, and to the progress of labor in particular, than all other specific difficulties combined. The many languages make a constructive labor movement impossible among the millions of our unskilled and semi-skilled workers. If we cannot abolish the nativistic groups from our urban life, we must stop the immigration of foreign-speaking peoples entirely, or insist that those who come know English.

The Socialist Party has never gotten itself adjusted to American conditions. The leaders who today guide the organization do not seem to have the vaguest conception of America and Americans. Their purpose seems to be to break the bread of Kultur to the raw and provincial population among whom they find themselves. It is just two hundred and sixty-eight years since the head of Charles I. was severed from his body. That time is the correct measurement of the distance we in America are in advance of Kultur socialism, of "Socialized Germany," of the "Milwaukee Idea." "Socialized Germany" is the gold brick of social reform propaganda in America. The rulers of Germany want healthy slaves. So they breed them, feed them, house them, cure them of diseases, work them, militarize them, and finally pension them. Such is, nine parts out of ten, the socialism of the Milwaukee and the New York brand. This Kultur socialism has about as much place in the democracy of America as the Prussian Guards would have at the doors of our public schools. The working class of America, in its contribution to industrial and social reorganization, must be democratic in every fibre of its being.

Kultur socialism makes poverty the chief enemy of society and demands that all be fed and clothed. Labor democracy centres its attack upon economic slavery and insists upon economic liberty.

Kultur socialism works only through the State and seeks nothing but the government ownership of the industries and the jobs. Labor democracy works primarily through the labor unions and demands democratic control of the industries and the jobs.

Kultur socialism is willing to enslave the individual to feed his belly. Labor democracy aims to secure and develop the individual's patrimony of freedom.

Kultur socialism can develop only in a country which has no political democracy. Labor democracy can evolve only in a country long experienced in the practice of political democracy. It is as impossible in Russia today as in France in 1789.

The supreme test of civilizaton in our time is not that of war. It was written in the firmament that this war must be won by the forces of political democracy. The supreme test of our civilization in this generation is the application of democracy to the industries of our internation-world life.

The débacle of the Socialist International in 1914 and the failure of the Socialist Party here will probably render the very word "socialism" unuseful in the process of democratic upbuilding after the war. What the world thinks of Kultur in general we shall have occasion to observe when a hundred thousand pieces of allied artillery are through with their work in Germany. Democracy and liberty need no other names than they have always borne among us. We are merely preserving for ourselves very precious common possessions under new and difficult conditions.

ARMY LIBRARIES.

Rossiter Johnson Adds to His Ideas on the Subject.

If I am mistaken in my ideas about the plan to provide books for our soldiers, my error consists in the assumption that the pre-eminent purpose is, or should be, to serve the soldiers, not to conserve the books. There is no necessity whatever for organizing a large staff of professional librarians to make an elaborate job of it. The fallacy that vitiates that plan consists in ignoring the fundamental difference between a library that must serve citizens residing in their permanent homes and one that is meant for soldiers who are temporarily in a camp. If the plan is carried out in the manner that appears to be determined upon, there will be extensive catalogues, and meticulous classifications, and all the technicalities by which professional librarians magnify their office; and the books will reach the hands of our soldiers about the time that they are ordered off to Europe.

We all know that in the armies that saved the Union half a century ago, any kind of intelligence or experience that was wanted could be called out from the ranks. My plan would be this: Get all the books you can by gift. Of course they would need to be inspected, and some probably to be rejected. But this process should not be microscopical; for our soldiers are neither children nor young ladies. There are men enough, ready to volunteer, who are widely acquainted with the insides of books, who could glance at a thousand in thirty minutes and throw out every objectionable one. If the gifts do not furnish enough good books, buy as many more as are wanted. Put up the temporary building in the camp; that can be done in a day. No matter how rough it is, if only it has a tight roof and is well lighted. You will find men enough in the ranks who can divide the books by a general classification—into history, science, fiction, &c.—all that is necessary. Possibly one of them, now and then, might classify "The History of Pendennis" as history; but I have known a professional librarian to do that very thing. Put all the books on what are called "open shelves," that is, shelves to which the users have free access. Then let the soldiers pick and choose for themselves, unmolested. A catalogue would be of little or no use; and if you keep a strict account, charging the soldier with the book that he takes out, and warning him to return it within a certain time, those who most need the books (I mean those unaccustomed to books) will hardly use them at all. A soldier who really wishes to read would rather make his own exploration and selection than have the prettiest librarian in the country stand by and feed him with bibliographical advice.

Suppose this plan should involve somewhat more damage and loss of books than an elaborate one. What of it? If it makes access to the library easier and more familiar, ought we to begrudge it to the young men who have volunteered to let their own bodies be worn out or lost? And the saving in money would far outweigh the loss in books.

Therefore, I say, do this, and do it quickly! ROSSITER JOHNSON.

"Egotistic and Unpatriotic."

We women opposed to woman suffrage are giving our all, side by side with our sister suffragists, and for this reason we have the right to protest against their propaganda while the safety of our nation is at stake. When a man is fighting for his life with a burglar, is it seemly to urge upon him the settlement of a disputed account? We feel that it is both egotistic and unpatriotic to force the question of woman suffrage upon our legislators at this time when every man and every woman should stand heart to heart and mind to mind, laying aside all lesser po-

DR. HADLEY ON WAR NEEDS.

Tells Yale Students the Danger of Unthinking Patriotism.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 30.—In delivering his annual address of welcome to the freshman class and speaking to the other classes for the first time since the opening of the school year, President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale today said that one of the greatest problems of the present war was understanding of the country's needs. He recalled the mistake of some of the European nations, which sent all their youth to the front immediately at the beginning of the war, leaving their country bereft of many scientists and specialists.

"The source of these dangers to the body politic lies in the fact that most people in their political and social relations are guided by emotion rather than thinking, intuition rather than judgment," Dr. Hadley said. "They alternate between unreasoning selfishness on the one hand and unreasoning benevolence on the other. The history of Greece and Rome and the cities of mediaeval Europe shows how this difficulty over and over again has wrecked democratic government and brought nations which were once free under foreign rule or domestic tyranny.

"The German theorist will tell you that this fate of democracy is not only frequent but inevitable; that private citizens are necessarily so far occupied with doing their own business that they will not give the necessary thought to public business; that wise government can only be had under the authority of a king or a few nobles, who will direct the work of the state with the same specialized and trained oversight that is used by physicians in directing its health or by engineers in directing its machines. A wrong view of human relations, you say, and an un-Christian view. Yes, and I say so too; but to prove it wrong something more is necessary than merely saying so.

"Democracy is on trial. Christianity, as we and our fathers have understood it, is on trial. If the members of a democracy can use judgment as well as impulse in the management of public affairs, it will stand; if they cannot use judgment in the management of its affairs, the democratic ideal must give way to the monarchical ideal. For the application of intelligence to social problems is a fundamental necessity of all government. Without it patriotism is wasted; without it Christianity is profitless. This, gentlemen, is the high calling for which you are preparing yourselves—the calling of the citizen whose patriotism is guided by judgment, whose religion is vivified by solid sense."

WATER CELEBRATION PLANS.

Mayor Will Open New Aqueduct System on Columbus Day.

Plans for the celebration on Columbus Day, Oct. 12, to mark the completion of the Catskill Aqueduct were announced by the Mayor's Committee yesterday. The celebration will begin at noon with exercises in the Aldermanic Chambers at City Hall, to which engineers who worked on the $140,000,000 aqueduct and representatives of patriotic and civic organizations will be admitted. The ceremonies in Central Park will begin at 3:30 o'clock, when the Mayor and members of the committee will go to the upper reservoir for the formal opening of the new source of water supply. Workmen are installing a jet fountain that is to be eighty-five feet high and will throw a stream of water more than 100 feet that can be seen for five miles.

Mayor Mitchel will turn a spigot, and immediately the water will rush to the top of the fountain, marking the opening of the new system. Instantly the water mains of the city will be called upon to carry the 375,000,000 gallons of water from the top of the Catskill Mountains. After this ceremony the pageant "The Good Gift of Water" will be given in the sheep meadow, and accommodations will be provided for 50,000 spectators. About 1,000 men, women and children will participate in the pageant.

CALL WAR TAX BILL BEST EVER DRAFTED

Simmons and Kitchin Enthusiastic—Yield About $2,625,000,000—Approval Likely.

CONGRESS NEARS A CLOSE

Adjournment This Week or Next—Big Bond Bill and Insurance Measure Await Action.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Enactment into law this week of the great War Tax bill, upon which the conferees agreed last night, was regarded as certain today by leaders of both houses. Early approval of the report by House and Senate is expected, and by Thursday, at the latest, the bill should be ready for the President's signature.

Opposition to certain sections of the bill is looked for, but the leaders are determined not to permit any amendments. To open the door, they say, would draw a flood of new amendments and indefinite delay.

Official estimates of the total amount to be raised by the bill still are lacking. Experts worked throughout today in an attempt to have them ready for the House tomorrow. New unofficial figures make it appear, however, that the total will be somewhat less than $2,700,000,000, as estimated last night.

Estimating the income and excess profits taxes have proved difficult for the experts. The latest unofficial estimate, prepared tonight, shows a total of approximately $2,610,000,000, with indications that the final figures will be probably $15,000,000 higher. This estimate follows:

| Second-class mail matter | 14,000,000 |

Bill Pleases Conferees.

The conferees declare the bill is one of the best ever prepared. Senator Simmons and Representative Kitchin, who headed the conference, being particularly enthusiastic. Mr. Kitchin, who objected to the measure as it passed the Senate as a "rich man's measure," said tonight that no better war tax bill than the one now presented ever had been drafted in any country.

"We had before us virtually all past bills of this country and many of those drawn in foreign countries since this war began, and this is a better measure than any of them," he said. "The burden is shifted around equitably between rich and poor, and, while every one has to pay, none has to pay unfairly, I think. I anticipate its approval by the House without difficulty."

A detailed explanation of the war profits tax section, from which source it is proposed to raise about one-half of the total amount of the bill, will be made by Mr. Kitchin. He will tell particularly why its levy now is larger than it was when it left the House, and the House is expected to approve the change.

With tomorrow Congress enters upon the closing days of the extraordinary war session, called April 2, and marked by epochal legislation. Headed by the War Tax bill, which the House plans to dispose of tomorrow and send to the Senate for final legislative action, the program for adjournment, which may come late this week and almost certainly no later than next week, was almost completed tonight.

The only other major items awaiting action before the extraordinary session closes are the $8,000,000,000 Deficiency Appropriation bill, now in conference, and the Administration soldiers and sailors' insurance measure. The prospects tonight were that all other important legislation, including the Administration Soldiers and Sailors' Civil Rights bill, would go over until the December session.

Fight on Insurance Bill.

The insurance measure is the stumbling block in the way of adjournment this week. Whether the opposition will develop sufficient strength to force protracted debate is uncertain. Despite the President's insistence that it be passed now, there is renewed talk of sidetracking the measure if the opposition should delay adjournment. The Senate hopes to begin work on the insurance measure tomorrow.

Probably little time will be spent on the $8,000,000,000 appropriation measure, upon which the conferees begin work tomorrow. Its enactment with brief, perfunctory discussion is expected, leaving the insurance measure before the Senate as the only important legislation on the leaders' program.

The Civil Rights bill will be considered tomorrow by the Senate Judiciary Committee, but opposition there and elsewhere in the Senate on constitutional grounds now appears to insure postponement of action until the December session. Chairman Webb of the House Judiciary Committee plans to bring the bill before the House this week and pass it, but few Senate leaders expect action in the Upper House at this session.

Confirmation of the three new Interstate Commerce Commissioners and other minor appointments probably will be voted early this week by the Senate. The nomination of Colonel Carl Reichmann to be a Brigadier General also will be brought up at the Senate's next executive session. Opposition based on his alleged pro-German utterances and sympathies, despite the Senate Military Committee's overwhelming recommendation for confirmation, is expected, and, if determined, it may postpone action until December.

FEDERAL CALL FOR WOMEN.

Typewriters and Stenographers Are Needed by the Government.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The Government's need for typewriters and stenographers has led to the issuance of an appeal by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense for aid in this direction. Dr. Shaw has sent a circular letter to the Chairmen of the State divisions of the Woman's Committee, requesting them to give widespread publicity to the fact that this is vital need of the Government at the present time. The circular reads in part:

"The commission urges, on the ground of patriotism, that women who are trained in stenography or typewriting,

NO HALF VICTORY, PARKHURST'S PLEA

Compromise Would Make Us Subject Nation to Germany, He Says.

SEES MENACE TO WORLD

Asserts He Would Rather See Country Under the Koran Than the Cultivated Barbarism of Berlin.

In an attack upon Germany as a "menace to all that is best in modern civilization," the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst at the Madison Square Presbyterian Church yesterday declared that unless the war ended in a complete victory for the Allies the United States must in time become a subject nation to Germany. The pastor denounced all half-measures or compromises.

"God's employment of war as a means of disposing of useless and harmful material is too conspicuous a feature of Scripture to allow standing room to Quakers and men of a quaking disposition," said Dr. Parkhurst. "We all believe in the Fourth of July, Quakers included, and yet the meaning that was put into it was written there in letters of blood. None would be willing to have had a less impressive mausoleum erected in memory of General Grant than that which decorates Riverside Drive. People are sound and they are militant when we penetrate to that stratum of the soul which has not become disintegrated and raveled out.

"And duty half done is a duty left undone. Effort that does not culminate in completeness is effort misapplied. The only thing that justifies effort is result, and to stop short of that is to convert into painful and pitiful extravagance the entire expenditure of wasted treasure, be it treasure in money or treasure in precious life. Remember that always, that half victory is disguised defeat

"We are so far removed from the scenes of actual warfare and have such self-conscious sense of resources as to make it difficult to conceive that we are in extreme peril. To such mistaken sense of security must be attributed the interminable wrangling which marks the process of legislation in Washington and the embarrassing amendments that obstruct the enactment of bills essential to the country's safety—amendments, many of them, that are treasonable in their tendency even if not in their intent. Whatever impairs or tends to impair the working of the efficiency of the Government is in its nature treason, whether done by a Senator who attempts to block the progress of necessary legislation, or done by some other Senator who, at the expense of the Government, and in the exercise of his privileges, distributes throughout the country speeches of his saturated with calumniation of governmental purpose and policy."

Referring to Germany's dream of world power, Dr. Parkhurst said:

"First of all it ought to be universally understood that Germany precipitated the war with the deliberate attempt to make Berlin the world's capital. Although the war is in its fourth year and there are sixteen States practically pledged to the humiliation of the Central Powers, no result has as yet been reached that guarantees the Entente's ultimate success.

"The Allies acting independently of the United States might be able to prevent Teutonic victory, but are insufficient to compass Teutonic defeat. Practically speaking, the war at present is between the Central Powers and ourselves. We are the protagonists in the struggle for our own liberty and the freedom of the world. That is the thought to cherish seriously whenever we sing 'My Country, 'Tis of Thee.' It may not be a land of liberty long. It all depends. We are in what the scripture calls the Valley of Decision—and such a decision will be pregnant with weal or woe to generations unborn.

"If we win the future is going to look back to our day as the Protestants look back to the defeat of the Spanish Armada, yes, as the whole Christian world looks back to the Birth of Bethlehem. This is enough to make a man feel that the last dollar in his purse and the last drop in his veins is not too big a price to pay in order to leave behind such a bequest. I would rather see my country under the domination of the Koran and its prophets than subjects to the cultivated barbarism of Berlin."

Dr. Parkhurst called attention to the havoc wrought by Germans upon innocent men, women, and children. These atrocities, he said, proved that "German devilishness was instinct with the genius of hell."

SEES CRUSHING OF GERMANY.

There Can Be No Inconclusive Peace, Dr. Hillis Says.

In the third of a series of sermons on his observations in France and England during last July and August, the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, in Plymouth Church yesterday morning said that there could be no conclusive peace until Frenchmen were on German soil, whether the war went on for one year or five years or ten years; that there was no British, Canadian, French or Italian officer who did not look forward to walking into Berlin to try the Kaiser and his staff for murder before a military court. Dr Hillis described the devastation wrought by the Germans in France and Belgium and declared that, after the war, the Cathedral of Cologne should be taken down stone by stone and set up again in Arras or Louvain.

"Four hundred years ago," he said, "the Duke of Alva carried the Spanish Inquisition into Northern France and Southern Belgium. In the hope of breaking the spirit of these conquered peoples, this monster invoked the aid of mechanics for devising instruments of torture. It is said that the rulers of these cities, upon the approach of invading Germans, carried from the museums these devilish instruments, lest their presence suggest some form of torture to the German soldiers. This forethought, alas, was all in vain. The Inquisitors were children in the art of cruelty. The history of pain holds no agony like the agony of France, unless it be that of Belgium.

"The devastated regions of France are like unto a devil world. All the pear and plum trees have fallen under the stroke of the German axe and are dead and dry. Gone all the lovely and majestic thirteenth century churches. Gone all the galleries, for every city of 5,000 people in France has its quarterly exhibition of paintings sent out from Paris, and some of the finest art treasures in the world have perished. The land has been put back to where it was when Julius Caesar described it 2,000 years ago, a wild land and waste. That proclamation on a wall tells the whole story, 'Let no building stand, no vine or tree; and before retreating let each well be plentifully polluted with corpses and with creosote.' The spirit was this, 'Since we Germans cannot have this land, no one else shall.'"

Dr. Hillis then told of the destruction of the Château of Avricourt by Prince Eitel, the Kaiser's second son. He declared that in the ruins was picked up the firebrand with which "this Prince Eitel assassinated a building that belonged to the civilized world."

"And I hope to live long enough," continued Dr. Hillis, "to see Germany forced to repay at least one debt in addition to 10,000 others. When this war is over, every stone in the Cathedral of Cologne should be marked. German prisoners should be made to pull those stones apart, German cars be made to transport every stone to Louvain, and German hands made to set up the Cathedral of Cologne in Louvain or Arras. For a judgment day is coming to Germany, and though dull and heavy minds doubt it, men of vision perceive its incidents and outlines already taking shape."

Dr. Hillis spoke of the devastation of French homes and of the bitterness of spirit toward the Germans which prevails among the French officers and soldiers because of these atrocities.

"That is why," he said, "there will be no inconclusive peace."

DENOUNCES WAR PROFITEERS.

Rabbi Wise Calls Them "Trench Rats" Despoiling Soldiers.

"Trench rats" was the term by which Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue in Carnegie Hall yesterday spoke of war profiteers. "They are fattening on the necessity of America's soldiers," he said during his sermon on the subject "What Can Stay-at-Homes Do to Win or Lose the War."

"This is not the war of the American army," said the rabbi. "It is the war of the whole American people. Germany dragged and drugged her soldiers to the battlefield, while we in America selected our men. This is a war of ideals, one of which must perish off the face of the earth. There can be no draw; there can be no truce. The momentous thing in this war is that the German ideal of dominance must be slain. To win this fight, then, there are just three things we stay-at-homes can do—think right, feel right, and serve right."

Referring to the critics of the war, Rabbi Wise said:

"It is far better, no matter how unjust or unwise it may be, to have such criticism outspoken than to have it suppressed and ineffectual. The burden of the war must fall most heavily where it will rest most lightly. The men who have been through the hell of war will scorn the glorified tax dodgers and grow impatient with war profiteers. These latter must be thought of as on a level with the calling of thieving men and dissolute women who follow in the train of war."

ACCUSED OF ATTEMPT TO WRECK A U. S. SHIP

Officer Says Prisoner Threw Bolt Into Machinery of Converted North German Lloyd Liner.

Commander George W. Lincoln, U. S. N., in command of the steamship Powhattan, formerly the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, notified the police yesterday that he was holding on board a man whom he charged with having attempted to wreck the vessel's machinery. When the police got to the steamship they found a detail of sailors guarding Walter Fricke, a machinist of 104 Tenth Street, West New York. They were also detaining John Dillon of 327 Union Street, West Hoboken, Fricke's helper.

The Commander charged Fricke with having put a bolt in the steering engine and of having dropped a wrench in the auxiliary engine. Had the machinery been started, the naval officer said, the damage done would have put the Powhattan out of commission temporarily. The officer would not state how the machinist was detected.

Fricke is about 35 years old, and, although he claims Denmark as his native country, he is German in appearance. He denied having attempted to injure the machinery. Dillon was not arrested. He will appear as a witness when Fricke is brought before United States Commissioner Edward H. Stanton today.

Ritz Benefit for Sailors' Club.

The dinner and vaudeville entertainment last evening at the Ritz-Carlton netted a substantial sum for the Sailors' Club at 81 Sands Street, Brooklyn. Among the dinner hostesses were Mrs. H. Van Rennselaer Kennedy, Mrs. Adolf Ladenburg, Mrs. James Speyer, Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Mrs. Gordon Knox Bell, Mrs. James A. Kidder, and Mrs. Edward Stevens. Among those taking part in the vaudeville performance were Raymond Hitchcock, Grace La Rue, Frances White, Clifton Crawford, and Amanta Farrar. The clubhouse in Brooklyn has been leased for three years, and it is hoped to raise sufficient funds to make it a permanent rendezvous for sailors here.

ENLISTS TEACHERS IN DEMOCRATIC AIM

President Asks Schools to Increase Instruction on Community and National Life.

FOR NOW AND AFTER WAR

Vital to Defending Our Institutions and Purging and Ennobling Life of the World.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—President Wilson has sent to the school teachers of the country a letter, the text of which was made public officially today, urging them to increase materially the time and attention devoted to instruction bearing directly on the problems of community and national life.

In making his plea to the teachers the President tells them the war is bringing home a new appreciation of the problems of national life and a deeper understanding of the aims and meaning of democracy. To enable the teachers to undertake their task with definite material the President has asked Dr. Claxton of the United States Bureau of Education and Herbert C. Hoover, Director of the National Food Administration, to prepare for distribution through the schools "suitable lessons for the elementary grades and for the high school classes."

The text of the President's appeal follows:

The White House,
Washington, Aug. 23, 1917.

To School Officers:

The war is bringing to the minds of our people a new appreciation of the problems of national life and a deeper understanding of the meaning and aims of democracy. Matters which heretofore have seemed commonplace and trivial are seen in a truer light. The urgent demand for the production and proper distribution of food and other national resources has made us aware of the close dependence of individual on individual and nation on nation. The effort to keep up social and industrial organizations in spite of the withdrawal of men for the army has revealed the extent to which modern life has become complex and specialized.

These and other lessons of the war must be learned quickly if we are intelligently and successfully to defend our institutions. When the war is over we must apply the wisdom which we have acquired in purging and ennobling the life of the world.

In these vital tasks of acquiring a broader view of human possibilities the common school must have a large part. I urge that teachers and other school officers increase materially the time and attention devoted to instruction bearing directly on the problems of community and national life.

Such a plea is in no way foreign to the spirit of American public education or of existing practices. Nor is it a plea for a temporary enlargement of the school program appropriate merely to the period of the war. It is a plea for a realization in public education of the new emphasis which the war has given to the ideals of democracy and to the broader conceptions of national life.

In order that there may be definite material at hand with which the schools may at once expand their teaching, I have asked Mr. Hoover and Commissioner Claxton to organize the proper agencies for the preparation and distribution of suitable lessons for the elementary grades and for the high school classes. Lessons thus suggested will serve the double purpose of illustrating in a concrete way what can be undertaken in the schools and of stimulating teachers in all parts of the country to formulate new and appropriate materials drawn directly from the communities in which they live. Sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

JAPANESE ENTERTAIN IMPERIAL COMMISSION

Speeches at the Nippon Club Dwell on Friendship With the United States.

Viscount Ishii and the other members of the Imperial Japanese Commission were guests of the Japanese of the city yesterday. Today, after attending a luncheon at the Bankers' Club, where they will be the guests of financial and business men, several members of the party will motor to Camp Mills to review the Rainbow Division of the National Army. Tomorrow they will go to Oyster Bay to meet Colonel Roosevelt.

The commission was entertained yesterday by the Nippon Club and the Japanese Association of the city, of both of which organizations Dr. J. Takamine is the President. C. Yada, the Japanese Consul General in New York, presided at the celebration at the Nippon Club. From there the Commission went to the meeting of Japanese at Carnegie Hall, where speeches were made pointing out the benefits to be derived by developing the friendship that has long existed between Japan and the United States.

Last night the members of the commission attended a dinner at the Astor Hotel under the auspices of the Nippon Club and the Japanese Association. Ambassador Sato was among those present. The ballroom on the eighth floor, where the dinner was held, was elaborately decorated with American and Japanese flags. On the tables in front of each diner were miniature shrapnel shells decorated with the slogan:

"Bullet bound for Berlin. Banzai!"

One of the features of the dinner was the singing by the diners of "The Star-Spangled Banner." All of the speeches were in Japanese. They were similar in tenor to those delivered in the afternoon at Carnegie Hall and at the Nippon Club.

WAR ON LA FOLLETTE OPPOSED IN SENATE

Leaders Fear Making a "Martyr" of Him in Any Attempt at Expulsion.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 30.—Senate leaders incline to the belief that it is unwise to attempt any move at this time to expel Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, as urged in the resolution of the Public Safety Commission of Minnesota and offered yesterday by Senator Kellogg of that State.

One Senator close to the Administration said that, while Senator La Follette undoubtedly had given utterance to expressions that might be regarded as disloyal to the Government in prosecuting the war, it was inadvisable for the Senate to try to expel him. The Senator argued that Mr. La Follette, deep set in his ideas as to the war, would merely be "martyrized" if the Senate ousted him. The way to deal with the matter, this Senator suggested, was to reply to Mr. La Follette on the floor of the Senate whenever occasion required and let the country know where he stood.

A member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which is to take up the Minnesota resolution, said he did not think the committee would go any further than to consider the matter in executive session, and that it would end there. He believed it inadvisable to even make a report to the Senate.

"The least done with this affair the better it will be," said this Senator. "It is extremely doubtful if two-thirds of the Senate, the vote necessary for expulsion, would feel like voting that way. Whatever Senator La Follette has done, it seems that the course to pursue, as the matter now stands, is to let his constituents attend to it for themselves. They may be depended upon, I believe, to act with ample discretion when the time comes."

A suggestion that the Senate reaffirm the aims of the United States in the war as a reply to anti-war agitators has met with little support in that body. While some Senators favor that course, the majority, it is said, believes the President has sufficiently stated the country's purpose in the war.

NOTED WAR SURGEON COMING TO AMERICA

England Delegates Sir Berkeley Moynihan to Advise Our Army Medical Corps.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Sir Berkeley Moynihan, Senior Consulting Surgeon to the Royal Army Medical Corps of the English Army and inspector of army hospitals in France, well known to the American profession as an authority on abdominal surgery, has been delegated by the British Government to come to America to aid in the war preparations of the medical corps of the United States Army, Surgeon General William C. Gorgas announced today.

Sir Berkeley comes to take part in the war session of the Clinical Congress of Surgeons held in Chicago the week of Oct. 22 and to deliver the convocation address of the American College of Surgeons on Oct. 26, bringing an official message of the Royal Army Medical Corps concerning the work of the surgeons on the battlefields and in the reconstruction hospitals of France and England. He will explain the needs today of the allied armies to save a maximum of the wounded and will describe the notable advances in war surgery since the beginning of the war.

"The week of Oct. 22 in Chicago will see the greatest war-medical meeting ever held on this continent," said Dr. Franklin Martin of the Council of National Defense. "About three thousand leading surgeons from all parts of North America will hear discussions of the new methods in the treatment of the sick and wounded and see clinical demonstrations of many of these methods in the hospitals.

"Not only will Sir Berkeley come with news from the British front, but we expect Professor Theodore Tuffier, Director General of the Medical Service of the French Army, to bring a similar message from France. Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller Institute, who has become world famous by reason of his development of the new methods of treating infected wounds, will have a prominent part in the program, as will also Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland, Chief Surgeon of an American Base Hospital, now in active service in France."

During his eighteen days' leave in this country Sir Berkeley will be the guest of the American College of Surgeons. In addition to spending a week in Chicago it is expected that he will find occasion to meet the profession in New York, St. Louis, and Philadelphia.

Arthur F. Luke.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 30.—Arthur F. Luke, senior member of the brokerage house of Luke, Banks & Weeks, of New York, died here today. Mr. Luke was once Treasurer of the United States Steel Corporation, and made his home when in New York at the Metropolitan Club. He was born in Cambridge, Mass., in 1853, and commenced as a bookkeeper for the Commonwealth National Bank of this city.

ARREST GIOVANITTI AND MISS FLYNN

Tresca Also Is Among Those Seized Here in the I. W. W. Roundup.

HELD ON CHICAGO CHARGES

Twenty Prisoners Taken in Cleveland — Prominent Persons May Be Accused.

Elizabeth Flynn, the fiery agitator of the I. W. W.; Carlo Tresca, the Italian leader of the organization; Arturo Giovanitti, another Italian I. W. W. agitator of almost equal prominence, and J. Giovanni Baldazzi are locked up in the Tombs, and will be arraigned this morning before United States Commissioner Hitchcock on a complaint which will name them as among the principals in the nationwide I. W. W. conspiracy, which the Government has determined must be frustrated. Department of Justice agents yesterday arrested the four, who are under indictment in Chicago for offenses which a Federal official describes as "next in gravity to treason itself."

The order to make the arrests, which was telegraphed from Chicago to Captain William M. Offley, Chief of the Department of Justice Secret Service in New York, late Saturday afternoon, included several leaders of the I. W. W. in addition to those now in the Tombs. One of the men still sought is believed to have received warning that the agents were about to arrest him. All that is known about his movements is that he was in New York as late as 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Miss Flynn, who first came into prominence as a leader of industrial disturbances during the Paterson, N. J., silk strikes of 1913, was arrested with seventeen other I. W. W. agitators in Duluth, Minn., June 23 last, following efforts to stir up trouble there. Her agitations have led to her arrest also in Philadelphia, Missoula, Mont., and Spokane, Wash. She is of pleasing appearance and has always managed to defeat the efforts of the authorities to convict her.

Tresca is one of the most rabid of the I. W. W. trouble makers. He recently declared that the organization was against all Governments, and that its war program included "strikes to cause complete suspension of work on naval construction docks in New York," as well as strikes in the great brass plants of Connecticut, and in the lumber camps of Idaho, Washington, and Maine, from which the Government is drawing the major part of the lumber supply needed in the construction of a great merchant fleet.

Giovanitti was one of the leaders in the Lawrence, Mass., textile mills strike of 1912. He was one of the men tried for the murder of Anna Lopizzo, in the strike, and was acquitted. He was also prominent in the Paterson strike of 1913. He calls himself a poet and a Socialist.

Very little is known of Baldazzi, who is a baker.

The latest effort of the I. W. W. organization to foment trouble in New York was made when agitators sought to organize branches among the longshoremen and other waterfront laborers. United States Secret Service agents frustrated these efforts. The recent strike on some of the North River piers was not an I. W. W. affair.

It is understood that the four prisoners here will fight extradition to Chicago. A request for their extradition will be filed with Governor Whitman today. It was reported yesterday that interesting documents were found in the homes of the agitators when the arrests were made.

Twenty alleged members of the I. W. W. have been arrested in Cleveland, Ohio, according to dispatches received from there last night.

120 INDICTED IN OKLAHOMA.

Seditious Conspiracy and Anti-Draft Plots Charged.

McALESTER, Okla., Sept. 30. — One hundred and twenty indictments were returned here last night by the special Grand Jury called to investigate the actions of members of the Working Class Union. Two accusations were filed in the true bills—seditious conspiracy and conspiring to obstruct the Draft bill.

Included among those indicted on both charges were the following alleged leaders of the W. C. U.: Humer Spence, H. L. Munson, John H. Spears, W. L. Bennefield, and Roy Crane. Spence and Munson face two conspiracy counts each. Munson is in jail at Muskogee. The others named are held at the State penitentiary here.

LEADERS UNABLE TO GET BAIL.

Prominent Persons Found to be in Sympathy with I. W. W.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—William D. Haywood and other leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World, indicted last Friday, are still held by the Federal authorities here in default of bail which, in the case of Haywood, is $25,000. What further arrests were contemplated were kept secret today. Charles F. Clyne, United States District Attorney, kept out of reach of callers and telephones, and there were reports at the Federal Building that his home telephone had been disconnected for fear of wiretapping.

Flight of many members of the organization from this and other cities followed the returning of the indictments Friday, but this was expected by the Federal agents, who have kept careful track of the whereabouts of all the disturbers they want.

One of the surprising features developed in the Grand Jury investigation has been that many wealthy and influential persons have been brought into sympathy with the I. W. W. Mr. Clyne expressed the belief that pressure had been brought to bear in cases of this kind. It was said that in some cases action would be brought against these prominent persons on charges of accessory.

AVERT GREAT LAKES STRIKE

Members of the Shipping Board Obtain Wage Increase for Seamen.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—A strike of Great Lakes seamen set for tomorrow was called off here today by union leaders when the Shipping Board, serving as an arbitrator in their dispute with the carriers, decided to grant the wage increases demanded. Other demands were waived pending investigation by the board.

The dispute was brought to the Shipping Board when it appeared that the carriers' refusal to deal with the Seamen's Union had defeated all hope of an adjustment. Both sides agreed to abide by the board's decisions in everything except the demand for union recognition, which the carriers still refuse to meet.

The men named a minimum wage for seamen during October and November of $95 a month. The carriers had declined to pay more than $85. Deck hands will receive $90 a month, $2.50 more than the carriers were willing to pay. It has been the custom on the lakes for years to pay higher wages during the last two months of the operating season. The Summer rate for seamen this year was $72.

The Lake carriers were the only shipowners of the country who did not enter into the general agreement negotiated a month ago by the Government with shipping interests and union representatives, under which a new general wage scale was fixed and living conditions aboard ship improved.

MAXINE ELLIOTT IN MOVIES.

Douglas Fairbanks Plays in Another Wild West Film.

The still radiant Maxine Elliott, who long since left New York and the stage behind her, returned to town yesterday in a new guise, that of the motion picture star. Miss Elliott is one of the players whom Goldwyn recently tempted into the pictures, and in her first film, exhibited yesterday at the Strand, she is more than frequently a stunning figure. In the close-ups, perhaps, she is not quite the Maxine of old, but the director has been wise enough to include as few close-ups as possible, and the results are accordingly satisfying.

Her first vehicle, which is quite the least important part of her film début, turned out to be a picturization of the Cobb-Megrue play, "Under Sentence," even though it had not been so announced. For movie purposes the authors have retitled it "Fighting Odds," and have embroidered its melodramatic details in the fashion so dear to scenario writers. Miss Elliott, for example, entraps the villianous Blake by the exercise of her feminine charms, (a situation doubtless inserted to give Miss Elliott the opportunity to pose as a temptress, and, accordingly, to a great degree justified.)

The necessity of twisting the story into a vehicle for Miss Elliott has led also to other interpolations and exaggerations, none of which is of much aid to the picture. There are several good performances in addition to the star's—that of Henry Clive, for example, who reaches the films via the vaudeville stage, and that of Charles Dalton as John W. Blake.

The fare at the Rialto is a new Fairbanks film, "The Man from Painted Post." In addition to giving a good picture of frontier life at its woolliest, the new picture gives the agile Douglas plenty of opportunity to do the sort of things that the movie fans love, and, accordingly, it is another grand success. Fairbanks is once more the superman who can—and does—scramble up the side of a barn, shoot unerringly with both hands at once, mount a mustang with a fifteen-foot leap, vanquish a whole army of villians, and ride away with the girl for a fadeaway.

At the Academy of Music Theda Bara made her first appearance in "Camille," and the picture will be continued there for the first four days of the week. "The Burglar," featuring Carlyle Blackwell, began an engagement at the Park.

LAUDER'S FAREWELL TOUR.

After Regular Engagements He Will Give Benefits in Camps.

Harry Lauder's farewell tour of America, according to an announcement made yesterday by William Morris, his manager in this country, will begin at the Lexington Theatre on Monday, Oct. 22. In announcing the public appearance of Lauder, who is at present on the ocean, Mr. Morris contradicts a statement from the National Security League, published yesterday, to the effect that Lauder was coming to this country to make a tour of the training camps under the direction of the Security League, and that he would make no professional appearances.

Lauder will visit a number of camps in the time not taken up by his regular appearances, declares Mr. Morris, but this work will be done under the auspices of the International Y. M. C. A. Since his last appearance in this country Lauder's only son has been killed in battle.

John McCormack Gives Recital for Dependents of Soldiers.

John McCormack's first New York recital of the season, a benefit for the dependent families of the old Sixty-ninth Regiment, (now the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth U. S. A.,) took place at Carnegie Hall last night in the presence of a crowd which overflowed on to the platform and stood six deep in the rear of the auditorium. The recital, which was given under the auspices of the Society of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, netted about $11,000. All the expenses were borne by Mr. McCormack.

Judge Victor J. Dowling presided, and Cardinal Farley and Bishop Hayes were in attendance. Major Gen. Mann of the Rainbow Division and Colonel Hine of the Sixty-ninth were also present. The recital is the second of the kind to be given by Mr. McCormack, a recent appearance in Boston for a Massachusetts regiment netting about $9,000.

Friars Dine Australian Manager.

The first formal dinner to be given by the Friars this season took place in the clubhouse last night, the guest of honor being Hugh J. Ward, Australian theatrical manager. John J. Gleason was toastmaster, and the speakers included the Hon. William A. Holman, Premier of New South Wales; Raymond Hitchcock, Fred Nibio, and Rennold Wolf.

TEST OF LOYALTY MADE BY MAGAZINE

The Chronicle Puts Question to Persons of German Birth or Descent.

MAJORITY GOOD AMERICANS

All Disloyal Replies Received Turned Over to Department of Justice.

Selecting from "Who's Who" and the "Social Register" the names of persons of German birth or descent, The Chronicle Magazine sent them a letter asking for an affirmation of their loyalty to America. In its issue published today The Chronicle will print a large number of the replies, a majority of which satisfied the editors of the magazine that the writers were good Americans. Some of the replies were disloyal and were turned over to the Department of Justice.

Some others replied that their ideas were none of The Chronicle's business. Following are some of the replies The Chronicle received:

OTTO H. KAHN, Banker, New York City—I do not hesitate to state it as my solemn conviction that unmistakably and whole-heartedly Americans of German origin should throw themselves into the struggle which this country has entered in order to rescue Germany, no less than America and the rest of the world, from those sinister forces that are, in President Wilson's language, the enemy of all mankind.

CHARLES F. KROEH, College Professor, Orange, N. J.—I am an American. I have never known any other allegiance.

SIMON BARUCH, Physician, New York City—If I did not stand ready to consecrate heart and soul and all that I possess to the defense of my adopted country, I would despise myself as a scoundrel and perjurer and regard myself as an ingrate to the Government that has for sixty years enhanced and protected my life, honor, and happiness.

WILHELM RITSCHEL, Artist, New York City—I am an American citizen with all my heart and a democrat who gives not a damn for autocracy and Prussian militarism.

WALTER DAMROSCH, Conductor Symphony Society of New York, New York City—My unqualified loyalty and hearty approval of the war are too well known to necessitate any such demand.

WILLIAM EDENBORN, Railway President, New Orleans, La.—In value of services to this country, I stand higher than a combined million of Britishers.

THEODORE KARL LINK, Architect, St. Louis, Mo.—Mr. Chronicle: I believe that you are a damnable German spy and will have nothing to do with you.

ELIAS E. REIS, Inventor, New York City—I may say that I am doing everything in my power to bring the Central Powers to book.

MAX F. MEYER, Professor, University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.—If this nation had not accepted the challenge when it did, it would not only have dishonored itself, but would have committed political suicide, and would have destined itself to be a Hohenzollern dependency.

HENRY KOLKER, Actor, New York—I am an American citizen. What other than motives of loyalty to my country could actuate me?

Dr. CHARLES F. BOLDUAN, Department of Health, New York City—I yield to no one in allegiance to this country.

OTTO KIRCHNER, Lawyer, Detroit, Mich.—I consider this a defensive war forced upon us by Germany by a series of provocations suffered by us with unexampled forbearance and patience.

ALEXANDER ZIWET, University Professor, Ann Arbor, Mich.—Civis Americanus sum.

ANTON O. FISCHER, Illustrator, New York City—I gave my oath of allegiance to the United States and this oath governs me in the present circumstances.

RICHARD FRANCIS CONRAD SCHIEDT, College Professor, Lancaster, Penn.—I swore my oath of allegiance on the 8th of October, 1892, without reservation and restriction, and my Prussian training has taught me that the violation of an oath is self-annihilation. However, allegiance does not mean blind submission. I was, and will continue to be, opposed to the entrance of our country into this war.

RAPHAEL HERMAN, Manufacturer, Detroit, Mich.—I very much indorse the action of the Government in declaring war against Germany.

Dr. S. ADOLPHUS KNOPF, Physician, New York City—It was an absolutely just and sacred duty for America to join the Allies in this war.

MORITZ LEVI, University Professor, Ann Arbor, Mich.—I am an American from the hair of my head to the bottom of my shoe soles.

CHARLES E. MOLDENKE, Author, Watchung, New Jersey—I am intensely American—a three years' sojourn in Germany filled me with disgust for German militarism and supercilious conceitedness.

JOHN NIEMEYER, Artist, New Haven, Conn.—I live in the hope that we shall be side by side with our brave allies when the unspeakable German shall have been crushed to impotence.

KARL VON RUCK, Physician, Asheville, N. C.—The naturalized German has only one allegiance, and that is to the country of his adoption, unless he would be a traitor and perjurer, and on that account would deserve the contempt even of his native countrymen.

HENRY MOTTET, Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, New York City—I am eager to do all in my power to crush the Hohenzollerns and the Hapsburgs, and to wipe out Prussian junkerism.

KUNO FRANCKE, Professor of German Culture, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.—My oath of loyalty to this country knows of no condition and no reservation.

JACQUES LOEB, University Professor, New York City—I left Germany twenty-six years ago to escape the tyranny of its undemocratic Government, and I have no reason to change my views.

VICTOR G. BLOEDE, Chemist, Baltimore, Md.—I am in favor of a continuance of the war which we have entered until the German autocracy and militarism are smashed beyond the hope of restoration, no matter what the cost may be.

NEWMAN ERB, Railway President, New York City—I have co-operated in every possible way with the Government in its preparedness work, and have been and am in accord with the Government in its aims and in the steps taken for their realization.

OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD, Editor, New York City—While I am proud of my German blood and my German grandfather and the fact that my relatives were revolutionists against the sort of thing that is now going on in Germany, (had they had their way there would have been a republic in Germany in 1848,) there has never been one moment in my life when I have been divided in my allegiance to the United States.

LEO RASSIEUR, Lawyer, St. Louis, Mo.—Nothing less than complete destruction of German autocracy will save us from future peril.

In its letter The Chronicle stated that if it received no reply it would regard the attitude of the person failing to reply as hostile to the United States.

WILL USE EMBARGO TO STOP SMUGGLING

Washington Determined That No American Food Shall Reach Germany Through Neutrals.

TEUTONS INCREASE RATION

Food Administration's Figures Show That Our Dairy Products Have Been Going to the Foe.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Reports that Germany, by combining foods obtained from recently conquered portions of Russia and from Rumania, with exports from northern neutral countries, hopes to increase rations slightly in an effort to improve the morale of her people, has stiffened the determination of officials here to enforce the embargo rigidly.

Publication in THE TIMES of the agreement which Germany forced upon Holland, concerning the exports of fats which Germany should obtain in return for coal and other commodities, was followed today by reports that this Government would demand that every effort be made to end "smuggling," a practice which, it is said, has been going on in some of the northern neutral countries on a large scale.

Neutral diplomats, it is understood, deny that any appreciable amount of food gets into Germany in such a manner, in addition to that supplied through ordinary channels of trade. There are officials of the United States, however, who hold another view.

The Food Aministration made public today a statement giving in some detail the great increase in dairy products imported by the European neutrals since the outbreak of the war. This official document carries this significant statement:

Exports of dairy products to the neutral countries showed an enormous percentage growth. A large proportion of these exports unquestionably reached Germany.

In condensed milk the pre-war average to the European neutrals was but 2,063 pounds, while in 1917 this had increased to 13,134,084 pounds, an increase of 494,003 per cent. The pre-war average of export of cheese to the European neutrals was but 1,909 pounds, which in 1917 increased to 165,281 pounds or 8,558 per cent. increase.

It is worthy of particular note that of the increase of 15,187,147 pounds of condensed milk exported to the European neutrals, Holland, a dairy country, took 12,850,724 pounds, or 84.9 per cent.

Issues Stern Warning.

The statement was in the nature of a warning that the United States must conserve its dairy products as well as cut off supplies which might reach Germany. It contains also an official statement that this Government is determined that Holland shall not aid Germany.

"The embargo," it reads in this connection, "is keeping fodder from Holland, a dairy country, to a degree that will probably lead to a considerable sacrifice of the herds."

In an argument for a continuance of the embargo and a careful supervision of dairy products to any of the European countries, Allies or neutrals, the statement says in part:

The export figures are emphasized by the decreased imports in these same products. In the pre-war years this country imported an average of 49,450,000 pounds more cheese than we exported, while in 1917 the conditions were reversed and we exported 51,605,000 pounds more than we imported, which would indicate a total net decrease in the consumption of cheese in this country of 101,055,000 pounds for the last year, if production had not increased. The imports of butter decreased from 3,343,319 pounds as the average for the pre-war period to 513,573 pounds for 1917.

The number of dairy cows in this country per hundred population has varied but little in the last six years, being 22.3 in 1911 and 22.1 in 1917. This industry is one that cannot be suddenly increased, because it requires two years to raise a producing dairy cow and five years to bring her to a maximum production. With normal conditions the country could have gone on supplying the demands upon it for dairy products about as usual. The average per capita production of butter fat in this country is estimated at 32.96 pounds for the three pre-war years, 32.8 pounds for 1915, 33.57 pounds for 1916, and 34.03 pounds for 1917.

The daily problem of the United States will not cease with the coming of peace. The dairy cattle of Europe are rapidly diminishing, for Europe is driven to kill cattle to supply the immediate necessities for beef. The herds of England, France, and Germany are being deliberately sacrificed to the demands of war. The embargo is keeping fodder from Holland, a dairy country, to a degree that will probably lead to a considerable sacrifice of the herds. The world decrease in cattle since the beginning of the war already totals 28,080,000 head. It, therefore, becomes essential for the future welfare of our country that our own dairy cattle be increased, not only that we may meet our present day problems, but that we may be in readiness to meet the enormous demands that are inevitable at the conclusion of the war.

Will Not Feed Germany.

The same terms concerning dealings with Germany, now accepted generally as a permanent policy of the United States during the war, are to be put into effect with all of the northern neutrals, and Holland is no exception. It is the firm determination of officials here, it is said, that Germany shall not be permitted to better her condition so far as foods are concerned, because of recent conquests, if the United States can do anything to prevent it.

Agents of the United States in the northern neutrals are expected to obtain full data concerning exports carried on with official sanction, and, as far as possible, the extent of smuggling, before any agreement will be entered into by the United States with the neutrals of Europe.

MUST CUT DOWN ON WOOL.

Council of National Defense May Check Its Manufacture.

Action to be taken jointly by committees of the Council of National Defense and the leading wool manufacturers of the United States within the next fortnight is expected to put an end to the manufacture in this country for the period of the war of all-wool fabrics of practically every kind. The apparent unwillingness of Great Britain to release for American requirements a substantial part of the 1,000,000,000 pounds of Australian wool understood to be in the possession of the British Government has convinced the Washington authorities and domestic manufacturers that drastic measures will have to be taken here if this Government's requirements for military cloths are to be met.

The first meeting of Government and mill representatives to take up the shortage problem meets in Washington on Wednesday. Charles Eisenman, Chairman of the Committee on Supplies of the Council of National Defense, will preside. The delegates will outline plans for the conservation of wool by wider use of cotton, shoddy, and other wool substitutes. Samuel Kaplan of New York, a member of the Committee on Supplies, will be among the speakers. Following the conference in Washington, a general meeting of the entire wool manufacturing industry of the country will be held in this city Oct. 10.

NEW YORK CENTRAL REPORT.

Income of Lines for Month of August Shows Decrease.

The report of the New York Central lines for the month of August shows operating revenues of $19,540,000, an increase of $1,462,000 over last year, while operating expenses amounted to $12,553,000, an increase of $2,598,000. The gross income for the month was $6,510,000, a decrease of $4,306,000, and the net income totaled $3,035,000, a decrease of $4,351,000.

For the eight months ending Aug. 31, the report shows operating revenues of $140,496,000, an increase of $7,606,000, with operating expenses of $101,989,000, an increase of $16,474,000. The gross income for the eight months totaled $43,326,000, a decrease of $14,176,000. The net income for the period amounted to $14,363,000, a decrease of $15,216,000, compared with the corresponding eight months in 1916. The percentage return on operating investment for the twelve months ending Aug. 31 is placed at 6.13 per cent.

SEIZE ALL CARGO SPACE.

New French Decree Applies to Both Allied and Neutral Ships.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—President Poincaré at yesterday's Cabinet meeting signed a decree providing for the requisitioning of cargo accommodation on all vessels, allied and neutral, for the service of the Government.

Claflin's Sell Defender Company.

Claflin's, Incorporated, announced yesterday the sale of the Defender Manufacturing Company, makers of sheets, pillow cases, and fancy bed linens and dining sets, to the Efkay Manufacturing Company. H. P. Bonties, President of Claflin's, Incorporated, gave no details of the transfer, but said that the factory was sold because his organization "prefers to have no ownership of manufacturing plants, but intends to do a strictly mercantile business." The Defender Company will be operated as an independent company.

The Greatest Sales Building in the World

A daring dream of economic distribution has been magnificently realized.

The wonder lies, not in the exquisite Gothic tracery and lines that make this Bush Terminal International Exhibit Building one of the world's most beautiful buildings, not in the majestic proportions that delight the eye, but in the constructive purpose that has welded steel, and concrete, and brick into a great building, which is a fitting instrument for the great and novel work it is to accomplish.

For, in all the world, there is no other building built to do what will be done in and by the Bush Terminal International Exhibit Building, and in no other city in any country could so constructive a work be done at this time.

Stated briefly, this building will form a Clearing House for Supply and Demand, which will sharply lower the costs of wholesale selling and buying, and reduce to minimum proportions the time now required for both operations.

Here are being brought together samples of the merchandise produced by the leading manufacturers of this and other countries, and the representatives of those business houses which require this merchandise.

Twenty-seven floors of this building will, at all times, be filled with the manufactured products that buyers have heretofore had to hunt for throughout the widely scattered showrooms of New York and other Cities, and there will be many exhibits of important lines of manufacture not previously, or adequately, shown in this market.

Three entire floors are occupied by The Buyers' Club. They are luxuriously fitted and equipped with every comfort and convenience. The membership of the Club is growing daily and already comprises the buying representatives of many thousands of the leading wholesale and retail distributing houses of this and other countries.

It is not possible to describe here the remarkable additional facilities which this building provides for the convenience of those who, under this one roof, will, season after season and year after year, buy and sell vast quantities of worthy merchandise. To those who sense the possibilities that this unique movement offers to buyer and seller, we will send a book which describes these conveniences.

Those who watched the success of the Bush Terminal Movement have seen hundreds of manufacturers enabled to improve their product and increase the output, while reducing their cost of operation. They have seen Bush Terminal Service accept and store carload lots from distant manufacturers, and, on order, separate these lots into small ones, and ship them to all parts of the world. To these keen observers, this new building and its purpose represent the logical extension of an irresistibly constructive aim.

To all others, who are interested in sound business economics, the Bush Terminal International Exhibit Building, the place where the greatest number of buyers and the greatest number of sellers meet, is a tremendous instrument of business efficiency.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

The protracted period of declining security values was halted last week by a sharp recovery based upon publication of the long-awaited Government-fixed steel prices. Received at first rather doubtfully, the announcement assumed a favorable aspect under the guidance of public opinion through interpretations put upon it by authorities in the trade, and it was not many hours before traders developed a new feeling of confidence in the essential fairness of all Government regulation and in the stability of American industry. The newly acquired bullishness survived for two whole days, when it gave way to a fresh wave of discouragement induced largely by an advance in money rates. For the remainder of the week prices fluctuated with a downward trend, and the list closed irregular with the gains and losses almost evenly distributed. Measured by the net changes, the week reflected little progress in the way of clearing up uncertainties, but it is nevertheless a fact that the situation was considerably improved by the determination of the important question of the prices to be paid for steel, and but for the tighter rein held on bank loans it is a reasonable assumption that prices would have been well above those prevailing at the close of the previous week. The relation between supply and demand in the money market is no longer accurately represented by the rates charged. The Federal Reserve Bank and the co-operative action of the Money Committee has changed that. Call loans did not go above 7 per cent. last week, and they only touched that rate for a single transaction through accident, but money was none the less scarce, and brokers again had occasion to warn customers against attempting to carry too much stock on a limited supply of funds. It is interesting to note that hope of a real bull market, which should carry prices to levels much above those now prevailing, has regretfully been abandoned in about every quarter as impossible of fulfillment under the difficult conditions which have arisen with the financing of war.

This does not mean that bankers and others close to the security markets are convinced that values are as high as they should be, or that they should go lower as marking successive stages of the war. It is only a recognition of the fact that a bull market would be out of place when every effort is being made to encourage the diversion of all of the funds that can be spared into the Government's coffers. The Secretary of the Treasury inaugurates today the second great Liberty Loan campaign, this time with a view to selling a minimum of three billions of 4 per cent. bonds, with the hope that the amount will run to a billion more. For in this campaign Mr. McAdoo has wisely decided to make use of the oversubscription which it is hoped will greet the offering. The first selling campaign gained so much momentum in the final hours that the issue was oversubscribed by nearly 50 per cent. It is planned this time to sell $3,000,000,000 plus one-half of any subscription above that figure. In this way it will not be necessary to do so much of the work twice, for the energy that resulted in a large oversubscription to the first loan, while productive of satisfaction, was partly wasted effort. There is in sight now the necessity for placing as much as fourteen billions of new bonds, and the fewer national campaigns required the more the financial machinery will be freed for other work.

After three years the Federal Reserve system has begun to assume its rightful place in the conduct of the country's financial affairs. The law that created it was well conceived, as is evidenced by the relatively small alteration which it has been compelled to undergo to make the clothes fit the wearer, but it was framed primarily with a view to the consolidation of the country's 7,600 national banks, and it did not appeal to the 20,000-odd institutions operating under State charters. The national banks became members by law, but almost unanimously the State banks declined the invitation held out to them to enter the new system. Their objections were based, primarily, on the ground that to join the system they would have to surrender many material advantages to gain a privilege of which they then felt little need. One by one the obstacles to their entrance have been removed. An important step in this direction was taken when Congress amended the law to guarantee them all of their statutory rights enjoyed as State banks, and the last objection, in the view of some of the larger institutions, was removed when the Acting Attorney General rendered an opinion last week to the effect that State banks could not be held subject to the section of the Clayton law forbidding interlocking bank Directorates. The immediate response to the latest concession was the decision of the Guaranty Trust Company, the country's largest State bank, to apply for membership. Some out-of-town institutions, mostly small, are still loath to join the system because of the required surrender of their cherished practice of charging exchange for collection; but it is fairly clear now that the movement of State banks into the system has begun, and it is only a question of time when the membership will be practically complete.

A picture of the extent to which the United States may be expected to commit itself in the financing of the war was given by the Vice Chairman of the British War Mission in an address at Atlantic City last week, in which he summarized the work that the British have done along this line. Mr. Brand estimated the total British expenditure for the first three years of war at upward of twenty-five billions of dollars, of which, roughly, six billions were provided out of revenue and nineteen billions by the assumption of additional debt. About five and one-half billions of this huge total represent advances made to the Allies, which in the course of time, after the restoration of peace, will be repaid. Great Britain's actual daily expenditure since April 1 last, including loans to the Allies, has been at the rate of $35,000,000, with an irrevocable commitment to spend at least $22,000,000 per diem. The increase in revenue through new taxes has been almost unbelievable, harking back to the complaints on the score of excessive taxation which used to reach this country before the war. In peace times Great Britain raised approximately $1,000,000,000 a year; in the current period it is expected that revenues will run from $3,150,000,000 to $3,400,000,000. On the bases of relative populations, Great Britain's expenditures are the equivalent of about $70,000,000 per day for the United States, a level which has not been attained yet even with the extraordinary initial outlays and advances to the Allies. The theory so popular three years ago, that the war would be ended by financial exhaustion, led Mr. Brand to make this interesting comment: "Perhaps the greatest surprise of the war to most people, even to those who had studied political economy, has been the enormous expenditure of money which a nation can incur, and the length of time it can go on fighting without complete exhaustion. But all experience shows that money, itself, has never prevented a nation from continuing to fight, if it were determined to fight. This war proves again that if what the Germans call 'the will to fight' ... provided only it possesses, or can obtain, its absolutely minimum requirements of food, clothing, and munitions of war." From which Mr. Brand drew this moral: "Though the mechanism of finance is exceedingly important, the vital thing both for a country itself and its allies is that it should produce and so have available everything required for war, both for itself and for them. If the goods are not there, and cannot be obtained from other countries, no method of financing will avail at all."

TERMS OF NEW BRITISH LOAN.

Bonds Carry Conversion Rights Into Future War Issues.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Terms of the new Government borrowing announced Thursday described the issue as consisting of national war bonds, bearing 5 per cent. interest, subject to the income tax deduction. The bonds are to be offered at 100 and will be repayable at 102 in 1922, at 103 in 1924, and at 105 in 1927. The loan operation also includes 4 per cent. bonds, with tax compounded, to be offered at 100 and be repayable at the same price as the 1927 5 per cent. issue.

Holders of the 5 per cent. national bonds may convert their purchases into 5 per cent war loan bonds and the 4 per cent. issue may be converted into 4 per cent. war loan at 95 and 100, respectively. The new bonds also carry conversion rights into future war issues other than short-term securities. Holders of the 4½ per cent. war loan and the various issues of Exchequer bonds may convert their bonds into the 5 per cent. national bonds maturing 1924 and 1927, or into the 4 per cent. new loan of 1927.

The national war loan is to be free of all British taxation, present or future, to subscribers not resident in the United Kingdom.

Bankers conferred with the Prime Minister at the Bank of England on Thursday and promised active co-operation in bringing the new securities before investors. The Government aims at steady weekly subscriptions rather than a preliminary rush, with a subsequent slackening.

The initial effect of news of the pending financing was a rise on the Stock ... 4½ per cent. war loan and of about a point in case of Exchequer bonds.

High grade stocks were generally dull in the forepart of the week, while the loan terms were hanging fire, and later a steady tone prevailed. The railway markets were quiet and mostly reactionary, although Argentines recovered slightly despite serious labor troubles and further heavy traffic losses. Better military news found the more speculative issues responsive, and lively trading developed in several directions.

A pronounced stringency in the money market was due to purchases of popular December Treasury bills. The Bank of England lent substantial sums. The daily money rate advanced to 5 per cent., the discount market responding by a slightly harder tone.

PARIS PRICES IRREGULAR.

General Recovery at the Week-End, with Closing Market Firm.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The week's record of trading on the Bourse described an irregular price trend. In the first few days a rapid advance occurred in the war stocks, and copper metal values also moved up. Speaking generally, the Russian group was alone in losing ground, failing to maintain the preceding week's too sudden improvement. Considerable profit taking followed on Wednesday and the entire market became much weaker. Coppers lost ground on the report that the American Government had fixed prices for the purchase of the metal, while war stocks were affected unfavorably. All shares in general recovered later, and the Bourse closed firm. War loan prices were hard, the last being 88.30. Rentes left off at 60.60, weakness being due to considerable unloading in the last fortnight, mainly in anticipation of the third war loan. This issue is not likely to appear before the end of the year, under conditions which are as yet quite unknown.

Saturday sessions of the Bourse will be renewed Oct. 6, but will terminate at 1 o'clock instead of 2 o'clock, as daylight-saving regulations end the same day. The moratorium has been extended another three months. Credits to the end of the year were voted by the Chamber, the vote standing at 480 to 4.

Gold holdings by the Bank of France total 328,022,703,038 francs. Advances for the war aggregated 11,650,000,000 francs. Foreign advances were 2,945,000,000 francs.

the plain duty of every American

Your Duty, as an American citizen, is plain, definite and imperative.

Your sons and your neighbors' sons are going abroad to fight for their country, their flag, their homes—and for You.

They cannot fight without food, shoes, clothes, bread and bullets.

The Government looks to you for the money to buy these things. Your Duty is to lend—not give—this money.

It is more than Duty—more than patriotism—it is a privilege to buy Liberty Bonds.

The money you pay for them will help win the war—help keep our soldiers fed, clothed, armed and protected—help keep your country safe and drive Kaiserism out of the world forever!

The United States Government guarantees to pay your money back. It pays you interest on your money, semi-annually.

You can buy Liberty Bonds at any bank. You can buy them on the partial payment plan if you wish. Buy all you can.

KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

Army Car, Driven by Sergeant, Turns Over After Collision.

Sergeant Raymond W. Gove, 23, attached to the Quartermaster's Corps on Governors Island and assigned as chauffeur to Colonel Donaldson, Inspector of the Eastern Department, is a prisoner in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica, charged with homicide, as a result of the death of one of his companions early yesterday, after Colonel Donaldson's machine, which Gove had been given permission to use, crashed into a smaller car. The accident happened at Hillside and Queens Avenues, three miles east of Jamaica, and the victim was George D. McDonald, a chauffeur, of 784 Columbus Avenue, Manhattan.

Gove says that as he was going around a curve his steering gear snapped, and the car got beyond his control. He struck the back wheel of a smaller car, in which were Daniel Burkholder, his wife, Helen, and their daughters, Clara and Mary, all of 24 Seeley Avenue, Hempstead, L. I. They were homeward bound from a theatre. One rear wheel of their car collapsed and they were thrown out. Mrs. Burkholder's nose was broken, but the others escaped with cuts and bruises. Colonel Donaldson's car mowed down a telegraph pole, snapping it off at the base. It then skidded thirty feet into a vacant lot and turned completely over. Gove, who was driving, and McDonald, who sat beside him, were pinned underneath. The latter's skull was crushed, but Gove escaped with a badly cut right hand.

MARKS PICKS MEN TO SPEED BUILDING

FERRY FOR MEADOW TOILERS

Will Tap Staten Island, Bayonne, and Elizabeth Housing Resources Until Newark Meets Need.

Promptly following up the reduction in the base price of steel, Borough President Marcus M. Marks named the committee authorized by the recent conference called at the suggestion of the Building Material Exchange and set tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 at his office as the time and place for taking the first organized step toward adopting a plan for improving building conditions without interfering with the needs of the country on account of war, says The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

The committee consists of Ernest R. Ackerman, National Counselor of the New Jersey Chamber of Commerce and President of the Lawrence Cement Company; G. Osgood Andrews, eastern representative of the Plate Glass Manufacturers' Association; Allen E. Beals of the Allen E. Beals Corporation, publishers of The Dow Service Daily Building Reports; Charles Burns, representing the Long Island Building Trades Council; R. M. Chittick, Secretary of the Real Estate Board; F. E. Conover, representing the Building Trades Employers' Association; C. J. Curton, President of the Farnam Cheshire Lime Company and Chairman of the Building Material Exchange Committee that suggested the general conference; Michael Cohen, President of the Indiana Limestone Association of New York; Hugh Getty, President of the Building Trades Employers' Association; Cass Gilbert, the architect and member of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects; G. E. Gifford, Secretary of the Bridge Builders and Structural Steel Society; F. S. Hanley, Secretary of the Eastern Supply Association; William K. Hammond, dean of the Hudson River Brick Manufacturers' Association; L. W. Hargington, President of the Credit Association of the Building Trades of New York; Francis N. Howland, President of the Association of Dealers in Building Materials of New York, and John Hughes, Secretary to the President of the United States Steel Corporation.

Henry M. Keasbey, President of the National Fireproofing Company; William C. Knox, Controller of the Bowery Savings Bank; Walter Lindner, President of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company; Herbert D. Lounsbury of Fredenburg & Lounsbury, front brick distributers; Lawrence McGuire, President of the Real Estate Board; George A. Molitor, Secretary of the Building Material Exchange; Frank Neilson, Secretary of the Credit Association of the Building Trades of New York; Albert Oliver of Albert Oliver & Son, wire reinforcement; Joseph Paterno, apartment house investor; Russell Johnson Perrine; Arthur B. Pendleton, Secretary National Terra Cotta Society; Orin F. Perry, representing lime interests; William H. Powell, President of the Atlantic Terra Cotta Company; John Radley, William C. Reid, Former Representative Thomas Rock; Colonel John B. Rose, brick manufacturer and President of the Greater New York Brick Company; William H. Rockwood, banker; William C. Shultz, representing New Jersey mason supply companies; Elliott Smith, President of the Building Material Exchange; Ernest L. Smith of the Frederick T. Ley Company, builders; Henry Atterbury Smith of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and Walter T. Smith, Vice President of the George A. Fuller Company, builders.

Walter Stabler, Controller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; Frederick A. Snow, mortgages; S. J. Treat, Secretary of the Association of Dealers in Building Materials of New York; Frederick G. Webber, of the Webber Construction Company, builders, and Roy Wingate, of Cauldwell-Wingate Company, builders.

Current events are showing that a revival of building construction neither hangs upon the cessation of the war nor interferes with its vigorous prosecution. On the Newark meadows 12,000 men will soon be gathered. Newark cannot offer sufficient homes for these operators, so it has been decided to operate a ferry from Bayonne to Port Newark, the site of the United States Steel Company's and other great plants now being erected, so as to open up the housing resources of Staten Island, Union and Hudson Counties to these workers.

Standard Oil money is now being used in New England to take care of plant extension, and the Lehigh Portland Cement Company is erecting houses for its employes. Operatives at work in the Peerless automobile factory in New Brunswick ride back and forth from as far as Islin, N. J., nearly ten miles, to work because there are not sufficient homes in New Brunswick for the men employed in the mills there.

In New York future construction rests upon the availability of structural steel. The country's mill capacity today is approximately 40,000,000 tons. The maximum Government requirements so far made known total about 8,000,000 tons. This means that about two and one-half months of orders must take precedence over all other orders. In the meantime, pending the movement of crops, there will be a great struggle to get steel. It should stimulate unloading of store stocks put in at former high prices.

Some trade authorities estimate it will take three months. Already advertisements for the sale of pig iron and steel are appearing. If there should develop a feverish desire to clear present stocks, pinnacle steel prices to builders will soon be leveled. Builders already look for approximately $86 fabricated steel prices in the building line within the next two months despite the fact that one-half of the 2,800,000-ton fabricated steel capacity has been pledged to shipbuilding requirements because of lack of bridge and structural work.

In the meantime building material prices will not recede. The profit on a 300-pound barrel of Portland cement today equals that of only three pounds of copper. Brick at $8.50 a thousand, wholesale, affords the manufacturer barely 8 per cent. on his investment and practically all manufacturers of composition roofing have made advances in prices recently on account of increased cost of materials and labor.

The lowering of the base price of steel is everywhere considered a step in the right direction for the betterment of building conditions. Within this quarter the law of supply and demand will again become operative. With the crops all moved, deliveries will be more dependable and the last obstacle to a free building movement should disappear.

16,000 WOMEN TO AID CITY FOOD CAMPAIGN

Pledges Will Be Sought from 1,200,000 Housewives to Increase Conservation.

MEATLESS, WHEATLESS DAYS

Also a Fireless Day Suggested as Practical Features of Economy —Call for Volunteers.

The slogan "Food will Win the War," announced on Saturday by food administrator, Herbert C. Hoover, for the campaign that is to be carried on from Oct. 12 to 27 to enlist every housewife in the counutry, is to be used by Arthur Williams, who is directing the campaign in the New York district. Mr. Williams has opened offices at 124 East Fifteenth Street. He has already under way plans for organizing the 16,000 women who are to make a house to house canvas to obtain pledges from the 1,200,000 housewives in the city.

Two meatless days, two wheatless days, and one fireless day are the practical features of economy and conservation expected to result from the activities. Each housewife will be asked also to sign conservation pledge cards agreeing to obey the rule of the food administration. To carry out the house to house canvass, however, volunteers are needed, and Mr. Williams sent out yesterday an appeal for women to volunteer for service and send their names and addresses to his office.

"This is no easy task," said Mr. Williams, "but it is one which we confidently hope will appeal to the patriotism of every young woman in the city. We want a regiment of women who are ready to enlist in this branch of the country's service. For the present it will not be necessary for the volunteers to call in person. All that is required is their names and addresses be sent to headquarters, 124 East Fifteenth Street. Those who are selected will be notified by mail where and when they will report for duty."

The Women's Committee for the New York District has been organized, with Mrs. John Francis Yawger, President of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, as Chairman. The Chairmen for the boroughs are: Manhattan, Mrs. Lavante Bigelow; Brooklyn, Mrs. August Dreyer; Queens, Mrs. John M. Robinson; Richmond, Mrs. William G. Wilcox; the Bronx, Mrs. Steven B. Ayres.

H. J. Hill, National Campaign Director, has sent the following message from Washington to Administration Headquarters:

"'Herbert Hoover's announcement of the Food Pledge Enrollment Campaign is the first note sounded in the drive to enroll every American man and woman in a definite organization to win the war by food saving and wise use. 'Food will win the war,' is the battle cry. Nearly 2,000,000 women have already taken the pledge to furnish the food our allies and overseas armies will require, and already they are visibly increasing the available supplies. The small amounts which each individual is asked to save through substitution and avoidance of waste when multiplied by millions becomes an effective total. The whole problem will be solved if the American people will eat less of the foods which, because of their concentrated nutritive value, must be sent abroad, and more of other foods of which there is abundance. The foods that must be saved are wheat, beef, pork, dairy products and sugar. Those that should be used generously are fish, poultry, vegetables and all cereals except wheat."

MRS. DEWEY QUITS NAVY LEAGUE BRANCH

Resigns Post In Comforts Committee But Remains Head of Woman's Naval Service.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Mrs. George Dewey, widow of the Admiral, today resigned from the honorary chairmanship of the Comforts Committee of the Navy League of the United States. Her letter of resignation, which was addressed to Mrs. James Carroll Fraser, Chairman of the Comforts Committee, was made public today as follows:

Dear Madam—My earnest and sole desire in this war is to do everything in my power for the bluejackets, whose welfare was the first concern of my husband.

I am convinced that the services I can render are along other lines, I write, therefore, to say that I cannot longer serve as Honorary Chairman of the Comforts Committee of the Navy League of the United States. With high consideration, dear Madam, I am, very truly,

MILDRED McLEAN DEWEY,
(Mrs. George Dewey.)

Secretary Daniels recently refused to have any dealings with the Navy League or any of its branches. It was said tonight that Mrs. Dewey would be much occupied as President of the Woman's Naval Service and her resignation as Honorary Chairman of the Comforts Committee was a result.

STATE PLANS TO ACT ON ADVANCE IN MILK

Attorney General Lewis Points to Laws That Make an Inquiry Possible.

HOOVER GATHERS COST DATA

Federal Government Also Has Jurisdiction—District Attorney May Prosecute.

In view of the rise in the price of milk to 14 cents a quart, which becomes effective today, Attorney General Merton E. Lewis gave out a statement last night in which he said:

"I have had under consideration for several days the increase in milk prices and have been studying the situation with a view to determining the most practicable method of inquiring into the reasonableness of the increase.

"Both Federal and State authorities have jurisdiction to investigate the matter, and it is understood that Herbert C. Hoover, the United States Food Administrator, has been collecting information in regard to the costs of production and distribution of milk. His investigations may help to establish what would be a fair price to the consumer.

"There are two possible courses of action open to the State authorities. The Attorney General could begin an investigation under the Donnelly act, charging that milk producers and distributors have formed a conspiracy in restraint of trade to fix prices. Experience has shown, however, that anti-trust prosecutions are not often effective to reduce prices or even disclose what is a reasonable price.

"Under the State food law, enacted recently by the Legislature, it is illegal to combine for the purpose of exacting excessive profits on necessaries, including milk. This law provides the machinery by which the State Food Commission may ascertain what is a fair profit and may procure an injunction in the courts against the charging of exorbitant prices.

"Owing to the fact that the State Food Commission provided for by the act is not yet in existence, there is no way at present of enforcing its provisions. It is not yet possible to make any use whatever of the machinery for investigation and court action provided by the act.

"In case the Food Commission shall be promptly organized the Attorney General will probably tender to the commission his services for an immediate State-wide public investigation of milk prices. Should there be a prolonged delay in the organization of the commission it will become necessary to adopt other remedies."

District Attorney Swann said last night that he recognized the seriousness of the situation and that the public could not give the subject its serious consideration too soon. "The matter is receiving the careful consideration of the District Attorney," he added.

portant banking houses. Among its notable transactions was the acquisition of the control of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway, which it sold to Jay Gould; the reorganization of the American Wire and Steel Company, later a part of the United States Steel Corporation, the reorganization of the Cramp Shipbuilding Company, and other large corporations.

Joseph Seligman came to America from Germany in 1845. After accumulating a small fortune he sent to Europe for his brothers, and Jesse and Henry Seligman came over and settled in Watertown, N. Y., Joseph remaining in business in Alabama. Several years later Joseph Seligman opened an importing house in New York, taking in his brothers. When the civil war began Joseph Seligman saw large opportunities in banking, and with his brothers founded J. & W. Seligman & Co. in 1862. The firm was successful from the start. Branches were established in London, Paris, Frankfort, and in San Francisco and New Orleans. Joseph Seligman was the founder of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, and with Dr. Felix Adler founded the Society for Ethical Culture. Isaac N. Seligman was his third son.

Isaac N. Seligman, although for years a Republican, was an admirer of President Wilson, and took a deep interest in the reforms of Mr. Wilson's Administration. When he returned from an extensive tour of Europe in 1913 Mr. Seligman in an interview, in which he expressed great confidence in President Wilson, made the following statement which has great interest in the light of subsequent events:

"While in Paris a prominent banker told me that a wealthy investor in Paris had hoarded $2,000,000 in gold and gold certificates which he held in expectation of a European complication. This goes to show the difficulty of getting any gold from the Bank of France, which is anxious to preserve and strengthen its gold reserves."

Mr. Seligman was one of the most active workers for the reorganization of the State Tax Department to promote efficiency. In 1915 he appeared before the Legislature as Chairman on State and Municipal Taxation of the New York Chamber of Commerce. He also favored strongly a State income tax to relieve the taxation of real estate in New York City. In this proposal, as in many others, he shared the opinions of his brother, Professor E. R. A. Seligman of Columbia University.

Mr. Seligman was known as a collector of manuscripts. He owned the most complete collection of Washington Irving manuscripts, which was exhibited at the New York Public Library. He got a part of this collection at the sale of the Hoe library, and he bought Bishop Hurst's collection and some from the Chamberlain library.

Places of Honor and Trust.

Among the honorary positions held by Mr. Seligman were those of trustee of the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, member of the Advisory Committee of the Republican National Committee, Director of the Sound Money League, Chairman of the Finance Committee and Treasurer of the Citizens Union.

He was a Trustee of the United States Savings Bank, a Trustee in the United States of the Munich Reinsurance Company, and of the Russia Insurance Company of Petrograd, a Director of the Lincoln Trust Company, and Treasurer of The American Hebrew. He was a member of the National Conference on Charities and Correction, Treasurer of the City and Suburban Homes Company, Trustee of Columbia University, member of the Columbia Alumni Association, Director of the New York Forest Preserve Association, Trustee of St. John's Guild, memoer of the Committee of Seven for Suppression of Raines Law Hotels, Trustee of the McKinley Memorial Association, Vice President United Hebrew Charities, Vice President People's Institute, and a member of the Cooperative Committee on Playgrounds. Mr. Seligman was a Trustee of the Civic Forum, of the Legal Aid Society of the National Civic Federation, and Chairman of the Finance Committee of the National Child Labor Association.

He was a member of the Lotos Club, the University Club, the New York Athletic Club, the City Club, the National Arts Club, the Columbia Club, the Recess Club, the Midday Club, the Lawyers' Club, St. Andrew's Club, the University Athletic Club, the Lakewood Country Club, Garden City Golf Club, Seabright Club, and the Republican Club.

Always a worker for the betterment of his fellowmen, Mr. Seligman was one of those leaders of the Jews who believed that nothing should be done to differentiate between them and other Americans. When, at the beginning of America's part in the war it was proposed that a regiment of Jews be formed, Mr. Seligman spoke out against it, voicing his belief that a Jew should be a Jew in religion, and in all things else an American with other Americans. In a letter to THE TIMES condemning the proposal to raise a Jewish regiment, he wrote:

"I, however, conceive it to be an error to single out any particular race in our country as requiring any impulse for patriotism.

"The Jews as a race have always, both here and abroad, displayed good citizenship and true devotion to the best interests of their country, and require no outside influence to arouse their patriotism. No greater mistake can be made, in my opinion, by any friend of the Jews than by organizing any purely Jewish leagues or associations of patriotism which may give the public a distorted impression and which can only disadvantageously reflect on the Jewish race. This whole movement is unnecessary and should be discountenanced. I, for one, am unalterably opposed to any such procedure."

Five years ago, in June, 1912, Mr. Seligman's youngest brother, Alfred L. Seligman, a member of the banking firm, died from a fractured skull received when he was thrown out of his automobile. The accident occurred at Seventy-second Street and West End Avenue. Two machines, one carrying Mr. Seligman, collided, and the banker was thrown to the street, his head striking the curb.

Death a Severe Shock.

"I am greatly shocked and distressed to hear of the death of Mr. Seligman," said Mayor Mitchel last night. "I have had the highest regard for him as a man, and as a public-spirited and patriotic citizen. I feel his death as a personal loss, as well as a loss to the community."

Louis Marshall, long a friend of Mr. Seligman, last night paid this tribute to his memory:

"Mr. Seligman will long be mourned in this community. He was universally regarded as a fine exemplar of civic virtue. His interest in all movements for the advancement of the public welfare and stimulation of every philanthropic endeavor was unselfish and unflagging. He was generous, considerate, and endowed with all the graces of a true gentleman. He loved his country, his city, and his fellow-men, shrank from no sacrifice in their behalf, and enjoyed their unbounded respect and confidence. The memory of this righteous man will be as a blessing."

Eugenius H. Outerbridge, President of the New York Chamber of Commerce, said:

"I am shocked indeed to learn of Mr. Seligman's death. Interested as he was in all good works, his death will bring a great loss to the community. His life was devoted to charitable and philanthropic work and civic usefulness. He was interested in the good of his fellow men, and used to be known as the 'universal treasurer' of charitable organizations. As he was widely known as a great and good man, so will he be widely lamented."

Felix M. Warburg, when told of the death of Mr. Seligman, said he felt his loss too deeply to say much, and added: "A kinder man never drew breath."

Lieut. Seligman Starts for Home.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Sept. 30.—Following receipt of a telegram this afternoon saying that his father, Isaac Newton Seligman, had been thrown from a horse and killed this afternoon, Lieutenant Joseph L. Seligman took the first train for New York. Lieutenant Seligman, a reserve officer and graduate of Plattsburg, is an aid to Brig. Gen. Philips in command of the camp.

We bought a great many winter overcoats last season because we knew that wool was going up. Today we place on sale 1176 of the coats that we carried over.

A letter to 2500 Wallach customers would clear the lot. But we want these winter coats to make new customers for Hart Schaffner & Marx clothes—new customers for Wallach Bros. stores.

Most of these overcoats could not be duplicated under $35 today.

Quite a few of them are worth $40, while some are worth $45 and $50.

Single breasted, double breasted, pinch back, belted or plain.

There's a little lot (26 overcoats to be exact) with leather piping at collar, pockets and belt, made with silk lined shoulders.

There are browns, blues, grays and oxfords; also smart rough mixtures cut big and swagger.

Some are full silk lined, others part silk lined, and some with silk shoulders and worsted linings.

Not all sizes in all styles, of course, but plenty of choice in each size.

This is a very real chance. We only wish there were five times 1176, for every coat will mean a real friend of this house.

Please come as soon as you can. There are more today than there will be tomorrow. They'll go fast at $23.

Prompt Balances—Statements Out On Time

BOOKKEEPING by the old style pen-and-ink method means duplicate effort on the part of the bookkeeper. Modern efficiency cuts out useless operations in all branches of industry, speeds up work, cuts down cost and increases the returns.

With hand bookkeeping several distinct operations are necessary entering charges, posting ledger, distributing sales, making out statements and securing Trial Balances.

With Elliott-Fisher The Bookkeeping Machine, all necessary records are made at one operation. This involves less labor, less time, practically eliminates the possibility of error in posting and assures the correctness of each day's work.

The Proof Sheet (made at the same time as posting the ledger and making the statement) makes it possible to keep each day's work complete and up-to-date. There is no end-of-the month rush, worry or congestion. There is nothing-to-do-at-the-end-of-the-month-but-mail-the-statement.

J. W. Carter & Company of Nashville, Tenn. are manufacturers of men's medium welt shoes. Finding their bookkeeping department taxed beyond its limit, they sought relief. Elliott-Fisher Bookkeeping Machines were installed after a thorough investigation and this is what they say of results:

"At the time we put in Elliott-Fisher The Bookkeeping Machine we were having a great deal of trouble in keeping up the work of the office as well as getting our balance at the end of the month. But since putting in this machine we have increased our business fifty per cent., and are able to take care of the business with greater ease. Our books are now kept by two young men who practically were without experience when we gave them charge of the books.

"We never fail to get our balance on the second day of the month. If we could not secure another one of these machines we would not take five thousand dollars for the one we have."

The Proof Sheet is proof of the accuracy of Elliott-Fisher Machine Bookkeeping. It affords the executive as well as the bookkeeper evidence of where every account stands. It means prompt trial balances, statements out on time the first of the month—and, naturally, quicker collections.

Investigate Elliott-Fisher Bookkeeping Machine. It will pay. We will gladly answer any questions. Write us or, better still, phone our nearest office (one in all principal cities). Address, Elliott-Fisher Company, 217 Broadway.

MAYOR WILL FIGHT, HE TELLS CITIZENS AT GREAT MEETING

"Hearst, Hylan, and the Hohenzollerns" Will Be the Objects of His Attack.

AMERICANISM THE ISSUE

"You Have Been a Patriotic Mayor," Says C. E. Hughes, Urging Him to Run.

ROOSEVELT ADDS HIS PLEA

"There Is Nothing Fifty-Fifty About His Patriotism," He Tells Crowd Amid Great Cheers.

Mayor John Purroy Mitchel, standing on the steps of City Hall at the noon hour yesterday, told a cheering, enthusiastic crowd of 10,000 persons that he would be their candidate for re-election on an independent ticket. The crowd had assembled to prove to the Mayor that there was a genuine demand for his candidacy. Six prominent citizens a few minutes before had offered the Mayor a "popular nomination." In accepting it the Mayor, in an even dozen words, thus summed up his platform and his campaign issue: "I will make the fight one against Hearst, Hylan, and the Hohenzollerns."

There was no doubt the Mayor had touched a popular chord. The crowd responded with a spontaneous outburst of approval. It cheered again and again, hats were thrown into the air, and hundreds waved small American flags. The coupling of Mr. Hearst's name with that of the Tammany nominee and the German autocracy seemed to furnish the spark that was necessary to start a conflagration of popular approval. No one doubted that the war issue was what the people wanted emphasized. The Mayor was quick to seize the situation, and drove home the fact that Americanism would be the big issue in the campaign.

In many ways it was one of the most remarkable demonstrations that had ever taken place before the historic city structure. In point of numbers, old-timers said it outdid any demonstration that had ever taken place there. The crowd was massed from the top step of the hall as far back as Mail Street and from Park Row to Broadway. All classes of citizens were represented, and they applauded vigorously every point made by the speakers, who represented an unusual combination. There was an ex-President of the United States and an unsuccessful candidate for that office. A letter of approval was read from still another former President, William Howard Taft. In the order of their appearance, the speakers were E. H. Outerbridge, President of the Chamber of Commerce, who acted as master of ceremonies; Charles E. Hughes, Henry Morgenthau, ex-Ambassador to Turkey; George B. McGuire, Vice President of the State Federation of Labor; Oscar S. Straus, once candidate for Governor of New York and now Chairman of the Public Service Commission, and Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States.

Mayor in Fighting Trim.

All the speakers lauded Mayor Mitchel's administration, and insisted that he was the only candidate who could keep Tammany from returning to power. Likewise all brought forward the issue of Americanism, and praised the Mayor's stanch support of the national Administration. Mr. Hughes declared that it was the highest duty of Republicans to stand by the Mayor, and Colonel Roosevelt proclaimed that Mr. Mitchel was not only the best Mayor that New York City ever had, but that he was a fighting Mayor and that he was serving the nation as an American citizen and a patriot. The Mayor was in fighting trim, and he had the crowd with him from beginning to end. They interrupted him with cheers when he declared:

"New York is offered Hylan, the nominee of Murphy and of Hearst, the candidate of Untermyer and his kind, who, out of association with Dumba and Bernstorff and their like, raise their heads to spit venom at those who have taken a strong and active stand with America and against Germany. I will make this fight against Hearst, Hylan, and the Hohenzollerns, against Murphy, Cohalan, O'Leary, and all the Tammany brood; against the corruptionists and against the disaffected, against all who would plunge New York back into the welter of police debauchery, of graft, of slovenly government, of neglect, of poor service, of brutality, and of waste that has characterized every Tammany administration this city ever had."

It was exactly 12:30 o'clock when the eminent speakers pushed their way through the crowd on the steps of the City Hall and faced the multitude. Colonel Roosevelt was in the lead, and a shout went up which brought out the famous Rooseveltian grin. He waved a crumpled campaign hat and shouted above the din:

"Three cheers for Mayor Mitchel, absolutely the best Mayor New York ever had! Three cheers for him as the absolute incarnation of Americanism!"

That suited the temper of the crowd, and it responded. Mr. Outerbridge had difficulty in getting a hearing for Mr. Hughes, the first speaker. After a time the crowd quieted down, and Mr. Hughes, turning to the Mayor, said:

"Mr. Mayor, this great outpouring of the citizens of New York, is a tribute to you personally. We believe in you. We, knowing your work and your achievements, are here to express our absolute confidence in you. Bitter are the attacks of ignorance and of malice. Ma-

Suggests Adobe Wall Penalty for the "Willful" Senators

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 1.—Judge Walter R. Burns of the United States District Court, in charging the Federal Grand Jury at the beginning of the October term today, after calling by name Senators Stone of Missouri, Hardwick of Georgia, Vardaman of Mississippi, Gronna of North Dakota, Gore of Oklahoma, and La Follette of Wisconsin, said:

"If I had a wish, I would that you men had jurisdiction to return bills of indictment against these men. They ought to be tried promptly, and fairly, and I believe this court could administer the law fairly; but I have a conviction as strong as life that this country should stand them up against an adobe wall tomorrow and give them what they deserve."

"If any man deserves death, it is a traitor. I would that I could pay for the ammunition. I would like to attend the execution, and if I were in the firing squad I would not want to be the marksman who had the blank shell. Deliberate judgment, supported by the head and having a warm reflective spot in the heart, prompts these words.

"These men are a disgrace to their country. How can any American Senator consent to breathe the same atmosphere as that breathed by such creatures?"

TAKE UP APPEALS TO EXPEL SENATORS

Committee Will Consider Tomorrow Action Against La Follette, Gronna, Stone.

ACCUSED OF DISLOYALTY

Wadsworth and Marshall Present Additional Protests—Stokes Wants Them Shot.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Animated by the flood of telegrams and letters that have poured into the Capitol for the last week, the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections today decided to meet Wednesday to consider the widespread demands for the expulsion of Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, Senator Gronna of North Dakota, and Senator Stone of Missouri on grounds of disloyalty.

Members of the committee declined to discuss the accusations made or to predict what action the committee would take. The committee intends to take up all of the resolutions and petitions on the subject submitted to the Senate and decide whether sufficient basis lies to make a report to the Senate advising a vote on expulsion.

From the trend of sentiment as expressed in the lobby the Senate today appeared averse to any move at the present time looking to the impeachment of the three Senators. Talk in the lobby had it that if the committee failed to report to the Senate one of the Senators might introduce a resolution upon which a test vote might come.

Senator Wadsworth offered letters and telegrams from U. S. Grant Post, No. 327, G. A. R., of Brooklyn; Sidney Post, G. A. R., of Ithaca, N. Y.; the Rotary Club of Ithaca, citizens of Trumansburg, and a number of individuals. Vice President Marshall offered letters from W. E. D. Stokes of New York, the Kewanis Club, a business organization of St. Paul, and the Wisconsin Boys' Welfare Association.

Brooklyn G. A. R. Post's Protest.

U. S. Grant Post, G. A. R., of Brooklyn sent resolutions as follows:

Whereas, this nation is at war and at such time we can recognize only two classes among the residents of the country —namely, patriots and traitors; and

Whereas all over the land and especially in our large cities, there exists a propaganda of treason and disployalty under cover of free speech and free press; and

Whereas recent developments have shown that the diplomatic representatives of certain Governments have grossly abused the courtesies incident to their position by a system of intrigue and spying in the interests of the Governments; and

Whereas utterances or acts of disloyalty to the policies of our Government, whether by private individuals or public officials, high or low, in executive, judicial, or legislative bodies, are reprehensible and in this crisis closely allied to treason, and should be summarily dealt with; and

Whereas such acts tend to incite riots, strikes, and the planting and exploding of bombs in our factories and industrial plants and the organizing of meetings of the lawless elements, thus giving aid and comfort to the enemies of our Government; and

Whereas such acts neutralize the work of our armies at the front and undermine their confidence in the Government, and tend to prolong the war; now, therefore,

Resolved, That U. S. Grant Post, 327, G. A. R., calls upon the Executives of both nation and State to take immediate steps to stop these practices and to warn all the people living under the protection of the flag to refrain from all acts of disloyalty on pain of suffering the penalties of treason.

The Rotary Club of Ithaca sent a resolution reading:

Whereas, Senator Robert M. La Follette, Senator William J. Stone, and Senator Asle J. Gronna and others are deliberately and maliciously obstructing, delaying, and endeavoring to kill legislation designed to enable the United States to vigorously and effectively prosecute the war;

Therefore, we, the undersigned, residents of Tompkins County, N. Y., respectfully request that you take such immediate action as will remove such enemies of the country's welfare from the United States Senate.

Stokes Wants Offenders Shot.

W. E. D. Stokes wrote to Vice President Marshall:

"On the suppression of disloyalty the safety of this country, the shortening of this war and the preservation of the lives of our brave young men at the front depend.

"Our citizens demand an immediate secret investigation by a patriotic committee of the Senate and House of the charges of treason so widely circulated against Senators La Follette, Stone, and Gronna, and against Congressmen Mason, Britten, Baer and others, and if their anti-war records and their actions since the war started show that they are guiltless of these charges of disloyalty,

NEW YORK TAKES $50,000,000 AS LOAN DRIVE OPENS

10,000 SALESMEN AT WORK

BANKS GIVE QUICK AID

Rousing Meeting at City Hall Follows Parade of Soldiers, School Children, and Salesmen.

The campaign for subscriptions to America's second war loan, consisting of $3,000,000,000 of United States Government 4 per cent. convertible gold bonds, was launched in this city yesterday. There was much enthusiasm and earnestness in evidence, and everywhere was a feeling of supreme confidence in the success of the gigantic financial venture. It was estimated last night that $50,000,000 had been subscribed in this city yesterday. The Liberty Loan Committee for the New York Federal Reserve District has made such comprehensive arrangements for the activities of its network of committees that early in the morning the vast army of Liberty Loan workers promptly started its labors.

In Wall Street, from bank President to office boy, attention was concentrated upon the work for the Liberty Loan, and it was practically the only subject of conversation. Over night all the large office and bank buildings had been covered with new posters, large and small, and the general appearance of the financial district indicated that the world's money centre was concerned with only one job, namely, the flotation of the Second Liberty Loan, the proceeds of which are to be used to feed, clothe, and arm our soldiers and help the Allies to do the same.

The filing of subscriptions began early and continued throughout the day. The New York Life Insurance Company applied for $10,000,000; the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific Railroads each subscribed to $5,000,000 through Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and the Republic Iron and Steel Company sent in applications totaling $4,800,000. The Manufacturers Trust Company of Brooklyn applied for $2,500,000; the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank for $2,000,000, and Bernhard, Scholle & Co., Maitland, Coppell & Co., and the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company each took $1,000,000.

Ceremony Opens Campaign.

The opening of the campaign did not lack ceremony. The church bells rang at midnight, proclaiming the beginning of the great national effort. Before the opening of business, 200 or more bond salesmen—part of the thousands of workers enlisted in the campaign—gathered in Wall Street, and, accompanied by military bands, two companies of Coast Artillery from Fort Hamliton, two detachments of militia from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the Fifteenth Precinct Junior Police, and about 800 school children in costume marched up to the City Hall, where they were received by Mayor Mitchel. The army of bondmen was headed by Allen B. Forbes of Harris, Forbes & Co., Chairman of the Distribution Committee of the Liberty Loan Committee.

Brief addresses were made by the Mayor, Mr. Forbes, and Mortimer L. Schiff. The Mayor signed a subscription blank calling for a $50 bond. He expressed the belief that the people of this city would respond generously to the call for subscriptions and reviewed the record achieved in the first campaign. About 12 per cent. of the people of the country who reside within this district, he said, offered to take half of all that was offered.

"New York City," the Mayor said, "has a reputation to maintain. From the beginning of the war in Europe we here called the attention of the country to the necessity of national preparedness. Before the declaration of war, when the question of peace or war was hanging in the balance, a million citizens of this city swore allegiance to the President of the United States, and sent their promise to Washington to support his hands in whatever he might be called upon to do. New York State has contributed her sons to the cause of democracy and freedom. We have today, I think, approximately a hundred thousand men in the camps or at the front across the Atlantic. This is a record to live up to. This is a standard to maintain. We and you cannot afford to let the work of New York fall behind in this offering which you go out to make to the people today."

Forbes Confident of Success.

Mr. Forbes thanked the Mayor for his encouraging remarks, and pointed out that while the task of rasing the second loan was greater than that of the first, he was nevertheless entering the campaign with even greater confidence of success. "The issues," he said, "are clear. The necessity is greater. The nation has been educated to the wisdom of buying bonds. As an appeal to the patriotism of the American man or woman, and as an investment of the soundest character, these bonds should have a tremendous popular response. Where four and a half millions of our hundred millions responded to the first call, we may confidently expect twice as many millions to answer the second.

"Upon us of the New York Federal Reserve district must necessarily fall the heaviest burden of this vast distri-

German Prisoners Express Longing for Peace; Say Officers Are Unwilling to Take Risks

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Oct. 1, (by Canadian Press.)—Reports that the rank and file of the enemy troops have a great longing for peace are confirmed by every prisoner captured.

One of their chief grievances is the failure of their higher officers to take risks. Even company commanders freely depute to the under-officers their duty while in the trenches, and remain well back from the front.

This is so different from the relations between Canadian officers and men that it is deeply impressed on the minds of the Germans on every occasion when there is hand-to-hand fighting in which Canadian officers invariably lead their men, while the German officers seldom do so.

They are not actuated by fear, and it must be assumed that they are obeying orders in thus hanging back. Very great losses of the German officer class early in the war may have made it necessary to conserve their leaders.

Whatever is the reason for their failure to take risks as great as those to which their men are subjected, the latter are deeply discontented.

GARFIELD STOPS COAL FOR CANADA

Issues an Order to Divert Shipments from the Great Lakes to the Northwest.

FAMINE THREATENED THERE

Only 53,000 of 180,000 Tons Shipped Daily to North Have Reached It.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—To save the coal situation in the Northwest, Fuel Administrator Garfield issued an order tonight stopping for the time being the shipment of coal into Canada from the lake ports. The purpose of the order is to divert this coal to the Northwest, where there is great and immediate need of it. About 180,000 tons of coal are shipped from lake ports daily, of which only about 53,000 tons have been reaching the Northwest. A total of 150,000 tons a day must be shipped until the close of navigation to meet the needs of this region. The order follows:

Washington, Oct. 1, 1917.

Order of the United States Fuel Administrator relative to the shipment, distribution, and apportionment of coal reshipped by water at Lake Erie ports:

It appearing to the United States Fuel Administrator that the quantity of coal moving by lake shipment from Lake Erie ports to American lake ports, on Lakes Superior and Michigan, is inadequate for the supply of the portion of the United States supplied from said ports on Lakes Superior and Michigan, as compared with the quantity of coal so moving to Canadian lake ports and to American lake ports, located on lakes other than Lakes Superior and Michigan, and that the supply of coal at present available for shipment by rail, and of railroad freight cars for the carriage thereof, moving such portion of the United States supplied from said lake ports on Lakes Superior and Michigan, are insufficient to make up the deficiency in the supply of coal moving by lake.

The United States Fuel Administrator, acting under authority of an executive order of the President of the United States, dated Aug. 23, 1917, appointing said administrator, and in furtherance of the purpose of said order and of the act of Congress therein referred to and approved Aug. 10, 1917, hereby orders and directs that until further or other order of the Fuel Administrator, and subject to modification hereafter by him:

1. All producers of coal having contracts for delivery of coal by shipment to Lake Erie ports for transshipment and water carriage from such ports shall continue such shipments to at least the same extent and with the same frequency as at present or heretofore since Sept. 1, 1917; and that

2. All dock companies, jobbers, and other agencies receiving such coal at said Lake Erie ports shall forward the same by the earliest available carriers by water to American lake ports on Lake Superior or Lake Michigan for delivery to, and use by, dealers and consumers usually supplied from such Lake Superior and Lake Michigan ports; and that

(3.) All dock companies, jobbers, consignees, and other agencies receiving such coal at any such ports on Lake Superior and Lake Michigan, shipped to such ports from Lake Erie ports, and all jobbers, consignees, and other agencies receiving any such coal through reshipment or reconsignment from such lake ports on Lakes Superior and Michigan, are hereby prohibited from consigning, reshipping, or reconsigning, or reshipping, any such coal to any points either in Canada or the United States, other than points in the Northwest, which have heretofore usually been supplied with coal from such American lake ports on Lakes Superior and Michigan.

H. A. GARFIELD,
United States Fuel Administrator.

The plans for the regulation and control of the coal situation will be disclosed to the State Fuel Administrators at a conference to be held tomorrow morning in the office of Dr. Garfield. After Dr. Garfield's address there will be a discussion on matters of State organizations. Herbert Hoover, the Food Administrator, also will address the meeting.

Dr. Garfield stated emphatically tonight that no ruling whatever had been made in any way altering the President's proclamation regarding jobbers' commissions.

ITALIANS HOLD GAINS, HAVE 2,019 PRISONERS

Repel Further Austrian Attacks on Their Newly-Won Bainsizza Plateau Positions.

ROME, Oct. 1.—In their offensive operations of the last three days General Cadorna's troops have taken 2,019 prisoners, the War Office announced today. Further Austrian attacks upon the Italian lines on the Bainsizza Plateau, which were pushed forward in the recent attacks, were completely repulsed. The text of the statement reads:

On the Bainsizza Plateau the enemy renewed his attacks on the positions recently occupied by us. He was everywhere completely repulsed.

The number of prisoners taken in the offensive action of the last three days is 2,019, including 63 officers.

On the Carso there was lively patrol activity.

In the Val du Fumo Adamello enemy parties attempting to reach our positions between Passo delle Porta and Forcel Rosso Pass were repulsed and pursued by our patrols, who captured a large quantity of ammunition and explosives.

During Saturday night hostile aircraft dropped bombs on Palmanova, Aquileia, Monfalcone, and other localities on the Lower Isonso without doing material damage. One woman was killed.

SEEKS COHALAN FACTS OF LANSING

Resolution Presented to State Senate Requests Secretary to Supply Information

ABOUT THE JUSTICE'S ACTS

Senators Generally Favor an Inquiry Into His Pro-German Activities.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 1.—By unanimous consent Senator George B. Wellington of Rensselaer introduced in the Senate tonight a resolution requesting Secretary Lansing to supply to Governor Whitman and the Senate any additional evidence in its possession, indicating that Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of the Supreme Court counseled the commission of acts in violation of international law or had himself committed such acts as to render him unfit to continue on the bench.

On motion of the President pro tem. of the Senate, Elon R. Brown, the resolution was received and laid on the table. Senator Brown announced that he would like to submit the Cohalan charges to a conference of the Republican Senators before the resolution was taken up for final action.

There is every prospect that the resolution in a slightly amended form will be adopted. There was no indication tonight of opposition among Republican Senators, and it seems doubtful whether the Democrats will generally oppose it.

A suggestion was made tonight that the resolution might be jeopardized by a provision in the law, under which only matter specially recommended by the Governor can be taken up at an extraordinary session of the Legislature, but Governor Whitman said that if the question was raised in the Republican Conference tomorrow he would send a special message urging action along the lines of the Wellington resolution:

The resolution reads:

Whereas, It has been charged in the public press that Mr. Justice Cohalan of New York City has counselled with the German Government to the end that it should violate international law in the commission of prohibited acts against persons and property; and,

Whereas, It has been stated that the Secretary of State of the United States has given out an item of alleged evidence to sustain such charge, and that there is further evidence bearing on the subject in the possession of the Federal Government, now be it

Resolved, That the Senate of the State of New York, jealous of the dignity and purity of the office of Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, respectfully requests the Secretary of State of the United States, if not inconsistent with the welfare of the nation, to cause to be transmitted to the Governor of the State of New York and to the Clerk of the Senate memoranda of the evidence in the possession of the Federal Government tending to establish the charge that either by conspiracy with agents of the German Government or otherwise Mr. Justice Cohalan has counseled the commission of such acts, or has himself committed such acts, as to render him an unfit person to continue to be a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

The attitude of the Democrats was summed up by Senator James J. Foley, who represents Murphy's district. He said:

"Without having had an opportunity to examine the resolution very closely, I should say that there is no general disposition on the part of the Democrats to oppose it, nor is there any disposition to prejudge the case of Justice Cohalan."

Nearly every Democratic Senator is a Tammany man, and not one of them had a kind word for Justice Cohalan. One Tammany Senator recalled today that Justice Cohalan was a member of a conference held in Chicago during the Presidential campaign last year, when, with Jeremiah O'Leary of the American Truth Society and others, he joined in a resolution opposing President Wilson and indorsing Hughes. This was before Hughes had declared himself on the sinking of the Lusitania and on Americanism.

Senator Wellington said that what he had in mind when he drafted his resolution was that it might become necessary for the Governor to summon a new extraordinary session should additional information bearing on the conduct of Justice Cohalan be forthcoming from the State Department.

"The people have a right to know what there is behind the information already made public by the Secretary of State," said Senator Wellington. "I should think Justice Cohalan himself would want to see this matter cleared up.

"We must not take anything for granted, and for that reason I have asked the State Department at Washington to supply any additional information it may possess. If a prima facie case is established, we should go to it without delay. It is a very serious matter in such critical times as the present to permit a suspicion against the probity and patriotism of our Judges to lurk in the public mind."

The Assembly was in session only five minutes today and a quorum was not present. Two New York City Assemblymen, Meyer W. Schuyler, Republican, and Perry M. Armstrong, Democrat, it was said, are preparing resolutions in connection with the Cohalan disclosures. One or both may be introduced tomorrow. The Wellington resolution as a Senate resolution would not go to the Assembly for concurrence.

BIGGEST AIR RAID ON LONDON MADE BY 4 SQUADRONS

Two Groups Penetrate the Sky Barrage and Attack the Southwestern District.

MANY BOMBS ARE DROPPED

Defense Guns Continue a Deafening Roar for Two and a Half Hours.

PRESS CRY FOR REPRISALS

Print Maps, Showing German Towns Available for Attack—9 Killed in Sunday's Raid.

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 2.—The strongest air attack yet attempted on London and the coast towns by the Germans was carried out last night by four groups of hostile airplanes.

Some of the machines got through to London and bombed the southwestern district. A terrific barrage was sent up from the defense guns, and the roar of battle lasted intermittently for two and a half hours.

The fire from the defending guns was longer and louder than ever before. A rain of shrapnel fell in all sections of the city.

The Germans bombed coast towns as they passed over proceeding toward London.

Two of the groups succeeded in getting a number of machines through the sky barrage. Numerous bombs were dropped on the southwestern district, which is thickly populated with the homes of the upper and middle classes. The streets were virtually deserted save for a few policemen.

Perfect Weather Favored Raid.

The weather was perfect for air operations, as there was a bright full moon, with no clouds or wind.

The people of London expected a raid and were waiting for signals. Soon after 7 o'clock motors of the Volunteer Corps sped through the streets blowing their sirens and displaying an illuminated notice, "take cover." The telephone exchanges notified their subscribers, and other measures were put into execution to inform the people of the impending raid.

Many of the theatres continued their performances despite the raid. At the conclusion of the performance in one of the leading theatres tonight the manager appeared on the stage, and invited the audience and stage hands to vote on the question of continuing the night performances. All voted in favor of carrying them on as usual.

Lord French Reports on Attack.

A group of hostile airplanes crossed the Essex Coast at 7 o'clock this evening and proceeded across Essex toward London. This group of machines was followed at about a quarter of an hour's interval by a second group, which pursued the same course.

The first attack on London was delivered from the northeast about 7:45 P. M. Most of the raiders were turned back, but one or more of the machines penetrated the defenses and dropped bombs in the southwestern district.

About 8:15 P. M the second group of raiders attempted to cross the defenses at various points in northeast and north London, but without success until shortly after 9 o'clock, when a few of the machines passed across London and bombs were again dropped in the southwestern district.

Meanwhile a third group of raiders crossed the Kentish coast and dropped bombs at various places. This group did not penetrate very far westward.

A fourth group of enemy machines crossed the Essex coast about 8:50 o'clock and proceeded toward London, which was approached shortly before 10 o'clock. They did not penetrate further than the northeastern outskirts of London, where some bombs are reported to have been dropped.

No report of casualties or damage have yet been received.

Battles in the Air.

While a terrific barrage was kept up, with the bursting shrapnel furnishing one of the greatest pyrotechnical displays London ever saw, a thrilling battle in the air took place between enemy aircraft and British aviators in the northern district, according to special constables, who said they witnessed it by means of powerful binoculars. Although the machines were thousands of feet in the air, the fire of the machine guns could be heard distinctly below. When the echoes of this fight died away the anti-aircraft gunfire in the city ceased, but it could be heard in the distance, indicating that the enemy was being driven off under a heavy bombardment.

According to a report from an Essex district, a heavy mist which came up while the raid was in progress caused one raider to lose his way while going back to the coast. The German flew very low and could be seen clearly and appeared to be enveloped by a ring of bursting shells. Seemingly trapped, the airman began a series of dips and other hair-raising evolutions. He succeeded in breaking through the shellfire and made for sea, pursued by a streak of gunfire.

Although details were slow in coming in, it was apparent that the barrage of the anti-aircraft guns again was effective in thwarting the German efforts. As on other nights, the guns made it so hot for the raiders that they dropped bombs in open places, their one concern apparently being to unload and get away.

Women in Essen Peace Riot Against Concealing Terms

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A demonstration against the German Government on Saturday at Essen, home of the Krupp works, in consequence of the decision of Chancellor Michaelis not to state Germany's peace terms is reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam.

Women formed a majority of the demonstrators, says the dispatch, breaking windows of the Town Hall and shouting demands for more food, for peace, and for the return of their men folk.

The police and military were called out to quell the riot. Two women were injured and several were arrested.

The whole of Essen is reported to be in a state of ferment.

SAY SPIES MENACE PERSHING'S FORCES

HOUSE COMMITTEE HOSTILE

Has Dropped $489,000 Item Proposed by the War Department for Intelligence Work.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—In a statement issued here tonight the Conference Committee on National Preparedness asserts that unless Congress takes prompt steps to save the appropriation sought by the War Department to enable Major Gen. Pershing to obtain military intelligence, the American campaign on the French front will be seriously handicapped. The statement was issued because the House Appropriations Committee had failed to include in its report on the Urgent Deficiency bill the item of $489,000 for this work recommended by the War Department. It reads as follows:

"Disregarding the urgent plea of Major Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, acting Chief of Staff, and the recommendation of Secretary Baker, the House Committee on Appropriations has failed to report the appropriation of $489,000 for the military intelligence section of the General Staff. This appropriation was contained in the supplemental estimates of the War Department to be submitted as a part of the Urgent Deficiency bill.

"If Congress stands by the report of its committee, it not only means the crippling of a branch of the service that is of increasing importance as the war progresses. It means a serious handicap on General Pershing in his campaign on the western front.

"It is inconceivable that Congress will, through any false sense of economy, limit the scope of intelligence work at the very moment when the intercepted 'sunk without trace' telegrams from the German Minister to Argentina to the Swedish Foreign Office emphasize the need for expanding this department as rapidly as possible.

"Yet the detection of enemy activities, which might be considered under the head of 'counter spy work,' is a minor, almost a secondary, function of the intelligence bureau. Great Britain has never made public the sums she has expended for this service. Information from reliable sources, however, place these expenditures between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 a month.

"The intelligence or information section of the General Staff collects and distributes the information upon which the operation section makes its plans. Such information is gathered by American intelligence officers the world over—in the Balkans, in Russia, on the western front, in Mexico, in South America, even in the remote sections of India and the Far East. Its agents must have money at their command to collect information of military importance to the United States.

"General Pershing's observers at the battle front also are a part of the intelligence service. These observers, stationed at strategical points, supply the commander of the army in France with news of troop movements both of the enemy as well as by our Allies. It is the information upon which General Pershing will base his decisions after the Americans have occupied their trenches.

"While we are today relying upon the information supplied us by England, France, Italy, Belgium, and Russia, we must not depend upon it entirely in the future. No nation gives any other nation all the information it possesses unless such information fits in entirely with its own military policies. The time may come—who may say that it is not already here?—when the United States will no longer care to follow blindly the military leadership of any other nation, when we will consider that our own purposes in this war can most quickly be achieved by striking on some other front than that which is considered most important by our allies. To secure this independence of judgment we must have our own observers on all fronts.

"Even here in Washington, in the departments, spies are working to get information of value to the enemy. With the Pershing expedition itself are suspected traitors and spies whom the War Intelligence Department must watch.

"At any cost of money the work of our secret service must not be hampered. Any waste of money now, if it is waste, is small in comparison with waste of lives in the future."

COLUMBIA OUSTS TWO PROFESSORS, FOES OF WAR PLANS

FACULTY ASKED FOR ACTION

ADMITTED WRITING LETTERS

Two members of Columbia University Faculty—Professor James McKeen Cattell of the Department of Psychology and Assistant Professor Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana of the Department of English and Comparative Literature—were ousted from the university at a meeting of the Trustees yesterday afternoon upon charges that they had disseminated doctrines tending to encourage a spirit of disloyalty to the Government of the United States. Professor Dana declined last night to make any comment. Professor Cattell, at his home at Garrison, last night said that he was not surprised at the trustees' action, but he had no statement to make at present.

The specific instances upon which the allegation against Professor Cattell was based were contained in letters written by him last August to members of Congress urging them to vote against sending drafted soldiers to Europe. A sentence in each letter stated that the President of the United States and the Congress now in session had not been elected to "send conscripts to Europe."

Charges against Professor Dana contained statements regarding his activities in connection with the People's Council, to which he belonged. It was pointed out that he had been warned by President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia against joining an organization of that character, which was engaged in weakening the action of the American Government in its prosecution of the war against Germany.

Declare Professorships Vacant.

At the meeting of the Trustees of Columbia University held yesterday, the professorships held by James McKeen Cattell of the Department of Psychology and Henry W. L. Dana of the Department of English and Comparative Literature were declared vacant by unanimous action of the board. It was the judgment of the members of the university Faculties, in which the Trustees concurred, that both Professor Cattell and Professor Dana had done grave injury to the university by their public agitation against the conduct of the war. The members of the Committee on Instruction of the Faculty of Applied Science, representing the entire teaching staff of the Schools of Mines, Engineering, and Chemistry, united in a written request to the President that they and their work be protected from the ill results of the activities of Professors Cattell and Dana. The Committee of Nine, representatives of the University Council, which has been co-operating with a special committee of the Trustees in an inquiry into the state of teaching in the university, reported that the academic usefulness of both Professor Cattell and Professor Dana was ended, and recommended that Professor Cattell be retired from active service, and that Professor Dana be requested to resign.

Frank D. Fackenthal, Secretary of the university, said last night:

"If Professor Cattell had been retired it would have meant that he would still receive a pension and so be in a manner connected with the university. That is not the case, however. The two men were expelled."

Mr. Fackenthal explained that while the university council had recommended that Professor Cattell be retired and Professor Dana be requested to resign the university Trustees had by resolution dropped both professors.

Proceedings Began in March.

Proceedings which led to the action taken by the Trustees yesterday were begun on March 5 last, when a special committee, consisting of ex-Justice George L. Ingraham, John B. Pine, Francis S. Bangs, and Stephen Baker, was appointed to "inquire and ascertain whether doctrines which are subversive of or tending to the violation or disregard of, the Constitution or laws of the United States or of the State of New York, or which tend to encourage a spirit of disloyalty to the Government of the United States, or the principles upon which it is founded, are taught or disseminated by officers of the university; and, generally, to inquire into the state of teaching in the university."

At that meeting of the Trustees, the following resolutions were introduced and referred to this committee for consideration:

Resolved, That J. McKeen Cattell, Professor of Psychology, be suspended from the service of the university from and after this date during the remainder of the academic year.

Resolved, That the services of J. McKeen Cattell as an officer of instruction in the university be discontinued from and after June 30, 1917, unless his resignation is received prior to that date.

These resolutions were the direct result of a letter addressed by Professor Cattell last Spring to the Faculty Club, in which he referred to President Butler as "our many talented and much-climbing President," and suggested that the latter's home be given over for a Faculty Club. On receiving his apology the committee recommended that the resolutions be held for further consideration.

The incident came on Commencement Day last June, when the President delivered an address in the course of which he said:

"So long as national policies were in debate, we gave complete freedom, as is our wont and as becomes a university, freedom of assembly, freedom of speech, and freedom of publication to all members of the university who in lawful and decent ways might wish to inform and to guide public policy. Wrongheadedness and folly we might deplore, but we are bound to tolerate. So soon, however, as the nation spoke by the Congress and by the President, declaring that it would volunteer as one man for the protection and defense of civil liberty and self-government, conditions sharply changed.

"What had been tolerated before became intolerable now. What had been wrongheadedness was now sedition. What had been folly was now treason. In your presence, I speak by authority for the whole university—for my colleagues of the Trustees and for my colleagues of the Faculties—when I say, with all possible emphasis, that there is and will be no place in Columbia University, either on the rolls of its Faculties or on the rolls of its students, for any person who opposes or who counsels opposition to the effective enforcement of the laws of the United States, or who acts, speaks or writes treason.

"The separation of any such person from Columbia University will be as speedy as the discovery of his offense. This is the university's last and only word of warning to any among us, if such there be, who are not with whole heart and mind and strength committed to fight with us to make the world safe for democracy."

Dr. Butler's Warning Was Final.

In their report which resulted in the action against the two Professors, the Special Committee remarked on these words as follows:

"This warning was the final warning of the university to all connected with it in any capacity, from the highest to the lowest, and expressed the unalterable determination of the Trustees that all those connected with Columbia University, either on the rolls of its Faculties or on the rolls of its students, must loyally support all laws of the United States, and that any such person who should oppose or counsel opposition to the effective enforcement of the laws of the United States, or should speak or write or commit any act of sedition or treason, would be promptly separated from the university."

Last August Professor Cattell sent the first letter to Congress which brought down upon him the accusation that he was disloyal. This letter, written on the letterhead of Columbia University, Division of Philosophy, Psychology, and Anthropology, read:

> Sir: I trust that you will support a measure against sending conscripts to fight in Europe against their will. The intent of the Constitution and our consistent national policy should not be reversed without the consent of the people. The President and the present Congress were not elected "to send conscripts to Europe."
> Please read the enclosed statement. Respectfully, (Signed) J. McK. CATTELL.

The letters were received with indignation by several of the Congressmen addressed, and two of them wrote to President Butler. One said in his letter:

"I do not think that you will approve of this action of this man Cattell in sowing seeds of sedition and treason with the apparent sanction of the institution of which you are the honored head."

The other asked:

"Do you and your Trustees approve of putting the prestige of your great university back of such views as are expressed in this letter, as is done by the use of the university letterhead?"

The Special Committee's conclusion in the matter of Professor Cattell was as follows:

"Your committee reports that this action of Professor Cattell against the warnings that the President of the university, with the assent of the trustees, gave all those connected with the university, and, further, by the use of the letterhead of Columbia University, involved the university as affirming this statement made in this letter to Representatives in Congress in opposition to the enforcement of the laws of the United States."

Professor Dana joined the People's Council shortly after its organization and was one of its most prominent members. On Sept. 6 last, he made a trip to Washington as a representative of the council to call upon President Wilson. The President declined to see him.

"As a prominent member of that association (People's Council) Assistant Professor H. W. L. Dana has been exceedingly active. He has participated in their proceedings and has given to them the benefit of his name, his reputation, and his connection with the university. These activities of Professor Dana are in express disregard of the warning given by President Butler and a violation of his duty to the university."

The committee yesterday then offered the following resolutions, which were adopted by the trustees:

Resolved, That the continuance of the connection of James McKeen Cattell, Ph.D., LL.D., with the university is prejudicial to the welfare of the university, and that the best interests of the university require that his connection with the university shall cease and determine; and, further

Resolved, That the appointment of the said James McKeen Cattell as Professor of Psychology in this university be and the same hereby is terminated, and that his connection with the university cease and determine forthwith, and the said professorship is hereby declared vacant; and, further

Resolved, That the clerk be instructed to transmit a copy of the foregoing resolution to the said James McKeen Cattell.

The committee also recommended the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the continuance of the connection of Henry W. L. Dana, Ph.D., with the university is prejudicial to the welfare of the university, and that the best interests of the university require that his connection with the university shall cease and determine; and, further

Resolved, That the appointment of the said Henry W. L. Dana as Assistant Professor of Comparative Literature in this university be and the same hereby is terminated, and that his connection with the university cease and determine forthwith, and the said assistant professorship is hereby declared vacant; and, further

Resolved, That the clerk be instructed to transmit a copy of the foregoing resolution to the said Henry W. L. Dana.

President Butler, in a letter dated Sept. 28, urged the dismissal of Professor Cattell and that steps be taken to terminate Professor Dana's services for "public conduct prejudicial to the influence and good name of the university." He explained the circumstances attending his unusual recommendation by describing the activities of the two professors which continued in direct disregard of the warning he had given them at commencement. President Butler then quoted the following letter sent to him on Sept. 19 last by the entire membership of the Committee on Instruction of the Faculty:

"Thousands of Columbia men were greatly pleased and in a sense relieved when they heard or read the statement in your speech delivered last commencement, that the separation of any person from Columbia University would be as speedy as the discovery of his offense in opposing or counseling opposition to the Government, or who is not with whole heart and mind committed to fight with us 'to make the world safe for democracy.'

"We, the members of the Committee on Instruction of the Schools of Mines, Engineering and Chemistry, representing the Faculty of the schools, are very much distressed at the discredit which has been brought to the fair name of Columbia and to those engaged in its service, through the action of Professor J. M. Cattell and Dr. H. W. L. Dana. The newspaper reports of the activities of these men have occasioned us much embarrassment and lessened the power of our work and our influence in this national crisis.

"In our opinion, Columbia has been placed before the country in a false position by these men, and loyal members of its staff have been humiliated. For years to come the opinion in the public mind which these men have created will cause us to suffer. We are also anxious that our students shall be surrounded by those influences which, while encouraging vigorous independent thought, at the same time develop unquestioned loyalty to our country.

"We pray, therefore, for immediate relief and the safeguarding of our name as members of the Faculty of Columbia University."

President Butler, in his letter, said:

"Inasmuch as examples of the original letters written by Professor Cattell have been sent to and examined by me, and inasmuch as he has, on being directly asked the question, admitted writing these letters, his act in so doing comes directly within the scope of my public warning of June 6 last. I therefore recommend that Professor Cattell be peremptorily dismissed from the service of Columbia University.

"The facts in the case of Assistant Professor Dana are that, despite my public statement on June 6, and despite subsequent personal warnings given him by two of his colleagues on the teaching staff, he has throughout the Summer been in close public association with individuals and organizations that, under the guise of promoting peace, are in one form or another striving to weaken the national effort and to nullify the national will. These individuals and organizations have included some of the most irresponsible, irrational, and unpatriotic elements of the population.

"Professor Dana has been until very recently a member of the so-called People's Council, he has participated in their journeyings to and fro about he country, and he has given them the benefit of his name, his reputation, and his university connection. In so doing he has inflicted the gravest damage both upon his own repute and upon the good name and influence of Columbia University.

"Professor Dana, in discussing these matters with the President, feels that he has been actuated in his conduct only by the highest and most patriotic motives, and expresses the greatest surprise that he has become the subject of criticism either within or without the university. It has been pointed out to him, however, both by the President and by a number of his colleagues on the teaching staff, that the effect of his past conduct has been to make it quite impossible that he should now be able to exercise any worthy or patriotic influence upon the minds and characters of college students.

Distinguishes Between Cases.

"There are many reasons which make it desirable to distinguish, in the course of action to be taken, the case of Professor Dana from that of Professor Cattell. For a number of years it has been the strongly held opinion of the trustees that the interests of the university required the dismissal of Professor Cattell from its service. He has only been retained upon the rolls in deference to the wishes of some of his colleagues, who are now among those asking that his period of university service be terminated.

"Professor Dana, on the other hand, has heretofore given evidence of promise of usefulness as a college and university teacher, and there has never been reason to suppose that his conduct would be in any way prejudicial to the best interests of the university. I have taken occasion to discuss Professor Dana's case, in his presence, with the members of the Committee of Nine of the University Council, appointed to cooperate with the committee of the Trustees in an inquiry into the state of teaching in the university.

"After consideration of all the facts concerning Professor Dana's public conduct in the matter referred to, and after hearing Professor Dana's explanations, the Committee of Nine has, without dissent, concluded that Professor Dana's usefulness as an academic officer in Columbia University is over; that in the interest both of the university and of Professor Dana the least possible publicity should be attached to his going; that Professor Dana should forthwith put into the hands of the President his unconditional resignation and that Professor Dana should be granted leave of absence without salary during the current academic year.

"I submit these conclusions as a method of dealing with the case of Professor Dana that will terminate his university service without involving his immediate dismissal."

Professor Cattell was graduated by Lafayette College in 1880 at the age of 20. The next year he spent at the university of Göttingen, Germany, attending lectures of the celebrated psychologist Lotze. Later he went to the University of Leipsic studying under Wilhelm Wundt. He was also studied at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and at Cambridge, England. He was appointed to Columbia in 1890, becoming Professor of Psychology in 1891.

In 1911, the expulsion of Professor Joel Elias Spingarn stirred Columbia University in general and Professor Cattell in particular.

On that occasion he introduced a resolution at a meeting of the Faculty of Philosophy urging that a committee of five be empowered to investigate the manner of appointment and dismissal of the teaching force at Columbia. The resolution aimed at President Butler was lost.

Next, in 1913, after Professor Cattell's espousal of the cause of Dr. Jaques Loeb, who was refused admission by the Century Association, caused a furore in the university. It was rumored then that Professor Cattell was about to retire, but intercession by President Butler saved him.

Since the declaration of war against Germany Professor Cattell has been especially obnoxious to the Columbia Faculty because of his unhesitating denunciation of a war policy by our Government. His son, Owen Cattell, was sentenced last July to serve one day in the Tombs prison and to pay a fine of $500 for conspiring "to induce men of draft age not to register under the Conscription act." Young Cattell at this time lost his citizenship.

Professor Dana graduated from Harvard University in 1903, received the degree of Master of Arts in 1904, and a Doctor of Philosophy in 1910. He was appointed Instructor in English at Columbia in 1912, and recently was assistant professor. He is a grandson of Henry W. Longfellow.

CATTELL NOT SURPRISED.

But He Would Not Discuss His Dismissal for the Present.

Special to The New York Times.

GARRISON, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Professor Cattell refused to make any statement tonight on the matter of his dismissal by the Columbia Trustees. He was found in his home, Fort Defiance, which stands on the very peak of a lofty hill overlooking the Hudson River, six miles from here.

"I guess I know what you want of me," he said to THE TIMES reporter.

"Did they act on Dana's case, too?" he asked. When told that Professor Dana had also been dismissed, he said: "I am sorry, but I am not surprised. I do not want to give out any statement now, but will have to think the matter over carefully."

GREECE'S EYES THIS WAY.

Venizelos to Extend and Develop Relations with America.

ATHENS, Oct. 1.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Politis, announced in the Greek Chamber of Deputies that the new Venizelos régime would signalize its return to power by extending and developing relations with the United States and by giving the first definite recognition to the extensive Greek colonies all over the United States. He submitted several measures to this end, namely, the establishment of Consuls General at New York, San Francisco, and Chicago, Consuls at Boston and New Orleans, and some sixty honorary Consular positions at places where there are 1,000 to 1,500 Greeks.

The project also provides for a national fund to be administered by the Greek Legation at Washington. This national fund will be used," said the Minister, "to aid the societies looking after immigrants arriving in America, getting work for them, looking after them when sick. It will assist in founding schools, churches, benefit societies, and organizations for the spread of Greek literature and fine arts."

There was great applause in the Chamber when the Minister referred to extending Greek art and literature in America, as it was the first suggestion that Greece could furnish America something more than toiling masses. It appealed strongly to the national pride, which considers Greece as the birthplace of art and literature, and rather resents the idea that cheap labor is what Greece is chiefly contributing to America.

BULGARIA UPHOLDS REPLY.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 1.—A semi-official dispatch received from Sofia today says:

"Regarding an unconfirmed Washington dispatch, saying the Bulgarian Minister has declared that Bulgaria desires peace, as the termination of the war is an imperative necessity for the Central Powers, the Minister at Washington has been instructed to declare that Bulgaria does in fact desire peace, but only in unity with her allies, as indicated in the reply to the Pope."

Brandeis Silent on Peace Reports.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Associate Justice Brandeis of the Supreme Court declined tonight to comment on published reports that he would assist Colonel E. M. House in the compilation of data on peace for President Wilson. At the White House it was said nothing was known of the matter.

VATICAN DEPLORES KUEHLMANN SPEECH

Regrets His Reliance on the Sword When Concrete Peace Terms Had Been Expected.

FEAR OF GERMAN AMBITION

One Surmise Is That Berlin Asserts Power as a Means of Forcing Better Terms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 1.—Vatican circles are disappointed by the speech of Dr. von Kühlmann, German Foreign Secretary, to the Reichstag Main Committee on the subject of peace.

After Germany's vague answer to the Pontiff's note, it had been expected that Dr. von Kühlmann would indicate some concrete conditions on which Germany was ready to make peace. Kühlmann instead set forth, according to the view held here, principles diametrically opposed to those which actuated Pope Benedict in his appeal to the belligerents.

If imperialism and militarism are still to be the watchword of the German governing powers, Vatican circles remark, the note sent to the Pope is a hypocritical document, in which the Chancellor tried to flatter the Pontiff and make him believe that Germany was entirely in accord with him regarding a cessation of the conflict, also giving him to understand that she was perhaps ready to make certain concessions.

Kühlmann's speech, it is asserted here, has unveiled the still warlike spirit of the German governing party, whose acts are to be enforced by the sword. One hypothesis, some groups observe, may be that Germany thinks it is good policy to give an exhibition of her unshakable warlike strength in order to prepare the way for favorable peace negotiations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Bitter criticism of Dr. Michaelis, the German Imperial Chancellor, appears in the comments upon his recent speech received here today in a summary of editorials appearing in the Italian press, including Catholic organs. The cablegram from Rome follows:

"The Nationalistic paper, Idea Nazionale, asserts that the silence of the German Chancellor illustrates the war aims of Germany better than any words he might have pronounced. Germany is not sincerely striving for peace, and the peace talk which her agents are circulating everywhere is only intended to weaken the resistance of the Allies.

"An interesting comment appears in an official organ of the Vatican, the Corriere d'Italia. This paper says it would have been too much to believe that the German Chancellor would give the German peace conditions in full, but that there is a great difference between touching on peace terms and not saying one word about them.

"The Catholic paper then assails the Chancellor for not having in any way given satisfaction to the request implicitly included in the Papal note to the Teutonic Allies. The specific request of the Pope deserved, this paper states, a specific answer. The silence of the Chancellor is therefore an illustration of Germany's hunger for conquest and disregard for any human or divine law."

NOTE FAVORS FRANCE, GASPARRI WRITES

But Pope "Could Not Propose Any Solution Concerning Alsace-Lorraine," He Asserts.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The Eclair publishes a letter from Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal Secretary of State, to Bishop de Gibergues of Valance concerning the reception accorded the Papal peace note, in which the Papal Secretary expresses the satisfaction of Pope Benedict at the sentiments of the Catholic clergy of France, which the letter says are "all the more agreeable to his Holiness since the contrary attitude of the French press in general is inexplicable. Nowhere are nations specially favored in the Papal note they are France and Belgium."

The letter, which is dated Sept. 10, remarks that France certainly cannot take exception to the first two points of the Papal note concerning disarmament and obligatory arbitration, and continues:

"As to the damages to be replaced and the outlays for the war, the Holy Father proposes in the third place, as a general principle, reciprocal remission. He adds, however, that if in any case particular reasons are opposed to that view, which is verified in the case of Belgium, they can be weighed with justice and equity."

The letter then refers to the statement of former Premier Ribot that he is in accord with the Provisional Government of Russia, admitting that in eventual peace negotiations war indemnities should not be claimed, but reserving for France the right to require reparation for damages caused by "the malevolence of military commanders outside the necessities of war." The letter adds:

"The Pontifical note is couched in general terms and does not exclude reparation for such damages. But, even setting aside the enormous difficulties of establishing with precision in all the sectors of the war the damages caused needlessly by the fault of military commanders, it is for France to judge if it is suitable for it, even in the hypothesis of victory, to prolong the war, were it only for one year, to require of the enemy reparation for these damages with due account taken of the losses in money and men and the heaps of ruins in which the war would leave the Belgian and French territory now occupied."

Cardinal Gasparri's letter lays stress upon the fact that the Papal note desires that French territory be immediately evacuated completely. It then says that the Pope does not, and could not, propose any solution concerning Alsace-Lorraine. The letter adds that the Pope expresses hope that France and Germany will examine in a conciliatory spirit the aspirations of peoples, taking into account what is just and possible. Finally, the letter contends, the Pope's note favors France in different points and offends it in none.

PAN GERMANS GROW BOLDER.

Speaker at Hanover Meeting Attacks "Democratic Pope."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—An Amsterdam dispatch to The Daily Chronicle tonight from George Renwick, says:

"Reports of the proceedings in the Main Committee of the Reichstag of the incompleteness of which Vorwärts complains, were sufficient to afford evidence of political confusion, but two things were certainly made clear. Chancellor Michaelis was definite on the point that Belgium will only be given up in exchange for something else, a declaration which the Pan German press hails as a triumph.

"The Krupp organ, the Rhenish Westphalian Gazette, insists, despite official denials, that the Crown Council, Sept. 13 did consider the Belgian question and came to a decision which will please the German people to the highest degree'—the people of Pan German views, that is.

"Another matter, too, is made plain—the imposture involved in the German reply to the Pope's note. There have been many signs which completely discount the fine sounding terms in that answer. Herr Bewer in an interview with the Kaiser published a week ago, presented the war lord in all his pristine Prussian arrogance. Hindenburg has become one of the great pillars of the Pan-German Fatherland Party and War Minister von Stein has recommended an ultra Pan-German pamphlet in an enthusiastic preface.

"In the Main Committee debates, Count Westarp, leader of the Conservatives, declared that in the sittings of the commission which drew up the reply he announced his objection to the references to arbitration and disarmament, as 'no ground could be created for an understanding on such questions.' Dr. Stresemann, the National Liberal leader, showed that inclusion of reference to those questions was only agreed to when it had been qualified by a clause, which, if language means anything, whittled the matter away, as Mr. Asquith rightly said, to nothing.

"Whatever moderate elements there are in the German Government have obviously been unable to assert themselves to any degree that would lead to an open struggle against the ruling Junker caste, and they obviously are not now in a position to engage such a powerful foe. Erzberger, therefore, climbs tamely down, declaring himself satisfied, and Scheidemann becomes quite unheroic.

"That there is unity in the Government, as Kühlmann claimed with overemphasis, is nonsense. The Berliner Tageblatt is quite blunt about it, pointing to the fact that numerous Government officials are fighting the Government's expressed policy, and adds:

"'It is of no use sticking our heads in the sand. It would serve the purpose more to restore unity to the empire's policy by vigorous action.'

"Meanwhile the Pan German campaign goes on throughout Germany. Its zenith of daring and disgrace was reached at a North Hanover meeting, where a speaker referred to the Holy Father as 'that democratic Pope, that Antichrist, who wants peace.'"

EXPECTS BELGIAN TERMS SOON

Kuehlmann Preparing for Early Announcement, Says Vorwaerts.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 1—Vorwärts, the German Socialist organ, says the German Government will make a formal declaration regarding Belgium when it deems the psychological moment has arrived. This moment will be deemed to have arrived when the question of Belgium appears to be the only obstacle to peace, says the newspaper, which adds that, according to Dr. Richard von Kühlmann, the German Foreign Secretary, this declaration may be expected in a couple of weeks.

Vorwärts concludes by saying that Dr. Michaelis, the German Imperial Chancellor, and Dr. Kühlmann are not in agreement on the question of peace, Michaelis adhering to the Pan German ideas and Kühlmann favoring peace by compromise.

We have just renewed a contract with an old patron to continue, for a period of four years, bonding annually over 32,000 men!

This contract has already been in force for fourteen years! In this period of time we have guaranteed for this patron the integrity of approximately five hundred thousand men, cash receipts passing through their hands aggregating one hundred and fifty million dollars, and, with hundreds of claims made upon us, there has never been a question raised regarding the adjustment of a loss.

LIVING at "The Mansions," one is immediately relieved of the cumbersome machinery of living. That is not to be scorned these uncertain days of meagre help. Service, meals, or a banquet may be had at a word. Can you imagine the joy of being able to telephone down to the office of "The Mansions," "We'll have a banquet served in our apartment next week. Fifty plates." Or, at your request, an immediate organized effort will be made to supply a chef, a maid, a butler, or even a corps of servants.

The Ideal of Service

Here is a feature that will delight those whose large country places make them unwilling to keep up a city home. There's a dining room downstairs, reached through a covered arcade that defies all weathers. Here there are to be had the perfectly served meals that one finds at The Ritz-Carlton. Well, no wonder! The restaurant, you see, is under the management of The Ritz-Carlton Hotel. Whether it is the occasional luncheon, or the elaborately catered affair, there's an unmistakable air of ready service, so pleasing to find these days of careless help. "The Mansions" are really housekeeping apartments and an apartment hotel in one—and an ideal place to live, besides.

Ideal Location

Living at "The Mansions," one is saved the wear and tear of travel. The shops are but a step; theatres are too near to be ignored; and as for clubs, hotels, they are so close that even the lazy could find no excuse for not going. And best of all, one's limousine may drive up to one's very door, in "The Gardens." One steps in, and is whisked away in a moment to gaiety and pleasure.

CALLS ON NATION FOR WAR'S SINEWS

EVEN CHILDREN CAN HELP

Says Every Pacifist Speech Made in America at This Time Is in Effect Traitorous.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo officially opened the second Liberty Loan campaign in Cleveland this morning. Mr. McAdoo, with a party of six, arrived here from Washington early today to make the first speech on his Western trip to boost the loan.

Thousands of factory whistles and church bells signaled the campaign's opening by whistling and ringing continuously from 9:50 to 10 o'clock. At an outdoor mass meeting in the Public Square at 10 o'clock, Mayor Harry L. Davis introduced Secretary McAdoo, who appealed to every man and woman in America to join the league of patriots by purchasing a Liberty bond. The Secretary asked the people of Cleveland, the Fourth Federal Reserve District and of the entire country to beat the record made last Spring in the first Liberty Loan campaign.

"After allowing for the amount of revenue to be raised by taxation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918," he said, "we shall have to raise by additional bond issues between $13,000,000,000 and $14,000,000,000. It is estimated that $5,000,000,000 will represent additional loans to the allied governments, which, in turn, will give their obligations bearing interest.

"To raise thirteen to fourteen billions of dollars on or before the 30th of June, 1918, by the sale of bonds in recurring installments seems to some people an impossible task. It is a stupendous undertaking, but it is not impossible for America. It is not easy, but it can be done. Our resources are adequate; our will is perfect; our spirit is inconquerable; and our success is certain. We have only to pull together and we can do the job. Already we have demonstrated what a united people can do when partisanship is subordinated to patriotism; when love of country becomes supreme. I look forward, therefore, with confidence to the success of the recurring campaigns we must make for the sale of Liberty bonds."

Tris Speaker, star outfielder of the Cleveland baseball Club, purchased the third bond of the second Liberty Loan. Secretary McAdoo handed the bond to Speaker and received his check for $1,000, after which Mr. AcAdoo raised an American flag and a specially designed Liberty Loan flag.

Mr. McAdoo made a second address to campaign workers at 11 o'clock, and at noon attended a business men's luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce, where he made the principal address of the day. He said:

"I am not going to discuss at length today the causes which have led America into this war. Through three years of patience unparalleled in the history of the world, through three years of forbearance in the face of insults which were never offered before by one civilized nation to another, your great President strove to keep this country at peace with all the world. But God had decreed that America should rescue civilization from the dark abyss into which this military despot of Germany had thrust it.

"So America finds herself in the fight, and America intends that this fight shall be won and won quickly; America intends that those well-meaning but misguided people who talk inopportunely of peace when there can be no peace until the cancer which has rotted civilization in Europe is extirpated and destroyed forever, shall be silenced. I want to say here and now, with due deliberation, that every pacifist speech in this country made at this inopportune and improper time is in effect traitorous. More than that, it means the needless sacrifice of many more American soldiers upon the battlefields and the expenditure of much more American treasure. Every such speech is an encouragement to the Kaiser to fight harder and longer, and that means more American boys uselessly killed.

"We intend that freedom and democracy shall be made supreme througout the world. America has to be made safe and secure for the future. There are two systems today which have got to be reckoned with. They cannot both live together in the civilized world. These two principles are autocracy, or arbitrary and despotic government, on the one hand, and democracy, which breathes and lives because it exists upon the basis of a free people, on the other. These two principles have clashed in this war. One or the other has got to survive just as certainly as the issue of slavery had to be fought to a conclusion in the civil war. It is a tragedy of civilization that the single brain of a German despot should possess the power to throw a whole world into such terrible chaos and convulsions.

"The important thing to do at the moment is to provide the first sinews of war. What are they? Always money. No nation can fight a war without money. We must raise something like eighteen billion dollars in this fiscal year. Something under four billion of that amount probably will be raised by taxation, and it leaves to the American people the opportunity—the privilege—of sustaining the credit of their Government by buying the bonds of their Government. These bonds will be offered to the American people.

"No one class in this country can finance this war. In a democracy every class must do its duty and every class must equally have the opportunity of taking advantage of the privileges that may be offered by the Government. Here is one thing that every man, woman, and child in America can do with their savings, because we are going to make it so easy to buy the obligations of the Government that the man who has a twenty-five-cent piece can save and ultimately convert it into a Government bond.

"We are going to issue war-saving certificates in denominations of $5 each and you can accumulate stamps from the Post Office in small denominations and paste them in that book until you get $4.10 worth, and the Government of the United States, at the end of five years, will cash this certificate for $5."

Mr. McAdoo left for Toledo at 5 o'clock.

Mayor Davis today officially announced the city and Fourth Federal Reserve District quotas, fixed by the Central Liberty Loan Committee, as follows: Cleveland quota, $60,000,000; objective, $80,000,000; Fourth Federal Reserve District quota, $300,000,000; objective, $400,000,000.

A Challenge From the Germans.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Oct. 1.—Speaking to several thousand citizens in Memorial Hall here tonight in opening the Liberty Loan campaign in this district, Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo declared that the failure of a single issue of Government bonds would be worse for America than a disaster upon the field of battle. "We must never let that happen," he said.

"A few days ago," Mr. McAdoo continued, "I read the following manifesto issued in Berlin by the League of German Municipalities:

"'If money talks the President of the United States may learn by Oct 18, when the subscription lists close, that the echo of the new war fund given by the German people will have drowned out completely the clamor of unending protests which his reply to the Pope has given stimulus.'

"Let us meet that challenge by a subscription to our second Liberty Loan, on the 27th day of October, nine days after the close of the German loan, which will make clear to the German military despotism that America marshals not alone her brave soldiers upon the field, her invincible navy upon the high seas, her industries throughout the length and breadth of this land, but as well her financial resources, and that she is determined to use them all without stint and regardless of sacrifice to vindicate American rights, outraged too frequently by German infamies.

"Let us answer this challenge by making clear to the world that the American people, with transcendent love of justice and of country, stand solidly behind their great President and support unequivocally the purpose of this war."

NEW YORK TAKES $50,000,000 OF LOAN

bution. We have voluntarily assumed as before to raise far in excess of our own quota. This amount we feel sure will be fully subscribed, just as in the first loan. The eyes of the world are on New York.

"I promise you, Mr. Mayor, that your constituents in New York will do all that continuous industry and conscientious realization of duty can contribute to the accomplishment of this, the principal and most important war measure of this month."

After the exercises at the City Hall the bond salesmen immediately scattered to all parts of the city, and the selling campaign was on in full force. All the sub-committees began their assigned duties in connection with marshaling an army of 10,000 canvassers, who will be directed by the Metropolitan Canvass Committee, of which A. B. Leach is Chairman. The committee issued the following statement:

"This organization has been formed at the request of the Liberty Loan Committee for the Second Federal Reserve district with a view to assisting in the work of directing and supervising the canvassing of the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn, and the Bronx, so that every person residing therein may be informed regarding the second Liberty Loan.

"It is our goal is to see New York City reach, and even exceed, its quota of bond subscriptions, and the committee will deem it an honor and a privilege to be permitted to establish close working relations with any and all of the various clubs, societies, colleges, schools, associations, &c., which are so nobly and unselfishly preparing to serve their country in this vital cause.

"A harmonious general plan of linking together these various endeavors will result in keeping each campaign unit informed as to what lines all are pursuing—thus bringing the full measure of efficiency for the work as a whole.

"Committee bulletins will be issued from time to time reporting the work of the various organizations and giving publicity to any suggestions which may be helpful in the final success.

"Literature issued by the main committee will be promptly delivered upon request. Speakers will be provided upon due notice. Inquiries of every kind bearing upon the campaign will receive prompt and courteous attention."

According to present arrangements of the Distribution Committee of the Liberty Loan Committee, canvassers will be instructed not to accept money for subscriptions. The purchaser will sign a subscription blank, which will be retained by the canvasser. The canvasser will find out just how the purchaser wishes to pay. If the subscriber has no bank account which can be utilized, arrangements will be made to have the subscription handled by a bank convenient to the buyer.

Women representing various clubs, relief organizations, political, charitable and religious societies met under the auspices of the Women's Liberty Loan Committee in the library of the Chamber of Commerce. Addresses were made by Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company. Mrs. John T. Pratt, the district Chairman, presided. She and Mrs. Courtlandt Dixon Barnes made addresses in which they promised the co-operation of the women's organizations in the campaign.

Arthur M. Anderson, Executive Secretary of the Distribution Committee of the Liberty Loan Committee, called attention to the conversion features of the Second Liberty Loan. The terms of the conversion are described in the circular issued by the Treasury Department. It is provided that if a subsequent series of bonds, bearing interest at more than 4 per cent. are issued by the United States Government, the holders of the present series may convert their bonds at par into bonds of the higher rate. This privilege must be exercised within six months of the date of issue of the subsequent series.

Not only is immediate subscription to the Second Liberty Loan the patriotic duty of every American, but those who back the Government with their money at this time are making an investment which is not only the safest in the world, but is likely to be a highly profitable one, in the opinion of Victor Morawetz.

Mr. Morawetz, who is a well-known corporation lawyer, and has been prominent in the reorganization of a number of railroad and industrial corporations, pointed out yesterday that the exemption of the bonds from all taxation excepting that on inheritances and the surtax on incomes, together with their convertibility into any issue bearing a higher rate of interest, would certainly keep them at par during the war and send them to a premium at its close.

"Within a short time before the beginning of the war various high-class 4 per cent. railroad bonds had a market value above par," Mr. Morawetz said. "These railroad bonds were subject to all State, municipal, and United States taxes. The 4 per cent. bonds now offered by the National Government at par are free from all United States, State, and local taxation, and they are safer than any railroad bond. They are the safest investment in the world.

"By reason of the conversion right attached to these bonds subscribers are assured that their market value will be maintained approximately at par as long as the war lasts. Government bonds selling at par during the war are bound to go to a premium when peace is declared. Subscribers for these bonds, therefore, are practically insured against loss, and they are certain to make profit when peace is declared."

Swift & Co. headed the purchasers with $1,500,000. G. A. Buhl, Vice President of the Schoenhofen Brewery Company announced the purchase of $250,000. Miss Ruth Law, aviatrix, sent a special delivery letter from Peoria with an order for $10,000, and there was a rush of smaller subscriptions that gave assurances that the second issue of war bonds would have an even speedier sale in the Chicago Federal Reserve district than the first one.

Minneapolis started with a program of meetings designed to reach every man, woman, and child in her Reserve District. Prominent business men of St. Louis put on overalls and pasted up posters. San Francisco began with a luncheon attended by 500 men and women, and Dallas and Kansas City reported a similar spirit of enthusiasm.

Officials here were not inclined to minimize the tremendous task. A vast amount of hard work must be done during the next twenty-three more working days by every person in the ranks of the great organization. An average of $125,000,000 a day in subscriptions for the entire period would bring the total only up to the minimum. What officials hope for is to make every day a $200,000,000 day, or, on an eight-hour basis, $25,000,000 an hour. This would bring the total to within hailing distance of the $5,000,000,000 which the country is expected to subscribe.

With 10,000,000 subscribers as the goal the average daily subscription would show 400,000 names. Again, computed on an eight-hour working day basis, 50,000 men and women would have to subscribe every hour to bring the total up to expectations.

COUNTRY RALLYING TO LIBERTY LOAN

Spectacular Features in Many Cities Mark Opening of the Great Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The great Liberty Loan drive started today throughout the country with a rush. Telegraphic reports to the Treasury from every section indicate tremendous enthusiasm on the part of tens of thousands of workers and a fair first-day volume of subscriptions toward the $3,000,000,000 minimum which has been set as the goal of the four weeks' campaign.

Flags were flown, whistles were blown, acres of billboards blossomed into red, white, and blue posters, and thousands of workers started the campaign with enthusiasm from New England to California. Everywhere, from Post Offices, bank and store windows, railway stations, street cars, and scores of other public places, Liberty posters with varied slogans were pasted up and workers began the task of finding buyers.

Boston reported a chorus of steam whistles greeting the opening of the campaign. They had hardly ceased blowing when J. Arthur Favreau of Woonsocket, R. I., Controller of Accounts for L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amérique, one of the largest fraternal societies in the country, appeared at the Federal Reserve Bank with the first subscription, one of $25,000. The largest subscription recorded was for $1,000,000 by the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Philadelphia let loose her factory whistles at 10 o'clock, and two hours later gazed skyward at a squadron of six airplanes that circled the tower of he City Hall, droping loads of literature, while 5,000 Boy Scouts started collecting contributions.

The Liberty bell of St. John's Church, Richmond, where Patrick Henry uttered his imortal "Give me liberty or give me death," led the bells of the city in a five-minute proclamation that the drive was on. At Atlanta the President of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs called up the Chairman of the Liberty Loan Executive Committee before breakfast to get a subscription and got it.

A flying squadron of nearly 1,000 solicitors stormed Chicago as the bells were ringing and whistles were blowing.

OFFER $200,000,000 TO AID MONEY RATES

AMOUNT MAY BE INCREASED

Aim Is to Maintain Steady Tone to Market So That Business Will Not Be Disturbed.

Realizing that a comfortable money market is essential for the successful flotation of the Government loan, the heads of the largest banks and trust companies of the city, who compose the so-called "Money Committee"—a part of the organization of the General Liberty Loan Committee—have perfected arrangements for a huge money pool. Its precise size is not disclosed, but it was announced yesterday that no less than $200,000,000 was immediately available. It is expected that the banks' lending capacity will be greatly increased by the free use of the rediscounting and borrowing facilities offered by the Federal Reserve Bank.

In expectation of the formation of the money pool, a number of the big Wall Street institutions put out considerable sums of money last week, with the result that the money market was kept in check and rates for call loans did not advance beyond 6 per cent., only one small transaction having been arranged at 7 per cent. Yesterday 6 per cent. was the prevailing rate, and 2 per cent. the closing. The primary purpose of the pool is to maintain a steady tone to the money market so that the transactions incident to the flotation of the Government loan may be consummated without any disturbance to general business, and it is not the intention of bankers that the facilities offered should be utilized for any wild speculation in stocks or other markets.

The so-called "Money Committee" is composed of James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce; George F. Baker, Chairman of the First National Bank; Walter E. Frew, President of the Corn Exchange Bank; Gates W. McGarrah, President of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank; Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company; Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank; James N. Wallace, President of the Central Trust Company, and Albert H. Wiggin, President of the Chase National Bank.

The committee, after its meeting, authorized the following statement:

"Daily reports are now being received from all the banks and trust companies in New York City in response to the request recently sent them.

"In view of the approaching period during which large payments will be made on account of the new issue of Government bonds, the committee has considered it prudent to make arrangements with a large number of the banks and trust companies which are now filing these reports to place at the disposal of the committee a fund to be loaned in their discretion as needed.

"The committee has pledges that a very large sum will be provided, of which over $200,000,000 is immediately available. It is expected that by this means the credit resources of the Federal Reserve Bank will be made available as needed."

The committee, it was announced, would have charge of the handling of this fund, and Mr. McGarrah, who is Chairman of the Clearing House Committee of the New York Clearing House Association, is working out the details of the plans.

SUBSCRIBES $5,000,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 1.—Announcement of a subscription of $5,000,000 to the second Liberty Loan bond issue by the Southern Pacific Company was made here tonight by William Sproule, President of the company.

It was announced also that the company, upon the request of employes, would subscribe for any amount of bonds, not exceeding 25 per cent. of the applicant's yearly salaries, advance the subscription price and permit the employes to repay it in monthly installments covering a period of two years.

Additional subscriptions totaling $3,075,000 were announced. The Alaska Packing Company subscribed $2,500,000.

BIGGEST AIR RAID MADE ON LONDON

in the ability of the anti-aircraft guns to keep the raiders at bay was shown by the fearlessness and good behavior of the crowds. The tactics of the Germans are so well known that they cause spirited betting among sportsmen as to the time of probable raids.

New Demands for Reprisals.

Early editions of the morning newspapers, which were sought eagerly by the crowds that had remained up late, point to the feebleness of the German boast to "burn up London." They also print maps showing German towns within bombing distance of France and urge the military authorities to "bomb Germany now."

Nine persons were killed, and forty-two injured in Sunday night's air raid. It is announced officially. British naval air patrols destroyed two enemy machines, and brought down another. A Gotha also was brought down, and it is believed to have been damaged. All the British machines are safe.

An immense number of guns of various calibres was in action. Indeed, it was these guns, and not the invaders, which were putting up the show.

Even more impressive was the terrific din of the guns. The enormous and prolonged volume of fire was alarming to civilian ears not accustomed to it. So great was the defensive shelifire that an estimate of 3,000 shells discharged for every bomb dropped does not seem extravagant.

The only unusual incident of the Sunday night raid was the cheering which was heard from different parts of the metropolis, due to the belief that some of the raiders had been brought down.

Raiding Machines Safe, Berlin Says.

BERLIN, Oct. 1, (via London.)—German aviators bombed inner London, Margate, and Dover last night, according to the official statement issued today by the German War Office. All the German machines, it was added, returned unharmed. The text of the announcement reads:

"Our airmen again dropped bombs upon military buildings and warehouses in inner London. Numerous fires showed that this attack was particularly effective. Other airplanes successfully attacked Margate and Dover. All our machines returned unharmed."

BOMB GERMAN BASES IN NIGHT AND DAY RAIDS

British Airmen Inflict Great Damage on Airdromes Back of Flanders Lines.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—British Army aviators continued their attacks upon German bases in Belgium yesterday, carrying out their bombing operations day and night. More than eleven tons of explosives were dropped on airdromes, lines of communications, and billets. Photographs taken by aerial observers indicate the wrecking of three German airplanes at the Gontrode airdrome and the damaging of a shed at the same point. A large hangar of Gotha airplanes is also reported to have been set on fire.

Following is the official report on these operations issued tonight:

"The visibility improved Sunday, and a great deal of artillery and photographic work was accomplished by our airplanes. Bombing continued without respite day and night. Over eleven tons of bombs were dropped on enemy airdromes at Gontrode and hostile billets and communications in the battle area and on a dump and the headquarters near Cambrai. The enemy also carried out many bombing raids during the night, but did little damage of military importance.

"A photograph taken of the results of our bombing at the Gontrode airdrome shows that Saturday night one shed of the airdrome was hit. The same photograph shows three large German machines which landed in a field five miles south of the Gontrode airdrome. Two of these machines clearly were damaged, and reconnoissances today show all three machines still lying in the field. A large airship shed which is now used for the accommodation of Gotha airplanes at this airdrome is reported to have been set on fire last night.

"The enemy aircraft were not very active yesterday, but a few large formations were encountered. Four German machines were downed and eight driven down out of control. Five of our airplanes are missing."

Two hostile machines were destroyed and two others driven down by British air patrols, says an official announcement made this afternoon, recounting bombing raids over Belgium on Saturday night and air combats that resulted from patrol activities. The statement reads:

"During Saturday night bombing raids were made by naval aircraft over the following objectives: The lock gates at Zeebrugge, the St. Denis Westrem airdrome, the Thourout airdome, and works and trains at Bruges. Several tons of bombs were dropped with good results, a large fire being caused at the St. Denis Westrem airdome.

"During patrol several aerial combats occurred, with the result that two enemy machines were destroyed and one driven down completely out of control. A Gotha also was driven down, and it is thought to have been damaged. "All our machines returned safely."

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The Belgian communication on aerial fighting says:

"The aviators have been very active during the course of the last two days, carrying out numerous missions of reconnoisance, chase, and protection, in the course of which many combats were fought, and also bombardments near Roodevelde in reprisal for those of the enemy against our cantonments."

BERLIN, (via London,) Oct. 1.—Reporting on air operations, the communication from General Headquarters says:

"Fourteen enemy airmen were shot down yesterday."

BOMBARD STUTTGART AS REPRISAL MEASURE

French Aviators Also Raid German Bases From Lorraine to Belgium.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—In reprisal for a recent raid on the open town of Bar-le-Duc, French aviators last night dropped over 600 pounds of projectiles on the City of Stuttgart, the capital of Würtemberg. Otner air raids on German military bases and railway stations were carried out over widely scattered areas, from Dieuze, in German Lorraine, to Roulers and Thielt, in Belgium.

German aviators last night bombarded the region of Bar-le-Duc, causing damage to life and property.

The official report on aerial activities follows:

"The enemy last night bombarded the country in the vicinity of Bar-le-Duc, causing material damage and resulting in several victims.

"During the day of Sept. 30 five German airplanes were brought down in the course of aerial engagements, while seven other enemy machines fell in a damaged condition within their own lines.

"French bombing squadrons sprayed with projectiles the railroad station and barracks at Fresney-le-rand, where fierce fires were observed, and also dropped bombs on the railway stations of Thionville, Mezières, and Dieuze, and on the factories of Hagondange.

"As a measure of reprisal for the German bombardment of the open town of Bar-le-Duc two French aviators on the night of Sept. 30-Oct. 1 threw 300 kilograms (660 pounds) of projectiles on the fortified town of Stuttgart.

"In Belgium we bombarded aviation grounds in the region of Roulers and Thielt, and the railroad stations at Lichtervelde, Staden, and Cortemarck."

HOUSE CONCLUDES WORK ON TAX BILL

Conference Report Adopted Without a Dissenting Vote, Sending Measure to Senate.

KITCHIN EXPLAINS CHANGES

Official Estimate of Annual Yield $2,575,000,000—Cooper Condemns Zone System for Second-Class Mail.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Without a dissenting vote the House today accepted the conference report on the War Revenue bill, thus ending the tax legislation for this session of Congress in the lower body.

Chairman Kitchin of the Ways and Means Committee held the floor for two hours, discussing the bill. He did not enter into a detailed explanation of the important features; most of his time was consumed in showing the changes made in conference. He said it was the first conference report on a big tax bill in half a century which all the conferees had signed in peace and harmony. He took a fling at the members of the Conference Committee who let slip information on the progress of the bill by saying he had not read as much as one inch of such newspaper accounts which had contained correct information. He denied that there had been any heated political row between him and Senator Simmons.

Mr. Kitchin gave the official estimate of the revenue to be raised by the bill—$2,575,000,000. This is about $700,000,000 and $175,000,000 more respectively than the House and Senate drafts carried.

In answer to questions Mr. Kitchin said that if the war should continue the normal tax on incomes probably would be increased, but not the surtaxes. The present bill, he said, would raise $1,200,000,000 in income taxes, or four times as much as in 1916. He replied to a question from Representative Keating of Colorado by stating that if the income and excess profit tax rates of Great Britain should be applied in this country $4,000,000,000 more than was being raised by the present bill could be turned into the Treasury.

"England arrived at her present rates gradually," he said, "and I hope we shall not have to go so far."

Representative Cannon of Illinois suggested that the great profits of the period before the war would not be repeated by munition makers because the prices of their products were being fixed.

Representative Cooper of Wisconsin assailed the postal zone system decided upon for magazines and newspapers, calling it the most reactionary legislation by Congress in fifty years. He read a long statement by Woodrow Wilson, when Governor of New Jersey, holding that a zone system for mail then under consideration was reactionary, as tending to denationalize the country. Mr. Cooper said that nothing had made the United States a great nation so much as the low flat rate on magazines and newspapers; that the free interchange of thought and expression should not be taxed, and that the zone system would tend to sectionalize the country.

"There is no more reason for applying the zone system to magazines than to letters," he said. "The Post Office Department is self-sustaining, except for rural free delivery. If you want to save money, why don't you knock out the free delivery in the rural districts? Why do you subsidize the farmer? Of course, I wouldn't say there were too many votes concerned. I would say it was wise statesmanship."

Some confusion and misinterpretation have arisen from the wording of the section imposing stamp taxes on negotiable instruments, which has been misconstrued to mean that a tax has been placed on bank checks. The bill says: "Drafts or checks payable otherwise than at sight or on demand," &c., 2 cents for each $100. The official interpretation of this section is that, as a check is payable at sight and on demand, it, therefore is excluded from the tax.

BRITISH THREATEN FOE'S LINE TO COAST

BIG LOSS IN MAN POWER

Cites Figures to Prove German Wastage on the Aisne Greater Than at Verdun.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The significance of the new British drive in the Ypres salient now in progress was emphasized in an official statement issued today by Newton D. Baker, the Secretary of War, dealing with military activities in Europe for the week ending Sept. 29. This is the second weekly review of this character thus far issued by Secretary Baker.

In today's statement Secretary Baker asserts that the new British advance "definitely threatens the enemy's line of communications to the Belgian coast."

He explains that the railroad running from Ostend to Lille, which in a large measure feeds the German naval bases at Ostend and Zeebrugge, has now been brought within range of British artillery. Zeebrugge is the home port of the German high seas submarine flotillas, and the capture of this line of communications will force a retirement of the Germans along the Belgian coast.

Daniels Also to Issue Reports.

Secretary Daniels is also preparing to issue a weekly statement of the progress being made with naval preparations, and also to disclose, in an official way, some of the work done by American naval forces in European waters. When this practice is adopted, the American public will have the benefit weekly of official army and navy reviews of the war.

Here is the text of the statement:

"The Ypres salient continues the centre of military interest along the western front. The battle of Menin Road, which promises to be one of the great battles of the war, is following its normal course.

"Last week we recorded the gains of the British in this sector. This week we must note the desperate attempts made by the Germans to retake the lost positions.

"Beginning Sunday last the constantly increasing violence of the counter-attacks reached a culmination on the 27th inst., when seven powerful onslaughts by the picked 'storm battalions' of the enemy endeavored vainly to regain the lost objectives. The village of Zonnebeke, the centre of the conflict, is now firmly held by the British.

"It is evident that the efforts of the enemy in this sector are not actuated merely by the desire to regain lost terrain of little more than tactical value, nor must their persistent attacks be considered merely the normal reaction of a modern field engagement, in which counterattacks invariably follow upon attack, but rather it is to be noted that the enemy realizes fully the immense strategic importance of the British thrust along the Menin Road.

"Definitely Threatens" German Line.

"This new British advance in the Ypres salient now definitely threatens the enemy's line of communications to the Belgian coast. The Ostend-Lille Railway, which in a large measure feeds the German naval bases at Ostend and Zeebrugge, the latter the home port of the German high seas submarine flotillas, now comes within the range of the fire of the British guns.

"The superiority of the British over their enemies was conclusively proved during the engagements of the last week. The battle of Menin Road, furthermore, shows that the fighting stamina of the Germans is deteriorating—not that the enemy did not display great skill and dogged determination in his repeated counterattacks.

"During the recent operations in this sector the British captured 4,848 prisoners, including 128 officers.

"Along the French front, particularly in the Aisne sector of Braye-Cerny-Hurtebise, artillery duels of intense violence are reported.

"The enemy attempted an attack upon the French outposts on the right bank of the Meuse. This attack was partially successful, and certain German units gained a foothold in the French centre, where a violent combat took place, which ended in the French regaining the lost positions.

"Along the whole French front German storm contingents harassed the French lines, though their attacks were everywhere repulsed.

"The operations of maximum importance were north of Verdun, where the enemy made use of liquid fire in an effort to record some distinct success.

High Wastage of Man Power.

"The outstanding feature of the recent engagements is the wastage of the man power of the enemy.

"If we compare the combat front of Verdun in 1916, held by twelve German divisions, with the combat front along the Aisne in 1917, held by four divisions, both of practically the same length, it is found that during the same period of time, from May to September, 1916 and 1917, respectively, the enemy engaged along the Verdun front twenty-five new divisions last year; along the Aisne thirty-five new divisions this year.

"So great has the wastage of enemy forces become, owing to the improved mechanical means of the Allies and the perfection of their methods of combat, that the Germans are obliged to maintain reserves as a minimum guarantee for the safety of their battle line in the west, at least forty divisions.

"The western front thus remains the principal battle front of the war. It is still strongly held by the enemy, and his defensive strength, while shaken, remains powerful.

"Emulating their German allies, the Austrians have made desperate attempts to regain the lost ground which the Italians have taken during their offensives of the last few weeks.

"It is especially along the Bainsizza Plateau that the Austrians concentrated their efforts. Not only were their attacks unsuccessful, but the Italians were even able to extend their gains as a result of further terrain lost by the enemy.

"The Italians have now completed the occupation of the entire Bainsizza Plateau and are consolidating their positions there.

"Along the other sectors of the Italian front in the Trentino and the Julian Alps, the enemy made various minor assaults, which were easily repulsed.

"News from Russia continues slight. Further reinforcements of the enemy forces are recorded in the Riga sector, and indications are that the Germans contemplate extending their gains across the Dvina.

"The German offensive was halted after the capture of Riga, apparently to resume the Rumanian campaign with a view to completing the conquest of Moldavia, and, if possible, pushing on into Bessarabia, in order to seize the rich grain and other supplies known to be stored there.

"No reports received indicate any unusual activity along the Rumanian front, where the situation remained unchanged during the week.

"From Macedonia we have no news of importance. The heat during the last week has prevented much activity. However, a raid by the combined French and Albanian contingents, the latter belonging to the forces of Essad Pasha, carried out in the Skumbi Valley, should be mentioned.

Rapid Guard Mobilization.

"The mobilization of the National Guard in their camps is proceeding rapidly and the formation of reorganized divisions is taking place. This reorganization is necessitated by the conditions of the present war, and requires larger regiments and certain machine-gun and other units not typical heretofore. Some misunderstanding of the reorganization has arisen; but its purpose and military necessity are being explained, and the division commanders are doing their utmost to preserve the local association and historic memories of these State forces.

"The assembling of the National Army in the cantonments has gone on with smoothness and success. Equipment difficulties are not serious and are being rapidly overcome. The most obvious shortage is in rifles; but an adequate supply for all purposes will soon be at hand, and no delay in training results from the shortage. All overseas forces are of course adequately supplied."

MOVE TO ENACT BILL TO PROTECT FIGHTERS

Senate Judiciary Committee Orders Measure Drafted to Stay Collections by Creditors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—An effort to hurry through the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Rights bill, by which enlisted men would be protected from creditors while fighting at the front, was initiated today, when the Senate Judiciary Committee referred the measure back to the sub-committee, comprising Senators Overman, Fletcher, Reed, Dillingham and Brandegee, who conducted hearings upon it last week.

The Judiciary Committee instructed the sub-committee to draft a bill embracing the theory that Congress had the power, under the Constitution, to enact a reasonable stay at law to control the processes and proceedings of State courts. This is intended to save soldiers and sailors from having creditors move through State courts in contracts involving payments of money. The Judiciary Committee authorized the sub-committee to report the bill immediately if the members agreed upon the desirability of its passage at this session of Congress.

The insurance feature of the bill, which would authorize the Government to pay premiums on policies for enlisted men, has been practically agreed upon by the sub-committee. Insurance men have protested that the insurance feature as originally drawn would throw many companies out of business.

HAIG CHECKS FIERCE ATTACKS AT YPRES

Repulses Several German Charges, Inflicting Heavy Casualties.

FOE GAINS AT ONE POINT

Enters Two Advanced Posts in Polygon Wood—Germans Fail in Verdun Assaults.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Several heavy attacks were delivered by the Germans today against British positions north of Ypres and east of Polygon Wood, according to the official communication from British Headquarters tonight. All the attacks were repulsed with heavy casualties, except near the southeast corner of Polygon Wood, where the enemy entered two British advanced posts.

The communication follows:

At 5:30 o'clock this morning the enemy launched a powerful attack on a front of more than a mile against our new positions north of the Ypres-Menin Road and east of the Polygon Wood. The German infantry, advancing in three waves, suffered heavy casualties from our rifle fire and artillery barrage and were driven back in disorder. We followed up the retreating enemy and captured a few prisoners.

In the course of the next three hours the enemy twice renewed his attacks with strong forces on the same front and again was repulsed at all points, except opposite the southeast corner of the Polygon Wood, where he succeeded in occupying two of our advanced posts.

The hostile artillery has shown some activity today in the neighborhood of Bullecourt and south and north of Lens.

During the month of September we captured a total of 5,256 German prisoners, including 146 officers. We also captured during the same month 11 guns, including 3 heavy pieces, 57 trench mortars, and 377 machine guns.

The afternoon report is as follows:

The enemy's artillery has shown pronounced activity in the night time in the Neuport sector and east and north of Ypres. Otherwise there is nothing to report.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Spirited artillery fighting is reported by the War Office tonight on the Aisne front. There has also been infantry fighting of a stubborn character on the right bank of the Meuse, where the Germans attacked the French line, but were eventually repulsed.

The text of the statement reads:

On the Aisne front there were quite spirited artillery actions in the sectors of Laffaux and Allies and in the region between the Miette and the Aisne. North of Braye-en-Laonnois one of our detachments, composed of an officer and twelve men, carried out a surprise attack on an enemy trench and brought back, without having suffered any losses, thirteen prisoners.

On the right bank of the Meuse, after a violent bombardment, the Germans delivered an attack between the Bois le Chaume and Besonvaux. A stubborn engagement ensued in our advanced elements, which the enemy had succeeded in entering, and ended to our advantage. Our line was completely re-established, and we took about fifteen prisoners.

The text of the afternoon statement follows:

There was artillery activity in the course of the night at various points on the Aisne front. An enemy surprise attack on our small posts in the region of Allies resulted only in losses to our assailants.

In the Champagne our detachments penetrated the German lines north of Ville-sur-Tourbe, and, after destroying the enemy shelters, returned with prisoners.

On both banks of the River Meuse the night was marked by violent artillery actions, notably between the Meuse and Besonvaux. In the sector of Forges the Germans, after a lively bombardment, attempted to storm our lines, but they were easily repulsed by our fire. Another enemy attack on the right bank of the Meuse was also checked.

In Lorraine our patrols, scouting in the region of La Seille, made some prisoners.

Today's Belgian communication says:

On Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 the regions around Ramscapelle, Oostcapelle, Rouge Dame, Loo, and Knocke were exposed to the enemy fire. Many of our advanced posts have been violently bombarded. We replied on Dixmude and Clercken and against numerous German organizations. Our artillery has bombarded enemy communications and cantonments in reprisal for numerous bombs thrown at different points on our rear zone.

BERLIN, Oct 1, (via London.)—Intense artillery activity in Flanders is reported in today's official statement by the Army Headquarters Staff.

Reconnoitring operations along the French front resulted in the capture of prisoners by the Germans. There was only moderate activity in the Verdun sector, says the statement, which reads:

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders the artillery duel on the coast and in the Ypres salient was intense from midday onward and was lively during the night.

British and French airmen have recently wrought considerable material damage on Belgian territory by dropping bombs, claiming numerous victims among the civilian population.

Front of the German Crown Prince.—Along the Aisne, northeast of Rheims and in the Champagne the firing activity was revived, for the most part, in connection with reconnoitring engagements which resulted in our capturing prisoners. Before Verdun, the fighting activity remained within moderate limits.

PAINLEVE WINNING PUBLIC CONFIDENCE

His Solution of the Vexed Question of Army Control Well Received.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Although the Painlevé Government has held power only a short time, it is already winning golden opinions, not only in Parliamentary circles, but among the public and press. The impression is gaining ground that if Premier Painleve is a less gifted orator than some of his predecessors he at least realizes, as General Petain said, that "it is acts, not words, that count in war." Action is what France needs from her leaders, and now she is getting it. In consequence, to use the Intransigeant's metaphor, "Government stock is advancing several points daily.

In the last week the Government has taken strong action in regard to vitally important matters, like the shipping of freight and Parliamentary control at the front, to say nothing of making steady progress on the still more important matter of releasing the older classes of soldiers by the industrialization of a secondary front zone.

The question of Parliamentary control at the front has been settled by a decree providing that selected Commissioners shall have free access to all army zones, but that their right of criticism or interference shall be limited to matters outside actual military operations, that is, to questions of transport, supplies, hospital, and ambulance service and everything that concerns the general welfare and comfort of the troops. Thus a happy mean is found in this vexed question between the natural disinclination on the part of military commanders to permit civilians to meddle with strictly military questions and the equally natural wish of Deputies, as elected representatives of the people, to do their utmost to rectify and generally ameliorate the conditions under which a great part of that people is living at the front.

Regarding freight, a decree has been promulgated by which the Government can control not only all French shipping, but by system of port licenses all allied and neutral vessels entering the ports of France and her colonies. While French shipowners could always be brought into line by the threat of requisition, and the Allies were amenable to similar measures on the part of their own Governments, it has long been asserted that this procedure actually contributed to the general high freight costs by putting up prices more or less at will. The consequence was that if allied and neutral shipowners were not allowed to follow suit they at once raised an outcry of unfair discrimination. By the new decree no direct pressure will be brought to bear on neutrals, but they will simply be informed that if they do not obey the Government's wishes they will have their licenses to enter French ports revoked. It appears a simple solution of the difficulty; but, as is often the case, it required finding.

WOULD GIVE PRESIDENT DICTATORIAL POWERS

Senator Lewis Proposes Legislation Ensuring Him Unhampered Action in Recess of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—After a call at the White House today Senator Lewis said that he would propose the passage of a bill giving the President full power to do anything during the forthcoming recess of Congress that may be called for by any sudden emergency.

"I told the President," said the Senator, "that we could get the War Revenue bill passed finally this week, pass the Soldiers' Insurance bill next week, and adjourn by the end of the following week. The President is anxious that the insurance bill pass that the families of the soldiers may have security and the soldiers have peace of mind.

"I think it would be wisdom for Congress to pass a law giving the President full power to do anything in the recess of Congress that may be called for by any sudden emergency, whether from international complications or home price-fixing of commodities for war necessity. This would prevent caller meeting and also give immediate legality to any action, however unexpected.

"The President expressed himself as deeply appreciative of the generous course of Congress toward him, particularly in its refusal to hamper him in any way in any of his executive functions or of intruding party opposition or personal politics against necessary measures.

"The President is satisfied with our war situation and our readiness for action, and has full confidence in American success."

KERENSKY CABINET DEFIES ITS ENEMIES

IS DONE WITH BOLSHEVIKS

Congress of Non-Slav Nationalities Demands a Federal Democratic Republic for Russia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—At the Russian Embassy the statement was made today that the Provisional Government at Petrograd would recognize as the source of governmental power in Russia only the Russian Constituent Assembly when it was called, and until that time would recognize no authority except its own.

It was further declared that the Kerensky Government would not compromise with the Bolsheviks, and in reorganizing the Cabinet as a coalition Ministry would not include representatives of the Bolsheviks.

If arrested, and orders for his arrest have been issued, Nikolai Lenine, head of the Bolsheviks, will be treated as a common criminal.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 1.—The Congress of Non-Slav Nationalities at its final session at Kiev passed a resolution declaring that Russia must be a federal democratic republic. To every nationality composing the population of Russia, including the Cossacks, the resolution says, must be granted a large measure of autonomy, the basis of which should be laid down by a constituent assembly especially convoked by each nationality.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, it adds, should immediately establish a special commission composed of representatives of every nationality in Russia to prepare to defend their national interests at the peace conference. A Council of Nationalities would be set up to insure the realization of the principle of a federated Government.

Several thousand members of the Bolsheviki at a mass meeting last night adopted a resolution of protest against the imprisonment and reported imposition of a death sentence upon Alexander Berkman, the anarchist. Agitators who came here recently from the United States harrangued the crowd which packed a big circus tent. The speakers scoffed at American liberty, and said that the Bourgeoise ruled that country, but the Bolsheviki audience applauded only mildly.

A threatened demonstration against the American Embassy was not carried out. The Government, preparing for eventualities, had sent an armored motor car and a detachment of troops to guard the embassy. Ambassador Francis said he had no fears of possible harm and did not request a guard. After the adjournment of the meeting the guard was recalled.

General Gurko, former Commander on the southwestern front, has been expelled from Russia by way of Archangel, because of the letter he wrote to the former Emperor, expressing his loyalty. A telegram from Archangel announces the General's arrival and says he boarded a British vessel.

RUSSIANS WIN GROUND.

Press Foe Back in Riga Region—Petrograd Expects Air Raids.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 1.—Russian troops have made another advance in the Riga region, according to today's War Office announcement. German posts were pressed back south of the railway in the Spitals Farm sector, the Russians advancing between 800 and 1,000 yards. The statement reads:

Northern Front: In the Riga region, four miles south of the railway, in the Spitals Farm sector, our vanguard detachments pressed back enemy posts and advanced between 800 and 1,000 yards.

Western and Rumanian Fronts: These were fusilladed.

Aviation: In the region of Kovel on Friday our airmen dropped about seven hundredweight of bombs on enemy camps. In the region of Buczacz our giant airplanes of the Murometz type dropped about two hundredweight of bombs. Our noncommissioned officer Sapozhnikoff shot down an enemy machine west of Radzuts.

Petrograd is preparing seriously to resist air raids. A series of observation posts within a radius of 200 miles have been established. Airplane patrols are on duty and arrangements have been made for darkening the city when the approach of enemy airmen is announced by the blowing of sirens.

The situation is unchanged. In some isolated sectors local infantry engagements caused a temporary increase in the fire.

EDWARD TUCK FRENCH HURT

His Motor Car Turned Turtle Twice in Ocean Avenue, Newport.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 1.—Edward Tuck French, son of Mrs. Leroy French, was injured this afternoon when his motor car turned turtle twice in Ocean Avenue, near the Graves Point Fishing Club. French was found beneath his machine by Paulding Fosdick, who got help from the Coast Guard Station.

Mr. French was too shaken up to explain the accident tonight, but it was thought he misjudged the turn near the Davis estate. He was removed to the Newport Hospital suffering from shock and slight bruises. The car was badly damaged.

COAL MEN PERPLEXED OVER NEW REGULATION

Some Retailers Say Administrator's Ruling Will Not Change the Present Prices.

The leading coal dealers in this city said yesterday they were unable to tell whether the regulation of profits on the sale of coal at retail, as announced by Fuel Administrator Garfield, would reduce the price of coal to the consumer. Frank K. Burns of Burns Brothers said:

"The matter is entirely too complicated to be discussed at present. The regulation of prices on the basis of the prices of 1915 makes it necessary for us to open and examine our books for that period. Expert accountants are at work on the question now."

Coal has been retailing in this city for several months at $8 to $9 a ton. This figure will not be changed much by the Fuel Administrator's ruling, according to a hasty study of the order by Arthur F. Rice, Commissioner of the New York Coal Merchants' Association. He said:

"For the present coal dealers are not selling coal at all or are selling it without any price named, because of the fact that it will be impossible for some time to fix the coal prices. It seems to us at first sight that the method announced for fixing the retail prices of coal will keep prices at about the present level, but it will take further study to discuss the question with any certainty.

"One thing which has puzzled some dealers is whether the operation of the new order is effective at once, and whether coal dealers are to take the rules and their interpretations from the newspapers. No official notice of the order has been received by this association, and the matter is a little difficult to determine, especially in view of the fact that some of the newspaper accounts vary in explaining the application of the rules.

"In the meantime the coal dealers are all going back to their books and making a study of their business in 1915 to form a basis for figuring what their prices are to be in the future. It will take some time to complete this work. We intend to communicate with Washington without delay, however, in order to clear up points which ought to be understood at once."

TEUTONIC EMPERORS MEET.

"New Opportunity of Manifesting Agreement," Says Berlin.

BERLIN, Oct. 1, (via London.)—An official announcement made here today says that Emperor William, on returning from Rumania, met Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary at Dzieditz, Austria.

The rulers expressed the greatest satisfaction at this meeting, which, the statement says, gave a new opportunity of manifesting their agreement in regard to political and military aims.

SPEED CONTRIBUTIONS TO WAR LIBRARY FUND

New York Gets Another Week in Which to Complete 250,000 Quota.

The New York Library War Council, of which Justice Morgan J. O'Brien is the Chairman, announced last night that following an appeal issued yesterday by Secretary of War Baker, the New York Council has decided to continue its efforts for the rest of this week to raise New York City's allotment of $250,000 of the $1,000,000 fund needed to supply the American armed forces with good reading matter.

At a meeting of the New York Council held yesterday afternoon Henry W. Taft, Judge O'Brien, ex-Mayor David A. Boody of Brooklyn, Frederic B. Pratt, and James Speyer constituted themselves a committee to solicit subscriptions from prominent men and women of this city who have not yet been approached. To date New York City has raised about $125,000, or half of its allotment.

The following additional gifts of $100 or more to the fund were announced:

|---|---|---|---|
| F. A. Vanderlip | $500 | James Byrne | $100 |
| A. M. White | 200 | C. H. Russell | 100 |
| H. Holt & Co. | 200 | Mrs. W. T. Bush | 100 |
| C. K. G. Billings | 100 | W. C. Humstone | 100 |
| Henry P. Towne | 100 | Percival S. Hill | 100 |
| Century Company | 100 | | |

Frank I. Hill, Chief Librarian of Brooklyn, and who is Chairman of the National Finance Committee of the War Council, telegraphed from Washington that in the nation returns thus far received showed that a trifle more than $500,000, or about one-half of the total sum sought, had been contributed, and revised returns in New York City show that about one-half of the $250,000, which is New York's quota, has actually come to hand.

Secretary of War Baker, in his proclamation addressed to the workers for the fund throughout the nation, said:

The Library War Fund will be a contribution from the people of the United States to the contentment, effectiveness, and future usefulness of our soldiers. It is a part of the great effort the Government is making to surround our soldiers with a wholesome environment and to give them an opportunity to redeem, by useful occupation of their leisure, some of the losses which are necessarily entailed in military service.

Harold Braddock, National Campaign Manager, added to the Secreatry's statement the following:

"In order that the Library War Fund may be fully subscribed, every city and every State must do its full share. The campaign is being continued next week. The Library War Council knows that the substantial co-operation of the citizens of New York, under your leadership, will result in overstriding the goal of your city and State." The telegram was addressed to Edwin H. Anderson, Director of the New York Public Library and of the New York City campaign.

Of the amount received here, Brooklyn has contributed $28,000 and Queens $9,000. No estimate was received from the Bronx or Richmond, but the efforts in special libraries resulted in $25,000 being raised, and the employes of the main Public Library have succeeded in raising $28,000.

CONFER ON NAVY YARD PAY.

Negotiations Expected to Settle Demands by 12,000 for Increases.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Representatives of all employes of all navy yards seeking increases in pay ranging as high in some instances as $1 a day, conferred today with Navy Department officials at the first of a series of meetings which are expected to settle the question. More than 12,000 men are involved. The claims of machinists first will be disposed of. In addition to navy yard workers, the army arsenal workers, who ask increases, will be heard.

President Wilson's Labor Investigating Committee left today on a two months' tour of Western States to inquire into causes of labor unrest and attempt settlement of strikes and other industrial disorders. It will stop first at Phoenix, Ariz.

LAKE CHARLES, La., Oct. 1.—Two thousand men employed in the construction of the Government aviation training camp here, who struck Sunday, returned to work late today after their demands for wage increases and revision of working schedules had been granted by the contractors.

DECLARE PACIFIST WAS TOOL OF BOLO

French Issue Warrant for Gaston Routier, Founder of La Paix of Madrid.

ADVENTURER'S LIFE BARED

Bolo Received Funds from Jagow to Influence Press in France, Newspaper Charges.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Gaston Routier, a French subject, who founded the pacifist newspaper La Paix at Madrid with funds supposed to have been furnished by Bolo Pasha.

The publication aroused the indignation of the French colony in the Spanish capital on account of its Germanophile tendency. As a result, Routier declared he would cease publication and return to France and enlist in the army. Detectives were sent to the frontier in anticipation of his coming, but nothing has been heard from him.

According to other information money was furnished Routier by von Krohn, the German Naval Attaché at Madrid.

Bolo Pasha, who is charged with having relations with the enemy, was born in Marseilles, according to a story of his career appearing in the Matin. At first he was a clerk to a notary. He is a brother of Monsignor Bolo, one of the most eloquent preachers of the Catholic Church in France, and had an easy access to an honorable career, but chose occupations that were varied and hazardous.

Scheme to Ship Lobsters.

His business ventures began with a scheme for the wholesale catching and shipment of lobsters. This cost his partner a considerable sum. After failing in several other enterprises, Bolo Pasha came to Paris and started a sort of information bureau. It became the target for numerous complaints, culminating in the condemnation of Bolo by default for abuse of confidence and swindling, in 1894. Bolo then went to Valencia, Spain, where, under the name of Berner, he opened a café that was much frequented by the French colony.

In 1906, the Matin says, he turned up in Bordeaux, where he married a widow who had an annual income of 70,000 francs. He then enlarged his field of operations, appearing at Lyons as an agent for champagne and other wines. Afterward he again transferred his headquarters to Paris. Bolo, the newspaper adds, was conspicuous in the riots in Champagne, when the wine growers there, in a protest against the use of wine from outside Champagne for making sparkling wines under the name of champagne, defended the vineyards of big French companies, while those owned by Germans were left unharmed.

It was in June, 1914, says Bolo met Abbas Hilmi, then Khedive of Egypt. He was introduced by Youssouff Sadik Pasha, one of the Khedive's ministers. He at once became a trusted agent in the enterprise for the exploitation of real estate owned by the Khedive and for the protection of the Khedive's interest in the Suez Canal and in Egypt, in the event that circumstances might compel Great Britain to repudiate the Khedive. The Matin concludes from these negotiations that Abbas Hilmi, two months before the actual beginning of hostilities, anticipated a war in which Turkey would be involved and sought to provide against sequestration of his interests in case he cast his lot with the Sultan of Turkey.

Dealings with ex-Khedive.

To provide a "straw" man to take Abbas Hilmi's interests under cover, says the Matin, a contract was drawn up by which Bolo was to be recognized by the Khedive in writing as his creditor to the amount of 50,000,000 francs. In exchange, Bolo was to make an agreement to repay that sum to its legitimate owner. Yusoff Sadik, the newspaper adds, found Bolo's part of the agreement insufficiently clear and the project was not carried to completion.

The Matin says Bolo met Abbas Hilmi, former Khedive of Egypt, in Zurich in March, 1915, and concluded an arrangement which was approved by Gottlieb von Jagow, then German Foreign Minister, under which 10,000,000 marks would be paid in installments to Bolo through the former Khedive to influence the French press.

In accordance with this arrangement 4,600,000 marks was paid by roundabout methods through Swiss banks, to avert suspicion. Abbas Hilmi and an associate are said to have collected 200,000 francs as a commission. After that time Bolo Pasha and Abbas Hilmi seem to have fallen out, for their relations ceased.

Senator Charles Humbert, owner of the Journal, announces he has canceled his contract with Bolo Pasha and refunded the 3,300,000 francs paid by Bolo for an interest in the newspaper. The Senator says he signed, at Bolo's request, a promise that Fernand Monier should be appointed a director of the Journal, on his retirement as President of the Paris Court of Appeals. He felt at the time that the presence of such a man as Judge Monier on the Journal board, as the representative of Bolo, reassured him as to the wisdom of accepting Bolo's money. (The French Ministry of Justice last week decided to send Judge Monier before the Court of Cassation on account of his association with Bolo.)

After he signed the contract, Senator Humbert says, he saw Bolo only at wide intervals, and noticed nothing suspicious. It was a year after the contract was signed that the Senator learned a judicial inquiry had been opened in regard to Bolo. He immediately offered to return the money, but Bolo declined to accept it and there was no way in which he could be forced to receive it. Furthermore, Bolo had not been arrested and protested his innocence, and the Premier, whom Senator Humbert consulted, told him even as lately as three weeks ago that nothing definite had been found against Bolo. The Senator accordingly could only await further developments, and today concluded he had the right to break the contract and refund the money.

BOLO'S FUNDS HERE TRACED.

German Sources in America Believed to Have Aided Him.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Representatives of the French and American Governments have traced bank accounts of Bolo Pasha in this country and have obtained or are obtaining records of checks drawn by him in payment for the work which was carried on in the United States and France under his direction. As the matter is regarded as more intimately a concern of France, officials of the United States Government take the position that any statements of his activities must come from French official sources.

Bolo was in this country two years ago. It is supposed that at that time he made the arrangements for a large fund which is said to have been used mainly in propagandist work in behalf of Germany. According to information obtained here today, the money was kept in banks in the United States, and some at least of it was sent to France for his use there. It was hinted in a thoroughly informed quarter that the investigation had disclosed that the money placed in banks here was obtained mostly from German sources in America. What banks were affected officials did not care to say.

One of the officials of the French Embassy is credited with having had charge of the investigation in this country. He denied today that he knew anything of the affair except what he had read in the newspapers.

Most of the inquiry here was presented by agents of the French Government, who at times were assisted by the State Department and American Secret Service men.

Leader of Egyptian Clique.

A member of the Diplomatic Corps here, of long experience in the Levant, and particularly in Egypt, declared today that a powerful clique of Egyptians was conducting an active campaign on behalf of Germany in Switzerland and that Bolo Pasha was one of the leaders. This diplomat is convinced that Bolo was formerly of the household of the former Khedive of Egypt, Abbas Hilmi Pasha.

It is said here that Achmet Bty Sadik, formerly private secretary to Abbas Hilmi Pasha, when he was Khedive, and Osman Pasha Mortada, at one time first master of ceremonies at the Khedival Court, are at present in Geneva, which is the headquarters of their propaganda, and also at Zurich, another centre for spies.

When the former Khedive was driven from Egypt he took an enormous sum of money and treasure, which was soon dissipated, and his further operations against the English Government were financed by Germany. The band of spies, as the story is told here, is composed of Egyptians with a sprinkling of Turks. Their first work was done in the Levant, but they soon worked in Paris through Switzerland.

The first efforts were devoted to work against the English in Egypt and Turkey. But when the Egyptian case became hopeless for them they devoted all their energies to Turkey. After Turkey entered the war they moved their field to France and, to a lesser degree, Italy. Part of their plan was an information bureau conducted with the Geneva headquarters as a clearing house and Zurich as the distributing point for Germany.

Another diplomat here said Bolo was well known in the Levant. He made a fortune in Turkey, and in his intimacy with the former Khedive of Egypt added to his wealth, but he lost his money in spectacular enterprises. He was one of the promoters of the notorious "Heliopolis" at Alexandria, which was planned to be another Monte Carlo, but was a failure after millions had been squandered on it.

Spectacular Career in Paris.

In Paris Bolo was a showy figure. He was interested in schemes of magnitude and made and lost large sums of money. It was intimated that while he was always Bolo in Paris he worked in some Levantine countries under other names.

The Egyptian propagandists are said to have been in closer touch with Vienna than with Berlin, and received their instructions and money from Germany through Austrian bankers. The information they obtained was sent directly to Berlin through Zurich. The propaganda work done by the Levantines is known to have extended through every neutral European country.

THWARTS SEIZURE OF MURDER WITNESS

SEES PLOT TO SILENCE HIM

Five Policemen Arrested for Alleged Complicity in Violence Culminating in Primary Day Murder.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—A plot to thwart exposure of police and politicians involved in the Fifth Ward primary murder scandal, was nipped today, according to District Attorney Rotan, who became convinced of an effort by the Smith administration operating through the City Detective Bureau, to obtain physical possession of the chief witness for the commonwealth at the hearing of Mayor Smith, Select Councilman William E. Finley, Police Lieutenant Bennett, Isaac Deutsch, and others tomorrow on conspiracy charges growing out of the primary day violence.

This witness is Samuel G. Maloney, Philadelphia representative of a New York detective agency and one time political opponent of James A. Carey. With "Jimmy" Clark, a former employe of the detective agency, who is charged with murder, Maloney provided the District Attorney with evidence against "men higher up," police officials, and those called upon to enforce the orders of the politicians with blackjack and revolver.

Maloney has been secretly conferring with the District Attorney and his assistants during the last week. His statements and those of Clark, corroborated by other witnesses, led to the arrest last Saturday of Finley, political lieutenant and protégé of Senator Edwin H. Vare.

The District Attorney immediately detailed his confidential detetves to "shadow" high officials of the Department of Public Safety, and at the same time placed a strict guard over Maloney. Reports were brought to Mr. Rotan that Director of Public Safety Wilson held a late Sunday evening conference with Captain of Detectives Tate and later was joined by a well-known attorney in a consultation at the Bellevue-Stratford. The full import of these councils was kept secret, but early today the Prosecutor was informed that almost the entire Central Office force had been detailed to arrest Maloney.

At 12:30 o'clock this afternoon Maloney entered his office in the Real Estate Trust Building, followed by two detectives. They declared Maloney under arrest, but when asked for their warrant were unable to produce one. Assistant District Attorney James Gay Gordon, Jr., took a hand in the proceedings at this juncture and haled the entire party to the City Hall, where they went to Judge Martin's court. Judge Martin remanded Maloney into the custotdy of ex-Judge Gordon as a witness at the hearing of Mayor Smith and others tomorrow.

District Attorney Rotan took active steps to place under arrest as soon as possible all the policemen against whom he claims to hold evidence in connection with the primary day thuggery. After the necessary warrants had been issued charging assault, battery, and violation of the Shern act forbidding policemen to participate in politics, Policemen John Wirtschafter, Louis Feldman, Emanuel Uram, Clarence Hayden, and Michael J. Murphy were taken to the District Attorney's office. They were arraigned in the Municipal Court and were held under $5,000 bail each.

Another arrest was made in the Bronx yesterday in connection with the Philadelphia primary murder. The man arrested said he was Christopher Smith, 28, of 804 Westchester Avenue, the Bronx. The arrest was made by Captain Andrew J. Wines of the Bronx Detective Bureau and Detective John J. Clark. The police say the prisoner is known to them as "Muggsy" Smith.

The arrest was made on a warrant from Philadelphia charging Smith with being a fugitive from justice and with complicity in the "shooting up" of a polling place.

let it be so announced by this committee the length and breadth of our country and a clean bill of health given these gentlemen. But if any are guilty, let the guilty be shot at once, without an hour's delay. We need a few public examples. It means saving good loyal lives.

"The time has come when it is not Senator La Follette and his followers who are on trial before the public, but the United States Senate and the House for their supineness and inactivity in the face of public opinion.

"If something of this kind is not done at once we are sure to wake up some morning and find that some patriotic young men, moved by impulse, have shot these men and disgraced the Senate and Congress, and the whole country will rise as a whole and acquit them—but this will only be the beginning of other lawless acts, and the blame will be laid at your doors, so act at once.

"What is the good of the United States Department of Justice and the Secret Service of the United States if men in highest places are accused of disloyalty by the entire press of this country and have the effrontery to flout their disloyalty in the face of public opinion, and nothing is done either by the Senate or the House? This whole business is only to encourage spies and traitors to blow up our ships, our buildings, and destroy American life."

"Before ousting Senator La Follette for making unwelcome statements, might it not be well to discover whether those statements are true? Out here the feeling against sending our boys to France is strong. It is not expressed from the pulpit or platform, but quietly among the people themselves on every side."

A telegram signed by Edward Gillen of Racine, Wis., demanded La Follette's expulsion, the writer saying he believed "in hanging all traitors."

A letter from the County Council of Defense of Barnett County, Wis., ran:

"Grieved and humiliated by accounts that deliberate efforts are being made by petitions and other instrumentalities to represent this patriotic Commonwealth to the Congress of the United States as disloyal, we take this means to repudiate in the name of the people of Wisconsin every disloyal word and deed calculated to misrepresent her and her people, to discourage the Government in its efforts to win the war, to give aid and encouragement to the German Government and thereby increase hardships and hazards of the Wisconsin soldiers."

PROTEST AGAINST SEDITION.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 1.—State and Federal authorities were urged in resolutions adopted by the State Public Safety Committee today to punish speedily those in high office who make disloyal or seditious utterances. The resolutions refer to reported public utterances of Senator La Follette and to the mention of Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of New York in recent State Department disclosures, and conclude with the declaration that "disloyal or seditious utterances, especially when coming from those who occupy high office, can no longer be tolerated."

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 1.—The Chattanooga Bar Association today adopted resolutions "condemning in unmeasured terms" the acts of "Senators La Follette, Gronna, Reed, Hardwick, Stone, Vardaman, and others acting with them," in their attitude toward the war and demanding "their expulsion from the American Senate."

The Dairy Cows Must Not Be Slaughtered!
THE 500,000 dairy cows on our farms are in danger, and so your milk supply is in danger. Dairy cows bring a high price for meat and they must be sold for meat if they can't be made to pay as milkers.
The College of Agriculture of the state made investigations in thirty-eight counties and found that the great herd is decreasing at the rate of 71,000 cows a year. Meanwhile, there were 26% less female calves raised.
The reasons given for the slaughter was scarcity of labor, high prices of feed and low prices for milk.
To Save the Dairy Herds, You Must Use Milk Freely
Unless more milk is used—unless you understand that the milk producers on the farms are selling their milk as low as possible, then the dairy industry of the East will go the way of the sheep industry, which has been practically destroyed because it was not profitable.
During October we dairymen will receive for Grade B milk testing 3.6% butter fat, 7.18 cents a quart. It will cost us over 6.97 cents a quart to produce this milk. Our profit, then, will be about 2/10 of a cent per quart.
Some people think that cows live on grass and forage. As a matter of fact we have to buy a large part of the feed for our cows. In the last twelve months, feed has gone up over 60%, just the same as your flour and your meat have gone up, and for the same reason. Farm labor has gone up over 33% and other expenses have gone up 50%.
Children Simply Must Have Milk
Their growth, their very lives depend upon it. Every child should consume in one way or another at least a quart of milk a day.
Grown ups consume too little milk. Business men should drink more milk at lunch and cut down on meat and egg dishes.
Housewives should save money by cutting down on the purchases of meat and eggs and put more milk on the table, either to be drunk or in puddings, soups, breads, cakes, custards, etc.
Mr. Hoover Says, "Do Not Waste Milk"
It should be bought freely and every bit of it should be consumed. The cream and butter furnishes energy, and skimmed milk and buttermilk are real foods, because they build up the body and safeguard health.
We, the dairymen of the state, pledge ourselves to keep down our selling prices as low as possible month by month. Our books, our cost of production and our selling prices are always open to the public.
Each of the 42,000 members of the Dairymen's League are spending a few cents a day for this advertising, to lay before the consumers the vital facts about milk production; the cost of its production and the value of milk as a food.

The Wrong Idea Has More Cunning In Its Tongue Than the Right One

THERE is more lure to the voice of cunning to-day than ever before. False claims, decked in rhetoric—in clothes, in finance, in statecraft—win for a time.

And then they lose.

The standard that does not change—the man that rings true in the crisis—the clothes which measure up to every situation and continue to be that fullest measure of excellence—have their moment of greatest value when the world seems tumbling about their ears.

The first nip of real Autumn is here. In the flickering firelight there is a picture of another wonderful New York season—with its new problems, its possibilities, its glories and its styles.

It is an inspiring thing to contemplate—this picture in the fire. Destiny is darting about in the shadows. No word magician could paint such a scene of palpitating human interest. Conditions are shifting, values are changing—as individual New Yorkers we are asking ourselves many questions.

We are having a world experience which we never had before. Accustomed as we are to seeing New York grow, and then discard, we are seeing her now in a new light—occupying a position of leadership which no city had been called upon to occupy.

It is the season for the giant of the New World to change coat—which interests all of us immensely and immediately.

Weber and Heilbroner clothes for Autumn and Winter are ready for your inspection. They reflect the mood of the hour—of the well-bred New Yorker.

For many seasons these clothes have been prepared to exactly meet the requisites of the New York man. It required closer observation—closer application of those rules which have governed their creation in the past—to exactly meet the situation this Fall.

But it has been done—more successfully than we dared hope.

Whatever you see coming from the custom tailor shops in which men of wealth and taste are registering their ideas of propriety, you will see reflected directly in the clothes being offered by this establishment.

The same subdued colorings and cheery tweeds—the same richness of all wool fabrics—the same attractiveness of model.

It has not been necessary to depart from a single Weber and Heilbroner ideal—nor has it been necessary to so increase the prices of these clothes to make a marked difference in your expenditures.

They are what they always have been—the clothes of the well-groomed man of affairs, maintaining that note of difference which first commended them to thousands, and then to tens of thousands, of New Yorkers.

Things which have appealed to the makers of ordinary ready-to-wear clothing have found no place in these. The wrong idea has more cunning in its tongue than the right one—the temptation is greater to imitate the misguided style thought in a suit—the solecisms and vulgarisms—than the virtues.

These are the things, obviously, which the exclusive, well-informed custom tailor avoids. He has no place for blatant "originality." It is as foreign to him and his clientele as ragtime would have been to Liszt and Wagner.

And it is quite as foreign to these Weber and Heilbroner clothes.

All things considered, we believe that these Fall and Winter assortments—reflect the best thought of American and English tailors, surpassing anything this house has ever been able to offer.

Suits, $20 to $52.50. Evening Dress Suits, $37.50 to $65. Dinner Jackets, $26.50 to $50. Overcoats, $20 to $65.

The celebrated Burberry or Hunt imported English Overcoats.

Army Officers' O. D. Serge Uniforms, $43 and $48; Officers' Overcoats, $50 to $95; Officers' Field Lockers, $10. Officers' Puttees, etc.

DRAFTING ATTACKED BY MEXICAN CONSUL

Burns's Charges Referred to Secretary Lansing and the New York Police.

DENOUNCES LOCAL BOARDS

Official Likens Them to "Hordes of Villa"—Resents a Call for His Assistant.

Charles H. Tuttle, Chairman of Local Exemption Board 145, the office of which is in the College of the City of New York, has sent to Secretary of State Lansing copies of letters which have passed between himself and Juan T. Burns, the Consul General of Mexico in New York, while a statement which Mr. Burns gave out last night has been referred to the Department of Justice and the police authorities for investigation. Mr. Burns asserts that Jesus Martinez, the Mexican Vice Consul, has been drafted into the army over his protest. In referring to the members of the local boards in New York City he says that "they can only be compared to the savage hordes of Villa."

Mr. Tuttle, Chairman of Board 145, could not be reached last night, but Dr. Franklin Welker of 344 West 145th Street, the medical member of the board, explained the case of Mr. Martinez in detail. Mr. Martinez, he said, had not been drafted, and all that the board had requested of Mr. Burns was that Mr. Martinez make out the affidavits which are required in all cases of aliens, including German subjects.

"Instead of complying with our very courteous request, which would have automatically secured the exemption of the man Martinez," Dr. Welker said, "the Mexican Consul General sent the board a letter which I can only describe as very insulting and nasty in composition. That letter is now in the possession of the Secretary of State for such action as he may see fit to take in the case."

Roger B. Wood, in charge of the draft in New York City, was in Washington yesterday holding an important conference with Provost Marshal General Crowder and was not expected back in New York until today. In his absence the charges made by Mr. Burns were called by one of his subordinates to the attention of the Police Department.

"Mexican citizens," said Consul General Burns, "have been forced into the army here without regard to their nationality. The men in charge of the local draft boards show such stupidity and such ignorance of the rights of men that they can only be compared to the savage hordes of Villa in our internal struggle, who acted without consideration of either human rights or the legal rights of citizens.

Accuses Draft Boards.

"The climax of this abnormal situation is the lack of responsibility that the boards assume when they commit such unjustifiable attempts. The case has been made more astonishing by their intention, against all respect of the sovereignty of nations, to recruit even Consular agents with full knowledge of the latters' status.

"I cannot realize what is the final aim of these boards in forming an army of foreigners to fight for this country, for which they have no affection, nor has this country any lien on them, unless to create a foreign legion, as in France, but that is a body composed of volunteers. The fact remains that these boards are casting aside human rights, the very thing that the United States Army is said to be sent to fight for.

"I do not know what my country will do through its diplomatic agents, but personally I feel myself obliged and entitled to protest in the most open manner against this arbitrary action committed in a most absurd way. Such acts only create a feeling of deep animosity between the two countries, sowing the seeds of hatred and revenge in the hearts of Mexicans, who are at present cruelly and roughly treated. Thus is destroyed the long work of years in which both countries have been trying heartily to create sincere friendship between their citizens."

According to Mr. Burns, more than 100 Mexicans have been drafted in this city against their will, and these men, he asserts, are now serving in the national army. Several thousands of other Mexicans, he says, have been called by boards in or near New York City. He said Vice Consul Martinez was continuing his Consular duties, and that he would stay there, regardless of what the United States might have to say in the matter.

"Knowing their rights," he added, "I shall protect all Mexicans who come to me and who have been drafted. I know of several cases where in order to comply with the draft law exemption claims have been filed within the prescribed seven days and no attention has been paid to them until it was too late and the time limit had expired."

The statements made by Mr. Burns were denied by draft officials. The orders issued by Provost Marshal General Crowder call for the exemption of every alien in the United States who has not taken out citizenship papers or has not declared his intention of becoming a citizen. A case illustrative of the operation of the draft law was cited. Guillermo Busch, a Peruvian citizen, was called for examination, passed the physical test, and did not file a claim for exemption. He was ordered to report for duty. At the last moment the Consul General of Peru submitted the papers, as required by law, and Busch was immediately exempted from service.

Charges Called Ridiculous.

"We shall meet the challenge of the Mexican," said a draft official last night, "and he will have a chance to prove the truth or falsity of what he says. His statements are ridiculous and are not borne out in a single instance. Some aliens may have been drafted, but if they were it was because they did not file the simple affidavits for exemption. Even those drafted have been discharged when they complied. Any alien can get exemption up to the very minute the train starts for the cantonment. Once in camp, he deals with the military authorities, who also will exempt when the required affidavits are forthcoming."

Consul General Burns was arrested in New York on Jan. 3 of this year, charged with conspiracy to violate the provisions of the arms embargo against Mexico in the Fall of 1915, when he was alleged to have aided in smuggling a cargo of arms and other munitions into Mexico. That case is yet to be tried.

In March of this year there was an exodus of German spies and agents from the United States into Mexico. Mr. Burns said at the time that he was issuing "safe conducts" to all Germans who applied for them, and when asked if he investigated the applicants before issuing these "safe conducts" replied "Certainly not." He was recently reappointed Consul General at New York, with offices at 120 Broadway.

DELINQUENTS ROUNDED UP.

Nearly 100 Draft Men Turned Over to Military Authorities.

Nearly 100 national army delinquents who have been called to the colors in the last three weeks, but who failed to appear for mobilization, were rounded up by the police and Department of Justice agents yesterday and turned over to the military authorities. Forty-two of them were sent under guard to Camp Upton yesterday and the rest will go this morning.

The fifty-odd men held in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory last night were without blankets up to 8 o'clock, when an appeal was sent to the Department of Charities for any kind of warm covering.

One of the men held in the armory last night was William Kieve of 472 Fifteenth Street, Brooklyn, who frankly stated he had no desire to fight. The man is said to be a follower of the late Pastor Russell, a pacifist, and a conscientious objector. Kieve said he was a member of the International Bible Students' Association and that he believed in the teachings of the organization which forbids its members to participate in war in any form.

At its public session yesterday afternoon the District Board of Appeals handed down one of the most important decisions which have yet been made public. This decision concerns the exempting of drafted men for limited periods by various boards. Charles E. Hughes, Chairman of the board, announced that such exemptions are contrary to the regulations governing the Selective Draft. The announcement of Mr. Hughes came after Louis Marshall had called the attention of the board to a case in which a local board had exempted a man for thirty days. Mr. Hughes cautioned the members of all committees to be on the lookout for all such cases.

Local Board 166 came in for a scoring by the District Board during the discussion of the case of John J. Rose, an appellant from that board for exemption on the ground of a dependent wife and two children. The District Board, it appears, requested certain additional information from the local board, which notified the appeal board that if it wanted the information it could get it itself.

Mr. Hughes asked for the name of the Chairman of the board.

TO SELL BONDS AT CAMP.

Campaign to Help the Liberty Loan Is On at Plattsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Liberty bond campaign is on in full swing at the Plattsburg Training Camp, and Colonel Wolf expects to be able to report a large sum subscribed by the students. He received word from the War Department this morning asking that the camp co-operate in every way possible to make the bond issue a success, and the notice was read at retreat tonight.

It was not long after the supper hour that committees were formed in every company and the six batteries to further the bond campaign. Colonel Wolf will make a weekly report of the progress until the closing day, Oct. 27.

The New York and New England regiments had their first rifle practice on the range today. The shooting was from the 100-yard mark, and despite the fact that many of the men had never fired an army rifle before the scores, as an average, were remarkably good. The two regiments will shoot from the 200-yard line tomorrow.

Two New Yorkers were discharged today, both at their own request. They are George Van Werveke, 44 West Thirty-seventh Street, of the Fifth Training Battery, and T. C. Crimmins of Brooklyn of the Sixth Battery.

SPARTANBURG GETS CLEAN HEALTH BILL

Chief Sanitary Inspector for Army Reports Everything Has Been Done to Protect Men.

THE 71ST REACHES CAMP

First Section Begins to Arrive in the Afternoon—F. R. Coudert, Jr., Assigned to Command in the Line.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Oct. 1.—After two days inspection of the camp, Colonel H. C. Fisher, Chief Sanitary Inspector of the army, who is representing Secretary Baker on a tour of training camps, finished his work this afternoon and officially reported a clean bill of health for the Twenty-seventh Division. He stated that every precautionary measure to safeguard the men's health had been taken, and that this, with the natural advantages of the site, should help the division to establish a record for robustness.

Making better time than the Twenty-third, which left Jersey City at about the same hour, the Seventy-first Infantry began to arrive at camp at 1 o'clock this afternoon. The first section to arrive bore Colonel William G. Bates, his staff and the headquarters and supply companies, and an hour later the section with Companies A, B, C, D, and E aboard pulled into the detrainment station. The two other sections with companies F, G, H, I, K, L, and M followed late at night.

The Twenty-third is not scheduled to get in before 2 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Seventy-first was the first organization to arrive, forewarned that within a few days it would be merged in another organization. The men in the ranks were not reticent, and showed keen disappointment. Line officers, however, were inclined to take the matter philosophically.

With the coming of sunny weather the camp dried up and the regiments at once went back to training, determined to make up for lost time. The One Hundred and Seventh practiced bombing all day. Though they have been at the work only four days, the soldiers are fast becoming adept at this work.

While supervising the instruction of Company B, Second Lieutenant Stephen Schwab tripped and fell into a trench. A small bone in his right leg was fractured, and he will be incapacitated about two weeks.

It was hiking day for the Twelfth, and though long distances had been planned, the regiment soon found that the dryness at the camp was duplicated outside the reservation. Hence the morning was devoted to limbering exercises, marches about the camp grounds, and in the afternoon Colonel Foster's men were on the job improving their regimental site, already a model for comfort.

The last regiments to recover from what has been dubbed "the deluge of mud" were the First, Second, and Third, whose sites unfortunately were pitched for dry weather. Booted and armed with boards and shovels, the up-State troops worked like beavers restoring firmness to their drill spaces. In these three organizations an effort is being made to emphasize physical exercise.

In order to get into the thick of the fighting, Lieutenant Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., son of the New York lawyer, applied for and received permission to be attached to the One Hundred and Fifth Infantry. Lieutenant Coudert was trained to camp to serve as aid to Brig. Gen. Michie, commanding the Forty-third Infantry Brigade, but when he learned that an aid seldom gets any real action, asked for the transfer.

Chartering Commission Completed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Another member of the Shipping Board's Chartering Commission was appointed today in the person of J. D. Smull of New York. Other members are Welding Ring, Chairman, and Daniel Bacon, both of New York.

Daniel Bacon of the West India Steamship Company yesterday denied the report from Washington that he had been appointed a member of the Chartering Commission. Mr. Bacon explained that he had been urged to accept it, but had been compelled to decline because he is already serving the Government as a member of the Board of Appraisal for the Navy Department.

DENIES JAPAN HAS MONROE DOCTRINE

Viscount Ishii Explains Pledge Is for Open Door and Not to Invade China.

WARNS OF GERMAN PLOTS

Mikado's Commissioners Guests at Dinner at St. Regis—Lunch at Bankers' Club.

Viscount Kikujiro Ishii, head of the Japanese Commission, last night requested the press of the United States to correct the interpretation given to his speech of last Saturday night that Japan, in pledging not to violate the political or territorial integrity of China, had established "a Monroe Doctrine in Asia."

The Commissioner asserted in a speech to editors, publishers, and city officials at the St. Regis that the term was misleading, since Japan had promised that she herself would not invade the rights of China, and would "observe the principle of the open door and equal opportunity," whereas the Monroe Doctrine, as applied by the United States, carried no such specific assurance in relation to the South and Central American countries. He added that no one doubted that the United States would always deal fairly and honorably with other nations.

The Viscount was the guest of honor at a dinner given by Oswald Garrison Villard, who, after denouncing German intrigues and German atrocities, expressed the hope that there would be created a Japanese-American Commission, or a commission from all the countries around the Pacific, "to meet on common ground and to study and report upon all problems growing out of the contacts of the several peoples concerned." In explaining the absence of Mayor Mitchel, who had been invited and was represented by Controller Prendergast, Mr. Villard aroused applause by announcing that Mr. Mitchel had "already buckled on his armor to keep in office the best government the city of New York has ever had."

Viscount Ishii led up to his explanation of his former speech by asserting that his one great purpose in coming to the United States was to tell people the truth and thereby to dissipate any misunderstandings that might exist between this country and Japan.

Explains Japan's Pledge.

"In a speech delivered on Saturday night I made particular reference to the policy of Japan with regard to China," he said. "This reference took the form of a repetition of the pledge and promise that Japan would not violate the political independence or territorial integrity of China; would at all times regard the high principle of the open door and equal opportunity. Now I find that this utterance of mine is taken as the enunciation of a 'Monroe Doctrine in Asia.' I want to make it very clear to you that the application of the term 'Monroe Doctrine' to this policy and principle, voluntarily outlined and pledged by me, is inaccurate.

"There is this fundamental difference between the 'Monroe Doctrine' of the United States as to Central and South America and the enunciation of Japan's attitude toward China. In the first there is on the part of the United States no engagement or promise, while in the other Japan voluntarily announces that Japan will herself engage not to violate the political or territorial integrity of her neighbor, and to observe the principle of the open door and equal opportunity, asking at the same time other nations to respect these principles.

"Therefore, gentlemen, you will mark the wide difference and agree with me. I am sure, that the use of the term is somewhat loose and misleading. I ask you to note this with no suggestion that I can or any one else does question the policy or attitude of your country, which we well know will always deal fairly and honorably with other nations.

Warns of German Plots.

"As you must have noticed, I have persistenly struck one note every time I have spoken. It has been the note of warning against German intrigue in America and in Japan—intrigue which has extended over a period of more than ten years. I am not going to weary you with a repetition of this squalid story of plots, conceived and fostered by the agents of Germany, but I solemnly repeat the warning here in this most distinguished gathering, so thoroughly representative of the highest ideals of American journalism.

Viscount Ishii said he was "confident that from this time forward we will be able to effectively co-operate in all matters tending to secure a victory in this struggle which means so much for all of us."

Ambassador Sato said that he regarded the visit of the Japanese Commission as "a promise and prophecy of the coming of a saner day, when there shall be no East and no West in the wider vision of international peace."

All of the members of the Japanese Commission were present except Vice Admiral Isamu Takeshita, who is ill at the home of E. H. Gary. His illness and the effects of the strain to which Viscount Ishii has been subjected in the many entertainments here have forced the commission to postpone the visit to Oyster Bay to see Colonel Roosevelt today.

Members of the commission were the guests of the Bankers' Club at luncheon yesterday, after which they motored to the Government aviation field, near Mineola, and watched fifteen aviators perform "stunts." Judge Gary was toastmaster at the luncheon at the Bankers' Club, and addresses were made by Elihu Root, William Fellowes Morgan, and Viscount Ishii.

"Democracies are peculiarly open to misrepresentation and misunderstanding," Mr. Root said. "There never has been in this country, so far as my observation and reading go, any more dangerous and persistent misrepresentation regarding the relations, the purposes, the character of another country, than in the case of the relations between the United States and Japan.

Root Praises Japan.

"I haven't the slightest doubt that the misrepresentations, and the attempts to create that feeling among the people have been very largely the result of a fixed and settled purpose, and that purpose, it seems to me it is growing day by day more clear, was the purpose that formed a part of the policy of that great ruling caste of Germany which is attempting to subjugate the world today. That policy has been pursued everywhere in the civilized world.

"For many years I was very familiar with our own Department of Foreign Affairs. During that time there were many difficult, perplexing and doubtful questions to be discussed and settled between the United States and Japan. During all that period there never was a moment when the Government of Japan was not frank, friendly, and most solicitous not to enlarge but to minimize and do away with all causes of controversy."

Mr. Morgan spoke of the opportunities for closer friendship between the United States and Japan to be created by extending American ideas in higher education among the Japanese youth, and Viscount Ishii, in an informal and cordial reply, also alluded to this possibility. He declared that he would be proud to take home a message of friendship from Senator Root to the people of Japan.

Those present included most of the leading men in the New York financial world. At the guest table, besides Viscount Ishii, Ambassador Sato, and the speakers, were Bishop Greer, Rear Admiral Usher, Percy Rockefeller, and R. Fulton Cutting.

CALLS BRITAIN SEVERE IN DEMANDS ON JAPAN

Stiffer Attitude Since America Entered the War, Japanese Magazine Asserts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The plain intimation that with the entrance of the United States into the world war the British Government, which has an offensive and defensive alliance with Japan, completely changed its attitude to one of stiffness toward Japan, is conveyed in an article which has just appeared in the Taivo, a Japanese magazine of high repute. A translation of this article, received in Washington today, does not mention Great Britain by name, but the inference is plain that this is the nation meant. Extracts from a translation of the article follow:

"The certain splendid indomitable country which since the outbreak of the war has been holding the leadership of the Entente Allies, undaunted in the teeth of numerous difficulties, was not a little panic-stricken before the desperate activities of German submarines, and in the extremity of her pessimism has approached our country with rigorous and irrational negotiations concerning the shipping problem.

"This has perfectly scared the Kasumigaseki, (Foreign Office,) which has been very timid at the best of times. Subsequently America's participation brought some measure of reassurance, but, as the shortage of shipping was felt as keenly as before, the power referred to would not relax her severity in making demands on our authorities, and the poor Kasumigaseki is said to be as much worried as ever.

"As an ally, Japan ought to do her best to help the Entente, but she has no obligation to go so far in her assistance as to risk her very existence. But, from the viewpoint of that certain country, it seems preposterous that Japan, being a member of the Allies, should be reaping profits out of the war, and that we should not do a bit more in sharing the burdens of the war. The communication sent to Japan in the late Spring from that country was a most outspoken document, seldom to be seen even in the unreserved communications of blood relatives, being discourteous in tone and arrogant in language.

"The young military and naval officers were indignant at hearing of this; they threatened at one time to bring up a problem of national disgrace, it is said.

"Whether it has anything to do with this or not, the dispatch of our naval force to the Mediterranean soon became a fact. But the highly wrought diplomatic document mentioned has not been repealed. Not only that, but the attitude of that country grew all the more pressing with America's participation in the war."

The article intimates a connection between the American steel embargo and the country referred to, and concludes:

"Thus it is extremely busy and confused in the Kasumigaseki, though all seems to go well outwardly. Whether true or otherwise, we do not know, but we have transcribed just as we have heard it."

The Hochi, a leading Japanese newspaper, explains why Japan will not send an expedition to Europe, unless it should be at the last moment, when a finishing touch is needed to the military efforts of the Allies. The fear is entertained that the Entente nations might meet with some great adversity, or that they might be altogether exhausted. Then, it is asserted, Germany might extend her activities to the Orient, or China might need Japanese military intervention.

COMPLETES ARMAMENT OF MERCHANT MARINE

Navy Has Provided a Gun Crew of From 16 to 32 Men for Each American Ship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Secretary Daniels said today that the Navy Department had been able to find guns and crews for every American merchant vessel designated for armament. There are from 16 to 32 members in the armed naval guards on each of the armed American merchantmen.

When the work of finding guns for these ships was undertaken the navy had few that were available. While it had many fine gunners it did not have enough of these to enable the quick arming of all merchantmen without handicapping warships needing gunners.

In order to find men for the naval guns on merchant ships it became necessary to turn every battleship of the navy into a school of fire to train men for the work.

The stock of guns for the armament of merchantmen which the navy had when the war began was insufficient for the reason that before the submarine developed a new method of sea warfare it was not the intention of the world's navies to arm more of these vessels than the ones used as naval auxiliaries. The American policy was to provide only enough extra guns to arm American vessels taken over for use by the navy as transports and supply vessels during the war. Now it is the policy to arm all American merchant craft, except the slower schooners.

Confirms Ex-Member's Nomination for a Federal Judgeship.

THIERICHENS FOUND GUILTY

German Raider's Captain Convicted Under White Slave Act.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Captain Max V. Thierichens, former commander of the seized German commerce raider, Prinz Eitel Friedrich, was found guilty today of violating the Mann act in bringing a woman from Ithaca, N. Y., to Philadelphia for improper purposes. Sentence was deferred pending the disposition of a motion for a new trial. There are two counts in the indictment on which the German Captain was convicted, and the maximum penalty on each is five years. The Federal Jury was out twenty minutes. The trial lasted three days.

Tomorrow Captain Thierichens will face the court on a charge of smuggling ashore nineteen dutiable ship chronometers from the raider while she was interned at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Three other persons, residents of this city, are awaiting trial on similar smuggling charges. Thierichens is also under indictment on a charge of violating the postal laws in sending an improper letter to a school teacher in Saginaw, Mich.

Captain Thierichens, whose exploits as commander of the sea raider won praise from his Government, had been interned in a Southern fort before his arrest. Since his arrest early this Summer he has been confined in the county prison here.

BARS CLOSED BY NEW LAW.

2,092 in New York State Unable to Continue Licenses.

ALBANY, Oct. 1.—The number of places in New York State where intoxicants can be sold legally was decreased by more than 2,000 today.

The decrease was brought about by the beginning of the effectiveness of the Brown amendments to the State liquor tax laws, which provided that after Sept. 30 there could be only one intoxicant dispensary to every 500 inhabitants in political subdivisions having fewer than 55,000 population.

Commissioner Sisson of the State Excise Commission stated that of the more than 26,000 licenses issued last year 2,092 could not be renewed. The constitutionality of the statute has been questioned in courts in several parts of the State and an early and final decision by the Court of Appeals is expected to be sought soon.

SUFFRAGISTS REBUKE WASHINGTON PICKETS

New York City Workers in Resolutions Say They Oppose Such Tactics.

At a big meeting of the leaders and suffrage workers of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, at the headquarters, 3 East Thirty-eighth Street, yesterday morning, a resolution addressed to the voters of New York, repudiating the work of the suffrage pickets at Washington was passed, with great enthusiasm. It was as follows:

Whereas: Some of the men in the City of New York have said they proposed to vote against the Woman Suffrage Amendment in order to rebuke the women who have picketed the White House.

Be it resolved: That we of the Woman Suffrage Party of the City of New York protest against this injustice. We have not picketed the White House and are opposed to such tactics as emphatically as any man in New York City.

Let it not be forgotten that a million women in the State of New York have asked the men of this State for the vote. Shall this petition of patriotic honorable women be denied, in order to express condemnation of the handful of women. These are times which call for calm mindedness, reason, and fair play.

Men of New York, we ask you to do justice to the women of New York City, and not punish them for the acts of a few.

This was the next to the last meeting before the question of votes for women in New York State will be put before the people and plans were formulated for the work of the campaign in the next five weeks. Heads of the State Suffrage Associations of Nebraska, South Dakota, Arkansas, and Michigan were present and brought greetings from the women of their States, most of whom have campaigns on for next year. They came to learn of the organization work of the New York women.

REVEAL I. W. W. PLANS TO STOP WAR WORK

HAD GERMANS' 'GOOD WILL'

So Wrote Seattle Agitator—Paralyze 'Machinery of Murder,' Said Newspaper.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The wide ramifications of the I. W. W. plot to disrupt industries, hamper military operations, obstruct conscription, and cause America to lose the war, as charged against the 166 men indicted in the Federal District Court last week, will be disclosed by The Chicago Herald tomorrow, that paper having come into possession of a copy of the indictment.

Letters, telegrams, pamphlets, books, and so-called newspapers circulated by the I. W. W. form most of the evidence which the Government has accumulated.

One letter from James Rowan, sent from Seattle on Aug. 2, 1917, to Haywood, says:

"There has been considerable agitation in Seattle among the lumber mills, shipyards, and other industries, and the old bugaboo of 'patriotism' is being preached on all sides.

"We have the good-will of the German people here and we feel that they are in sympathy with our cause. We do not call them Germans, however, but refer to them the same as others, the 'Fellow Workers.' We are going to carry our points if we have to stop every industry on the Pacific Coast.

Haywood and others are held liable for the publication in the newspaper, Solidarity, in August of the following:

"The I. W. W. is more than a labor organization. It is a revolutionary union. * * * Red card men are shrewd, determined, valorous, and loyal to the cause they love. * * * There would not be soldiers enough in the country to round them up for arrest, nor jails enough to hold them. * * * Our system of job agitation is such that no power on earth can keep the union from spreading its influence."

Again that newspaper said on Aug. 25:

"Any one with good sense now objects to being told that Czar Wilson is working for the interest of the working class in trying to force them against their wills into the bloody European slaughterfest. The treachery, duplicity, and hypocrisy of the present Administration has done more to remove the time-hallowed veneration for political government from the minds of the slaves than anything that has happened in decades."

In another issue of the paper it is said:

"We consider the bombastic and far-fetched talk about freedom and democracy simply so much bunk. The only place we have anything to gain or to defend is on the job. Had we the power we would stop every train, ship, mine, and mill, every food and supply train—every wheel of industry—and thus paralyze the machinery of murder and make it impossible for the ignorant man-killers of the bosses to gather their toll of the life-blood of foreign slaves."

A circular "printed and distributed by Charles Jacobson of Virginia, Crosby, and Duluth, Minn.," on June 22, 1917, says:

"Hundreds of our fellow-workers have been arrested and thrown into jail that the workers have built for the reason that they did not register. * * * We are producing the iron of which the war machineries are built from. * * * We appeal to you workers of the iron industry to prepare for a walkout from your job and demand that the imprisoned fellow-workers are immediately released."

A circular "printed and circulated by James Rowan in the State of Washington," on Aug. 10, 1917, says in part:

"Fellow-workers: If these men and all other members of our organization in the Northwestern States are not turned loose by the 20th, let our answer be a general strike of all men employed in the harvest fields and fruit orchards * * * Let the harvest go to waste and the fruit rot on the ground."

A book on sabotage, sent by Haywood to Duluth, to be translated into Finnish, says at one point:

"Is a strike contemplated by the most indispensable workers—those of the alimentary trades? A quart of kerosene or other greasy and malodorous matter, poured or smeared on the level of an oven * * * and welcome the scabs and scabby soldiers to come to bake the bread. * * *

"Is a strike coming in the iron, steel, copper, or other mineral industry? A little sand or emery powder in the gear of those machines * * * and they will become palsied and useless."

To paralyze railroad operations it is suggested that "it would be well to choose those workers among the most skilled and experienced * * * who would by a single stroke disable and render useless for some days the materials necessary for the regular performance of the service and the movement of the trains."

More than half of the 166 indicted I. W. W.'s charged with hatching anti-war conspiracies are now under arrest. Thomas Scarlett, David Ingar, and George Williams were served with warrants during the day in Cleveland.

R. S. Culver, R. J. Bobba, Joseph Oates, J. Blanco, and W. H. Lewis, all identified with local I. W. W. activities at Globe, Ariz., were taken into custody today.

MORE INDICTMENTS COMING.

Only the Chief Figures Thus Far Touched, Says Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The great harvest of indictments returned at Chicago, it was authoritatively stated tonight, is but a fraction of what the Government will reap as the result of its nation-wide raid on Industrial Workers of the World offices Sept. 5.

Only those regarded by the Government as chief figures in the alleged conspiracy to thwart the Government in its war plans have been indicted. Tons of documents seized in the raid are yet to be studied, their disclosures catalogued, and arranged for use in further proceedings. This work is now going on in about fifty towns and cities.

In obtaining indictments against 166 allied ringleaders of the conspiracy, the Department of Justice has simply skimmed the cream of the investigation. Documents in its possession are understood to show extensive minor plans, confined to particular localities, and designed to affect local situations, through which those named in the indictments and many others sought to hamper the Government by methods some of which have not yet been disclosed to the public.

I. W. W. AGITATORS HELD IN $10,000 BAIL

Miss Flynn and Others Stay in Jail, But Woman Gives Bond for Giovanitti.

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, Carlo Tresca, Arturo Giovanitti, and Giovanni Baldazzi, the I. W. W. agitators arrested here Saturday night, were arraigned before Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday morning and held in $10,000 bail each pending the arrival of a copy of the blanket indictment which a Federal Grand Jury in Chicago returned against I. W. W. agitators in all parts of the United States. Late yesterday afternoon Miss Sarah Bard Field of 118 Waverley Place went to the Federal Building and gave $10,000 cash bail for Giovanitti.

The prisoners, who had spent two nights and a day in the Tombs, were taken to the Federal Building at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The men were handcuffed together, but Miss Flynn was unshackled. Three lawyers announced that they had been retained to look after the interests of Miss Flynn and the three Italians. About twenty lesser lights of the I. W. W., including women, were in the Federal Building.

Assistant District Attorney Harold A. Content represented the Government. Captain William M. Offley, Chief of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation, who was the complaining witness, told Commissioner Hitchcock that the copy of the Chicago indictment had not arrived, adding that the arrests had been made somewhat hurriedly following telegraphic instructions from Chicago.

Commissioner Hitchcock informed the prisoners that they stood charged, with William D. Haywood and others, of having conspired "by force to prevent, hinder, and delay the execution of the laws of the United States." All four prisoners demanded an immediate examination, and Commissioner Hitchcock set tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock as the tentative time for such a hearing

RED CROSS DINNER IN ROME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 1.—Colonel George Baker, Majors Morron, Huntington, Heiser, and Brady, and Captain Post of the American Red Cross Commission were entertained at dinner tonight by Ambassador Page.

Among the other guests were: Senator Marconi, General Giardino, Minister of War; Marquis Borsarelli, Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs, who, since his visit to America with the Italian Mission, is enthusiastic about the United States; Prince Colonna, Mayor of Rome; General Dellavalle, head of the Sanitary Service of the Italian Army; Gerham Vevens, Director of Fine Arts of the American Academy, who is attached as Captain to the commission; Mr. Scudder of the American Ambulance Service, and the Rev. Walter Lowrie, formerly of Newport, now rector of the American Church here.

INSPECT U. S. DESTROYERS.

Two High Naval Officers Get Reports on Their Anti-U-Boat eWrk.

BASE OF THE AMERICAN FLOTILLA IN BRITISH WATERS, Sunday, Sept. 30, (delayed.)—Two American naval officers of high rank spent a busy day today inspecting the American destroyers and receiving reports from other commanders on the satisfactory progress of the anti-submarine campaign.

They had luncheon aboard the flagship of the flotilla with destroyer commanders who happened to be in port. In the evening they attended an entertainment given in their honor by the bluejackets in the new club house erected for the sailors. Both officers made speeches and thanked the men for the entertainment. They said they would carry back to the United States the excellent impression made upon them by all ranks in the flotilla.

NEWTON TAKES POST.

Succeeds Dudley Field Malone as Collector of the Port.

Byron R. Newton, who on Saturday was confirmed by the Senate as Collector for the Customs District of New York, appeared yesterday at the Custom House and was sworn into office, succeeding Dudley Field Malone, who resigned because he disagreed with President Wilson's woman suffrage policies. Mr. Newton's first official act was to redesignate Henry C. Stuart and Minton Fluhrer as special deputy collectors.

Mr. Malone introduced the heads of the departments to the new Collector. Mr. Newton said he had come to New York in the rôle of a pacifist regarding the troubled political conditions in the city. Mr. Newton after spending a few days here familiarizing himself with his duties, will go to Washington and wind up his affairs at the capital, where he formerly was an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

WIFE SUES ANOTHER MAN.

Husband Leaves Her When She Starts Breach of Promise Action.

A jury before Supreme Court Justice Giegerich began taking testimony yesterday to determine whether a young woman is entitled to collect damages for breach of promise from one man after she has married another. The defendant is Dr. Francis D. Griffin, a dentist of 164 West Seventy-third Street, who is sued by Mrs. Gladys Teed Walde, now the wife of Raymond L. Walde, who, she said, is the Assistant Principal of the Scarsdale High School. She testified that her husband had left her on Sunday after learning that the breach of promise case was to go to trial yesterday.

The plaintiff, who lived with her mother, Mrs. Nellie Teed, at 157 Manhattan Avenue, before her marriage, said she was courted by Dr. Griffin, whose secretary and assistant she was, both at her home and at his office, and that he promised to wed her in the Fall of 1914. The wedding was postponed until the Spring of 1916, when, she testified, the dentist told her he did not intend to marry her. Dr. Griffin denied he ever promised to marry her. The trial will continue today.

64 Street Deaths in Month.

According to figures issued by Commissioner Woods yesterday, sixty-four persons were killed in street accidents during September. This is four more than were killed in August, but less than in September, 1916, when the fatalities reached seventy-five. In the statistics recorded by the police, automobiles and motor trucks are charged with more fatalities during the month just completed than all other vehicles combined. Of the sixty-four killed, fifty were males and fourteen were females, while seven of the victims were children under school age, twenty-four were schoolchildren, twenty-two adults under 50 years old, and eleven were over 50.

FEMINIST IDEALS IN LIGHT COMEDY

"Saturday to Monday" Marriages, as a Solution of the Woman Problem.

ALSO A WEAK-ENDING PLAY

A Finished Production and Capable Cast Headed by Norman Trevor.

SATURDAY TO MONDAY, a comedy in four acts, by William Hurlbut. Based upon a story by Jessie Leach Rector. At the Bijou Theatre.

Mrs. Ercoil.....Teresa Maxwell-Conover
Mrs. McVey.....Eleanor Hutchison
Lucy Delaney.....Constance Binney
Arthur Barnard.....Cecil Yapp
Foxcroft Grey.....Norman Trevor
Susanne.....Ruth Maycliffe
McCauley.....Charles F. McCarthy
Charles Hamilton.....Saxon Kling
Det Carrington.....Eva Le Gallienne
Mrs. Entwhistle.....Marie Haynes
Mary.....Elizabeth Brown

The witty and philosophical mother of the heroine said that she believed in the feminine advance, but not in the feminine charge. This was apropos of her daughter, who was a member of the votes-for-women cohort and through four acts charged hither and yon incessantly. She charged yon to lead a suffrage rally, accompanied by a sister, "who also had on a new gown," and then she charged hither to the hero—as well she might, for though an anti-suffragist, he was played by no less a charming person than Norman Trevor.

At the end of the first act this heroine hit upon an idea which solved not only the entire question of feminism, but also her own particular case. From Saturday to Monday they were to be married; and then from Monday to Saturday she was to be a free woman, presumably economically functioning and most certainly leading a suffrage rally as often as she had a new gown. The whole world was to live in an alternation of strong weeks with weak endings.

There are many proverbs about sauce for the goose. In "Saturday to Monday" it makes the gander squawk—that is, the proverb does. In the play itself it made the heroine more of a goose than ever. And it was the anti-suffrage hero who administered the sauce. He was a man of rare clarity of mind, with a very manly sense of humor. Quietly biding his time, he administered the sauce with effect. The heroine gave up her charging yon, and at the final curtain charged hither for good to find him stretched at his ease in an armchair beneath a shaded lamp and wearing carpet slippers embroidered with pansies. It is a modern "Taming of the Shrew," not rough and boisterously masterful, but quietly, sedately sensible. Sane intelligence conquered light feminine impulse.

Mr. Trevor was, it must be admitted, aided greatly by chance—or the foresight of his dramatist, William Hurlbut. He himself had no idea of making his lady wife jealous. But when she is leaving him at the end of their first week-end, which passes in his bachelor chambers, a lady who has spent the night (quite innocently) in the abode of the bachelor above, enters his rooms via the fire escape, in flight from the respectable and insensate janitor. The week laboring wife returns and encounters her, suspecting the very, very worst. It is an amusing and well-contrived situation, and it roused the audience to a burst of real merriment.

Nothing remains but to pay him back in kind—or to seem to do so. So the feminist charger, now a mere jealous female, invades the bungalow of an amateur dramatist who is elaborating the great scene of his third act, in which the husband surprises is wife in the rooms of her lover. An anonymous telegram, previously sent, brings Mr. Trevor upon the scene in the precise moment for him to cry "Hound!" just like the husband in the play. But being, as has been said, possessed of a commodity of common sense, he sees through the plot and makes his wife quite pathetically ridiculous.

In the last act it transpires that all this charging has been only a rather silly pose. That, indeed, had long been obvious. But it now appears that our heroine was at heart an amiable, loving, wifely character. It was she, in fact, who had fashioned the worsted slippers with pansies on them—pansies for thoughts.

A stronger heroine would have been more welcome, perhaps, to women of either persuasion and to all men. She would perhaps have made a more substantial play. There were times, indeed, when the general conduct of affairs reached the verge of amateur theatricals. But on the whole the evening was bright and enjoyable. The prevailing atmosphere was of sparkling gayety. At times, notably during the first five minutes, the dialogue rose to heights of brilliancy seldom equaled on any stage. The mounting was in excellent taste and the cast was of rare distinction.

Next to Mr. Trevor the honors of the evening went to Cecil Yapp, who played the amateur dramatist so certain as to Human Nature in his own heroine and so baffled by it when he encountered Mr. Hurlbut's. Ruth Maycliffe played this lady, and if she failed to be convincing to Mr. Yapp it was not for any lack of fidelity to the lines and situations of her part.

Eva Le Gallienne threw her rather astonishing vitality into the small part of the other lady. The bright lines of the opening scene fell to Teresa Maxwell-Converse, and she delivered them in a manner that raised drops of an evening of the utmost brilliancy. Indeed the character of this mother, though briefly outlined, was a creation of real insight and grasp of the feminist situation. There are several points of view from which it is a pity that so much of the evening was given over to the charging of her daughter.

PRAISES ROOSEVELT'S WORK

Archbishop Ireland Thanks Him as Spokesman of Americanism.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt at the Harvard Club yesterday made public a letter he received frm Archbishop Ireland when he was in Minnesota last week. The letter was as follows:

My Dear Mr. Roosevelt: I am very sorry that temyorary illness prevents me from greeting you personally and, by my presence on the stage, give my full countenance for whatever it is worth to the great work you are now doing as the spokesman of Americanism. I wish now to say what I would have said directly to you by word of mouth were it my privilege to speak to you.

You are doing a wonderful work for the country by the addresses you are now delivering from one end of the land to the other, every word ringing with true Americanism, every word vibrating with the warmest patriotism. And as an American I thank you, and pray that strength and long life be yours to fight the battles of the country for the country's sake. I know you would prefer the sword to the spoken word, but you are really now doing as much for the country, perhaps more, than if you were on a battlefield in France. Sincerely,

JOHN IRELAND,
Archbishop of St. Paul.

COAST GUARD SHIP SUNK.

All Saved from Rammed Vessel—Battleship Is Floated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Somewhere off the Atlantic Coast a coast guard vessel on naval patrol duty was rammed and sunk today, according to the Navy Department. The incident was officially announced as follows:

"A coast guard vessel on patrol duty off an Atlantic port was rammed and sunk by an unknown ship early today. The work of raising the sunken vessel will be begun at once."

It is stated that all on board were saved.

The Navy Department announced today that the United States battleship which went ashore Friday in home waters was floated this morning.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Klaw & Erlanger's next production will be "The Rainbow Girl," a musical comedy by Renold Wolf and Louis Hirsch. Billy B. Van, Sidney Greenstreet, Dorothy Follis, and Henry Clive are among those engaged for the production, and rehearsals will begin next week.

Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield (Mrs. Lean) have been added to the cast of the Century revue. They were last seen here two seasons ago in "The Blue Paradise."

Tonight is American Defense Society night at the Harris Theatre, and the profits of the performance of "Daybreak" will be given to that organization.

Mme. Yorska and Frederick Burt have been engaged for Louis K. Anspacher's comedy, "Madame Cecile," which the Selwyns are producing.

"Mary's Ankle" last night moved from the Bijou Theatre to the Thirty-ninth Street, at which house it will remain for two weeks.

Jerome Patrick and Rex McDougall have been engaged by the Frohman Company for "The Three Bears," Edward Childs Carpenter's forthcoming comedy.

Marguerite Clark in "Bab's Diary," a picturization of Mary Roberts Rinehart's "sub-deb" stories, will be the feature film at the Strand next week.

Five hundred members of the Electrical Society of America, which was in convention last week in Atlantic City, attended last night's performance at the Hippodrome.

THE SECOND LIBERTY LOAN.

Men trained in large business and engaged in it know that both duty and interest require of them extraordinary efforts to make certain that the second Liberty Loan shall be promptly and amply subscribed for. They know that the failure of the Loan would be a national calamity which would certainly and most seriously affect them in their private business and fortunes. To them it is almost superfluous to address any adjuration to respond to the Government's appeal for funds.

It is to persons of moderate means, even of very small means, that the appeal must be made. It is for them to make the Loan successful, and its success through them would furnish the best possible evidence that the nation is united and firmly resolved to win the war. More than half, 57 per cent., of the first Liberty Loan subscriptions came from persons asking for bonds of $10,000 or less. Through those subscriptions the bone and sinew, the very heart of the nation, enlisted in the war. The second Loan must repeat the success of the first, and in a greater measure, greater in the number and in the amount of the subscriptions.

To begin with, it is the best security in the world. The credit of the United States is today higher than that of any other nation on earth. One of the Liberty bonds is as good as the gold pledged for its payment. The interest is at the rate of 4 per cent., a very high rate for the world's best security. Should bonds bearing higher interest be issued at some later time these bonds will be convertible into the new issue. The bonds are not subject to the normal income tax, the income tax reaches them only when they are in the hands of large investors whose incomes are subject to the supertax. They are not taxable at all for State and local purposes, which adds materially to their value.

The new Liberty bonds are issued not merely to provide money for carrying on the war, the success of the Loan must have a very direct tendency to shorten the war. It not only enables us and our allies, through our loans to them, to press the battle against Germany with increased vigor and effectiveness, but it will be a demonstration to Germany of our unconquerable determination to fight to the end, to fight to the last man and the last dollar, faithfully keeping the pledge given by the President; and Germany, already shaken, already in dire distress, and beginning to cast about desperately for some way to lure the Allies into a speedy peace, shows that she is nearing the limit of her strength and knows it. Subscriptions to the bond issue of $3,000,000,000 in less than a month's time in the United States will bring vividly home to her the hopelessness of further fighting.

So a subscription to the Liberty Loan tends directly to shorten the time of service required of our soldiers, it brings nearer the day when, from the battlefields of France, from the training camps there or in America, they will be returned to their homes. Not all, only comparatively few, of the hundred million Americans can serve at the front. For the rest, for those who cannot shoulder a musket or command a company or brigade or division, who cannot man a gun or care for the wounded, the furnishing of funds to support the husbands, sons, and brothers in the field is a sacred duty. It is a duty to be performed in a spirit of most patriotic and generous rivalry one with another, and to be promptly performed, for the subscription period of the Loan expires on Oct. 27. The American people all together must by united and unsparing effort assure the success of the second Liberty Loan within the appointed time.

A CONVENTION OF THE PEOPLE.

Mayor MITCHEL was renominated in City Hall Park yesterday by a mass meeting of the people. In its mixture of all classes and conditions, in its earnestness, its burning enthusiasm, in its strong patriotic purpose and hope, that crowd of nominators recalled the great Union meetings in Union Square at the beginning of the civil war. This, too, was a Union meeting of Democrats, Republicans, Progressives, Socialists, workingmen, and labor leaders by the side of merchants and bankers, a demonstration of loyal New York.

Mr. HUGHES and Colonel ROOSEVELT, one with Mr. TAFT in vindicating the Republican Party from the results of the late pitiful primary, are one with loyal men and women of whatever party in calling Mr. MITCHEL to the high duty of maintaining the reputation of New York, of holding up the hands of the Administration. The work of Mr. MITCHEL and his associates speaks nobly for itself. It must be continued. But a greater thing even than good government must be continued, too. We must show the country and the world that New York City is American, pledged irrevocably to the war for democracy. Mr. MITCHEL told the whole story yesterday:

> You ask me to submit to them for re-election an administration of constructive record and established loyalty. Gentlemen, as a citizen of New York who loves his native city, who resents the reproach of Tammany, who desires honest and serviceable government, devoted to the principles of nonpartisanship in municipal affairs, but, above all, as an American citizen, hating disloyalty and treason and dedicated to the support of President WILSON and the Government of the United States in the successful prosecution of this war to a victorious issue, my duty admits of no debate. My answer to you is that I will run. I will make the fight against HEARST, HYLAN, and the Hohenzollerns, against MURPHY, COHALAN, O'LEARY, and all the Tammany brood, against the corruptionists and against the disaffected, against the seditionists and the obstructionists, against all those who would plunge New York back into the welter of police debauchery, of graft, of slovenly government, of neglect, of poor service, of brutality, and of waste that have characterized every Tammany administration this city ever had.

It is an inexpugnable platform. The honesty and the patriotism of this city, forgetting party, will support and elect the candidate of civic honesty and national patriotism.

A GOOD CITIZEN.

To do service for his fellow-men and the community was the guiding principle in the life of ISAAC N. SELIGMAN, and to that service all his activities had for years been devoted. From the time when a successful business career had won for him a competence, he gave all his time, all his effort, to useful labors, and labors directed with high intelligence, for the betterment of the conditions of public affairs and of private life in this city. Born in New York, he toiled unsparingly to make it a better city.

It was proverbial that any organization or movement for good works would solicit and secure the co-operation of Mr. SELIGMAN. He was a member of an astonishingly large number of boards and committees, and most commonly acted as the Treasurer of organizations in which he took part. The scope of his interest and activities was broad and included not only every form of effort for the general public good, as in the reform of the civil service, preservation of the forests, and the orderly amendment of tax laws, but also works of charity, or for improving the condition of the poor and promoting better citizenship among classes of our people where instruction in the nature of American institutions was expedient.

His support and personal co-operation were denied to no worthy cause, and in the service rendered and the good he had done for his fellow-men and for the City of New York Mr. SELIGMAN has an enduring monument.

GENERAL MAUDE'S WAY.

The dashing MAUDE again demonstrates that this is not everywhere and necessarily a war of trenches and of pounding. We last heard of him whirling up the Tigris at such a gait that the Turks were throwing their guns in the river in their mad rush to get away. Then the canopy of heat descended on Mesopotamia, putting an end to the fighting as effectually as the snows and rains will shortly end it in France. Now he finds the Turks moving to cut his communications, and turns their trap for him into one for themselves. There is not a particle of pounding in his method. He suddenly seizes a commanding ridge when the Turks are not expecting it. By the time they are aroused their main position is being attacked on the southeast, while the cavalry assails them from the west. The seizure of the ridge, it is to be conjectured, was made before daybreak, and by nightfall the Turks are penned in, with the Euphrates on the north, the British infantry and artillery on the east and south, and the cavalry on the west. The position held by the cavalry seems the easiest to break through, and the Turks spend the night in fruitless efforts; the cavalry always drives them back. Day comes, and the surrounding army attacks from all sides with such fury that by 9 o'clock the Turks surrender, thousands of them, including their General and his staff.

This is a victory won by strategy, dash, and determination, a victory of the old-fashioned kind of fighting, a victory won in MAUDE's own way. Followed by anxiety rather than hope, this General set out on his campaign in a region sinister with repeated disaster to the British arms; an ill-omened region. The hopes that followed his forerunners, but did not follow him, he has more than fulfilled on every occasion. He has met with no defeats, only with victories, victories won with that satisfying thoroughness which leaves nothing to be desired. His plans seem to be perfect and are always carried out to the letter. Whenever he strikes, he strikes like a thunderbolt. This accomplishment of his, the capture of an enemy army, has no precedent on the side of the Allies since the war began; and in the fact that it was won by sheer strategy, combined with the vigor of action that is always his, it has no precedent on either side. MAUDE is reminiscent of WOLFE.

THE REVENUE BILL.

The Revenue bill offered to the country is better than the House bill, and not so good as the Senate's proposals in so far as it is a reversion to the original proposals. The country was so clear in its approval of the Senate's amendments that it is embarrassed in following the Senate in its compromise. For the country is interested in the bill only as a measure of taxation, and not as a contest for the country's approval by either house, or by any individual. The Senate won such commendation by its enlargement of the taxes that the House in chagrin made the levy still heavier. The increase is less the cause of the coolness with which the conference report will be received than the manner of the enlargement, and it is puzzling to see why the Senate weakened.

The House originally proposed to tax excess profits by laying the tax cumulatively in proportion to the per cent. upon capital. That is a tax to punish profits as profits, under conditions of either peace or war, rather than to regard war profits as a suitable subject for discriminating taxation in support of war costs. The proposal of the Senate was to make the excess profits tax a war profits tax by proportioning the tax to the increase of profits during the war. There is a minimum of injustice and uncertainty in such a comparison of profits as a basis for taxation. The conference report reverts to the excess profits idea in principle and in form in a manner to make necessary a new definition of capital. The effect is to oppress business in general, and in particular all business which has no war profits, or which was subnormal in profits at the period chosen for comparison in order to reach a basis for calculating excess.

In principle the Senate idea was better in that it encouraged business as a source of income to the country by the contribution asked from it. In form the conference report, substantially like the House's measure, raises unnecessary questions regarding the basis of taxation. Only "excess" profits are to be taxed. That is to say, ordinary profits are to be exempt. Accordingly, it was necessary to fix a per cent. for ordinary profits, and that makes it necessary to find a sum on which to calculate the percentage both for exemption and for taxation. Here there is an apparent conflict. For purposes of exemption it is desirable to reduce capital by the definition of capital. For purposes of taxation it is necessary to enlarge the definition. The attempt is to do both at the same time, by enacting an arbitrary per cent. of permissible profit, and by a new definition of capital which will not be fully understood until the Treasury construes it, and also the courts.

The percentage of untaxed profits allowed establishes a basis of ordinary profits which is more liberal than that hitherto allowed by regulators of profits, and which will plague them hereafter. It is not objectionable on that account, rather the contrary. The definition of capital also opens new ground for taxlayers and taxpayers, and is objectionable because it is so gratuitous. There are familiar and approved methods of calculating capital for purposes of taxation, and it would have been better to adhere to them.

The increase in the income tax is less contentious. There is a substitution of information at the source for collection at the source. This had been objected to because it was a departure from established practice, but the objection is partly obviated by an exception of "tax-free covenant bonds of corporations." Both houses were invulnerable to the objections to the zone rate of postage on publications, and the increase stands in the conference report. The Senate dropped its proposal for a bank-check tax, but the three-cent letter stamp is retained. There are changes in details, too many to mention individually. In total the conference report is supposed to add some $300,000,000 to the Senate's increase of the House proposals, making an aggregate of $2,700,000,000. When the details are so many, and the wording so obscure, and the rates are percentages upon an unknown volume of business, it may be doubted that the experts are any too sure of their calculations.

THE POSITION OF HOLLAND.

There will be no half-way measures in the dealings of the United States Government with Holland relating to the shipment of American foodstuffs to that European neutral. Holland, from the beginning of the war in 1914 until the embargo proclamation went into effect in July of this year, had been feeding German soldiers with American food. The enormous growth of our export trade with Holland early indicated that she was importing much larger quantities of grain than her own people needed. The agreement between the Landbouw Export Bureau and the Deutsche Handelsstelle im Haag, concluded in 1916, provided for the transfer of a huge proportion of Holland's own produce and her exports to Germany. The Germans demanded 75 per cent. of all the Dutch exports of butter, vegetables, eggs, and fruit, half the exports of flax, and as much of all kinds of meats as the total of such exports to all other countries. Holland agreed to supply the amounts demanded. Dutch cattle were fattened on American fodder to supply Germany with fats.

In fact, the northern neutrals had been feeding the whole German Army on the western front. Last Sunday THE TIMES printed in full a translation of the agreement between Holland and Germany. No loyal American who reads that document will fail to approve the detention under the embargo of eighty-four Dutch ships, aggregating 350,000 tons, laden with foodstuffs, of which the greater part, if the vessels were released, would go to Germany, directly or indirectly. While the Dutch-German agreement remains in force, American foods, fodder, and dairy products will be withheld from Holland and the other European neutrals who have been feeding Germany. The Dutch Mission now in this country will be unable to justify the agreement. Foodstuffs to supply Holland's own needs may be released if an understanding can be established. It is possible that many of the ships of Holland and other northern European countries now tied up in our waters might be used to relieve vessels of the United States and its allies employed on trade routes not within the zone of war. This might be agreed to as a concession for the release of certain quantities of foodstuffs, but the further provisioning of Germany is out of the question.

POTASH NOT MADE IN GERMANY.

At last the bill permitting development of what has been called by chemists "the greatest known deposit of potash in the world" has been passed by both the Senate and the House. This deposit is in the briny waters of Searles Lake, California, and, as the lake and surrounding land had been withdrawn by the Government from the operation of mining laws, new legislation was required before it could be taken out. During the last three years and before the present session the needed bill had been passed twice in the House, but action by the Senate was prevented. In years preceding the war our supply of potash came from Germany. Imports in 1913 were 529,000 tons; last year only 10,000 were received, and there has been an extraordinary advance of price. Search for deposits in our own country has not been fruitful, if Searles Lake be excepted. Small quantities have been taken from feldspar, alunite, and seaweed, but our output in the first half of the present year was only 14,000 tons. Volcanic rocks in Wyoming contain much potash. The Geological Survey's estimate is that nearly 200,000,000 tons lie there, but it was said in the House debate that "no workable process for extracting" the mineral had been found.

In the California lake, whose area is 30,000 acres, there is a great supply, and it can be made ready for the market at reasonable cost. The Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines say that the lake's waters hold in solution 20,000,000 tons. In a letter to the House Committee on Public Lands a few days ago GEORGE OTIS SMITH, Director of the Survey, said:

> I see no way to increase this output [of 14,000 tons in six months] on anything like the scale needed, and especially from a source that may be expected to permit competition with the German potash, except by opening up Searles Lake under the best possible conditions, which I think are provided in the measure which the committee has reported.

Secretary LANE, in a letter to the same committee, showed how agricultural yield per acre was increased by potash fertilizer, and said he regarded the bill as "an important war measure." It was supported by the Council of National Defense. Two companies that have reduction plants near at hand will now acquire by lease the right to take out the potash. There is enough in the lake to supply our needs for half a century. Hereafter we shall not be dependent upon Germany's mines, and Germany will lose a large and profitable part of her export trade.

The decision of Secretary DANIELS to issue a weekly statement of the progress of naval preparations and a discreet summary of the operations of American warships in European waters is gratifying. The announcement of the Secretary's purpose indicates his confidence that such a statement and such a summary will be encouraging to the hope that we shall soon be doing our part in the war effectively. It is also a wise concession to the widespread idea that the people ought to be told all about the conduct of the war that can be divulged without giving to the enemy information that will benefit him.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Martyrdom Is Not Thus Won.

Current prophecies to the effect that no action against Senator LA FOLLETTE will be taken by his colleagues are more than likely to be justified by the event. That fear, however, of making a martyr of him is a sufficient excuse for ignoring the demand for the Senator's expulsion cannot be as readily admitted. Undoubtedly he would claim the title of martyr if expelled, or even impeached, but the risk that he would establish it is so small that, except for other reasons, in its opinion better, the Senate would not hesitate to take it.

For a martyr, by definition, is a person who suffers undeservedly some sort of loss or pain. The name does not apply to those properly punished for crimes or sins committed, and there is hesitation about inviting the familiar cry of protest from or in behalf of an avowed martyr only when it has a basis in fact or when so many people think it has such a basis that their resentment is dangerous.

Senator LA FOLLETTE, if deprived of his office, might say, and presumably would say, that he had only exercised his constitutional right of free speech as an American citizen, and that punishment for doing it was martyrdom. This plea, however, would be made absurd by the fact that everybody remembers how often and at what length he has been allowed to express his mind in regard to the war, the Administration, and the relative merits of the German and the Entente cause. There is nobody at all interested in his views who did not know them all long before he made the St. Paul speech. He has utilized and exploited his Senatorial immunity for many months without interference, and if he has not always been heard patiently, at least he has been heard.

When the Senator went to Minnesota and talked in the same way, he laid himself open to the charge of aiming at and producing direct and tangible effects in the way of inspiring resistance to the execution of the Government's plans, and he did it in open antagonism to what he knows was the decision of Congress in its representative capacity. In other words, he revolted against majority rule and became an inciter of rebellion against the principles he pretends to revere. No matter what happens to him, he will not be a martyr.

A Disquieting Sign of Weariness.

Not all readers of "The Coming," latest product of J. C. SNAITH's imagination and skill, can dismiss it on its merits as a piece of fiction, and some will not be content to praise it as illustrating the "spiritualizing" effect which the war is so often said to be having on so many minds. The protesting minority, while admitting its interest, will be inclined to see in the book an indication of something sinister and alarming—an evidence that there is taking place a weakening of British courage, self-confidence, and determination to fight the war through to a real victory.

For what passes as "spiritualization" can also be interpreted as a confession of realized incompetence to meet an existing situation through the use of the means close at hand—as an avowal of a desire to end present suffering, danger, and loss through an admission that perhaps "the enemy" is not as bad as had been supposed and that some sort of compromise can be made with him for the sake of immediate peace. That is not the way Mr. SNAITH puts his mystical thesis, but it comes to not much else, on analysis, and though the book is not pro-German, it will be read with too much pleasure by Germans, and it verges far enough toward pacifism to be discouraging to whatever extent Mr. SNAITH speaks for his countrymen.

If he were the only English literary man to be seeking consolation and hope in mysticism just now, he would be of no importance. But he is not alone. Other English writers, some with less art than he and some with more, have displayed of late the same turning from unpleasant and arduous realization to unsubstantial imaginings. None, perhaps, has gone the length, as he does, of claiming moral significance for a hero suffering from a form of insanity that sends numerous victims to every asylum, but several are traveling the same dismal and hopeless road and turning too many weak or tired minds from the business and duty of the hour to sterile discussion of "invisible Kings" or some other being of a belated mythology.

This is not "spiritualization," it is deliquescence. Otherwise expressed, it is a "protective mechanism," invented to make endurable a sense of exhaustion or inadequacy.

Soldier Mails Delayed.

American soldiers in France are complaining with what threatens soon to become bitterness that their letters and papers from home arrive—when they arrive at all—only after delays amounting often to more than a month, and that in grievously numerous cases they seem never to get further than the Atlantic seaboard. This is a grievance about the reality of which there seems to be no question, for inquiries addressed to responsible officials of the Post Office Department have elicited excuses for the badness of this part of the postal service, and not denials that it is bad.

The excuses do, indeed, have some weight. Sailings of mail steamers to England and France are necessarily irregular, and the operations of the censorship frequently result in the holding back for days or even weeks of much mail matter perfectly innocent in character. For these things, of course, due allowance will be made by all reasonable people, but after that has been done there remains not a little evidence of failure on the part of our postal officials to realize the importance of forwarding to our men abroad with all possible dispatch the letters for which they wait so impatiently—letters on which their contentment and good spirits so largely depend.

Almost as much can be said for the newspapers addressed to them. Deprivation of these is a real hardship for every intelligent American, and one especially severe for those who know no foreign language. The task confronting the Post Office Department is a difficult one, but that should be an inspiration to effort, not a discouragement of it. It is not well that our soldiers should get the impression or the suspicion that they have been forgotten, by their friends at home.

Patriotism and the Child.

The earnest and concerted efforts now being made to spread an intelligent patriotism by special lectures in the schools and elsewhere have their undoubted merit as an emergency measure; but they will fail of permanent results unless school authorities realize that the elements of patriotism, as of all civic virtues, can best be taught in childhood and youth.

There is more and more urgent need of capable and experienced teachers in the primary grades so to enforce and illustrate the beauty and glory of patriotism that it will be as natural for the child to love his native or adopted country as to love his parents. One cannot begin too early to teach the foundations. It is the child who requires the best and most sympathetic teacher. Our educational authorities seem not to appreciate this fact when the lower and most largely attended grades become the victims of well-meaning but inexperienced instructors.

Love of one's country and its institutions, reverence for its ideals and principles, must be impressed upon the child by veterans, not raw recruits. Nothing is too good to be taught a child, and no teacher is too able to be the medium for such instruction.

New Small Coins.

THE TIMES editorial on "Splitting the Nickel" is similar to my letter to Mr. Hoover of Sept. 17, in which I pointed out the fact that the prices of necessities, such as milk, were based upon the multiple of five, while retailers of luxuries, such as cigars and cigarettes, do not hesitate to split the nickel.

What we need are three new coins—not 6, 7, and 8 cent coins as THE TIMES suggests, but a 4, 3 and 2, (red, white, and blue,) with the figures 4, 3, and 2 cut out by stamping a hole in the red, white, and blue, so that they would be easily distinguishable. HERBERT N. FELL.
New York, Oct. 1, 1917.

If Scranton is urging the coinage of such cumbersome denominations as six or seven cent pieces, why not speak in favor of a two-and-a-half-cent piece? Six or seven cent pieces would probably have to be made of nickel, slightly larger than our five-cent piece, which might lead to confusion. Two-and-a-half-cent pieces (or three-cent pieces if they were more convenient,) could be made of copper, about the size of the old two-cent pieces. J. H. JOHNSTON.
New York, Oct. 1, 1917.

WHO SEE?—WHO HEAR?

Thou tellest of an ultra-violet ray,
(Hard to believe, though not my credence tires!)
No mortal has beheld it, thou dost say,
With all its color passing dawn's pure fires!
The More-than-all-we-know I can accept,
For I in child-belief am still adept!

Wizard, thou tellest how Vibration flies
Through trembling ether with a magic tune
No melodist, with ear however wise,
Can capture this side of the blind white moon!
Oh, be it true! The More-than-all-we-know
Helps me yet further in this lore to go.

Are there not eyes to see what must be seen?
Is there one hue unknown in heaven's arc—
Ethereal rose, or saffron, lilac, green? . . .
Now, what if we are only in a dark
To gardens of transcendent light where bloom
Colors to throw ours into utter gloom!

And must there not be ears to hear all sound
The Harp Eternal sheds into the air?
What sea of harmony may flow around,
Whereof our audient souls no witness bear!
It is not that the String is muted—nay,
Our chambered sense no window opes that way!

O Wizard, glorious is thy votive task,
Our bounds a little further on to set—
Be very patient with me, when I ask,
Who are They who see ultra-violet?
Who are They whose diviner sense can race—
And overtake—Sound's fleetest, finest trace?

Be yet more patient with me, when I say,
I would behold Them who your ray behold. . . .
Once there was given, at dim break of day—
Withdrawing raiment, shimmering fold-on-fold,
And a Flower fading from the window-square
That, when I fell asleep, had not been there!

BARNARD'S LINCOLN.

The Problem of Making Immortality Safe for a Democrat.

Your issue of Thursday, Sept. 27, has on its page 13 a reported interview with Andrew B. Humphrey, Secretary of the American Peace Centenary Committee, upon the much discussed statue of Lincoln, now in Cincinnati, a replica of which it is proposed to erect in London. The statue is the work of George Grey Barnard, who never saw Lincoln, and according to Mr. Humphrey it has been approved in writing by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt was 7 years old when Mr. Lincoln died and if he ever saw Mr. Lincoln he cannot have remembered him distinctly enough to pass on this portrait. The Colonel was only 2 years old at the time of the Douglas-Lincoln debates and it would seem that his statement that the statue is the man of that contest would require reinforcement.

Mr. Humphrey says:

> Mr. Lincoln had extremely long, sinewy legs and enormously large feet. They were exaggerations even of the frontier type of that day. He had such trouble in getting comfortable footwear that in December, 1864, he sent to Scranton, Penn., for a shoe specialist, and on one of Mr. Lincoln's busiest war days, Dec. 12, 1864, Mr. Lincoln stood in his stocking feet upon a piece of brown paper, upon which the specialist outlined the shape of his feet. Mr. Lincoln's feet measured 12¼ inches in length, and otherwise in proportion.

The photographs that Mr. Ruckstuhl printed in The Art World show Lincoln's feet to have been disproportionately slender, even before this expert from Scranton had been called in. It is that "otherwise in proportion" apocrypha that Americans are objecting to. Mr. Barnard has given the martyred President feet that are bulbous, thick, and eccentric, and with a skyline like a storm at sea. And why this dictum that a foot 12¼ inches long (one of his feet was only 12 inches long) on a man 76½ inches tall is enormously large and an exaggeration of frontier type? The ordinary man 68 inches tall and using a No. 8 shoe of commerce has a foot 10 inches long, a difference so small—in proportion—that it must be figured decimally.

Let us immortalize democracy of course, but let us, as far as we can shape it, make immortality safe for a democrat.

Mr. Humphrey says that Mr. Ruckstuhl calls the pose slovenly, particularly because Mr. Lincoln's hands are folded in front of his body. Not at all. The objection is to the hands being clasped over his abdomen in a gesture strongly suggestive of pain. Mr. Humphrey says this pose was one of the most natural assumed by Mr. Lincoln. Granted! What of it? The Middle West and middle class public man of the late fifties stood on the hotel porch and plied his toothpick. The goldsmiths of that day carried a line of gold tooth picks that telescoped for storage in the vest pocket—a present of one was a mark of affection. If naturalness is the aim, why not something in that way? Because when we try to immortalize a man in bronze we should take him at his best, not at his "most natural." Mr. Humphrey justifies this hot water bag attitude of the hands by saying that Mr. Lincoln was never a windmill. It is well to be safe, of course, but there must be some possible medium between that centrifugal impulse and the intense centralization of Mr. Barnard's restraining caution.

But the sledge-hammer blow in Mr. Humphrey's interview is this:

> Mr. Ruckstuhl is an artist of some repute in the United States, but he goes far out of his way both as an adopted American and as an artist to misrepresent to the public one of the most remarkable art productions of a century.

Mr. Ruckstuhl was born in Alsace in 1853 and brought here in 1855, when he was less than 2 years old; that was several years before Mr. Barnard was born. What is the warning implication here? That if a native son happens through a mistaken conception to misrepresent a great American, an older and longer resident son of an adopted citizen may not criticise the libel?

Very well, but if we are to decide this matter by the test of birth, I submit that Robert Lincoln, the son of Abraham Lincoln, is reported as deeply grieved at the production and as writing a personal protest. AUGUSTUS THOMAS.

The Hindenburg Idol.

In a footnote in Edward Clodd's interesting "Memories," he describes one of the "queer things" from the West African Coast which he saw at Miss M. H. Kingsley's in 1898.

"One was a hideous human-shaped idol with a rope of coagulated human blood round its neck. Nails had been driven into every part of its body to 'rivet' the god's attention."

How like a famous wooden statue in Berlin which has also exacted its tribute of blood and which serves as an idol to the savages of Prussia. C. G. COWAN.

Work for Them in Germany.

In my opinion it is time to give prominence to the suggestion that all Germans or so-called German-Americans, who, by their activities in favor of the Fatherland, have indicated an absence of affection for the United States and an utter lack of appreciation of its institutions, be deported at the end of the war to that "dear Germany," where they will receive, through force of conditions, an opportunity to turn in and help upbuild a ruined country. We won't need them here. MARTIN L. MOORE.

Uncle Sam's Nephews.

There is no place on earth where Uncle Sam is not well known and, excepting in those countries with which we are at war, honored and respected. Within a short period of time his nephews will also be known, and there can be no better name to know them by than Uncle Sam's nephews.

Dr. Whitney's War Work.

I am in receipt of the following letter from Dr. W. R. Whitney, which explains itself.

ELLWOOD HENDRICK.
New York, Oct. 1, 1917.

Dear Mr. Hendrick: I have just read your reference to me in THE TIMES. There is a serious error in it which should be corrected. My salary is being continued by the General Electric Company without reduction. I have been given to understand very plainly that I may spend what I believe ought to be spent by us in experimental work connected with Government needs and the patriotism is composite in this case and not individual. I know other large concerns which are practically giving their research men carte blanche to help as much as possible, and I think this also should be known. Certainly I do not want to take the credit which rightfully belongs to the company as an institution instead of to myself in particular. Let's reserve the fame for those who really suffer and fight—and deserve it. Yours sincerely,

WHITNEY.

THE POETS' AMBULANCE.

Americans Will Buy 100 Cars for Cadorna's Army Instead of 50.

As I find that some persons have the impression that the work of the American Poets' Committee, now providing American ambulances for General Cadorna's army, was to cease on Oct. 1, I beg of your space to state that this is not the case. Indeed, having ascertained that instead of fifty cars there are one hundred obtainable in Milan, we have cabled for options on them all and do not expect to relinquish our work until every one of them has been secured. Twenty-eight of these cars have already been bought by cable upon the receipt by us of a unit of $2,000, the cost of each car, and twelve more will be bought from funds to be received this week, or at the conclusion of certain special subscriptions now under way. General Guglielmotti, the Italian Military Attaché at Washington, has accepted with appreciation the committee's formal offer of the cars to his country, and has assured us that they will be sent to the front as rapidly as our agent can deliver them. The American public has therefore an opportunity to take a prompt and not unimportant part in General Cadorna's new drive which it is reported is impending.

As by inadvertence THE TIMES of Sunday did not print our report of last week, I beg to say that our actual contributions are now $67,000, while subscriptions under way will bring the total to more than $80,000. During the last week, no doubt largely influenced by the editorial sympathy expressed in THE TIMES of Monday, we received nearly $27,000, including checks of $2,000 each from the following ten persons, besides one from the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, Paul G. McIntire, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Pratt, R. H. Thompson, Mrs. Richard T. Auchmuty, James Douglas, and Mrs. William P. Hamilton and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, ("in memory of J. Pierpont Morgan,") all of these of New York; Mrs. Benjamin Miller and Walter S. Cramp of Philadelphia; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Lancashire, Manchester, Mass., (of the Dante League of America,) and the City of Memphis, Tenn., where, by the way, there is talk of contributing another car. I have today received the same amount from Miss Addison Mitchell of New York. One thousand dollars has come from Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould and also from Miss Elizabeth Curtis. It is due to lack of space in THE TIMES, which has received our detailed lists each week, and not to our neglect, that more specific acknowledgments are not made of the contributions from all over the country, accompanied in nearly every case by some expression of love and admiration of Italy. These detailed lists may be seen at this office.

If the reader of these lines were today in Milan and knew of the great need of ambulances on the Isonzo front, and then should hear that sixty more cars were obtainable, would he not cable to America, begging his friends to raise money to buy every one of them and put them to work beneficently at once? Is the emergency any the less that we are not there but here? We are all praising Cadorna's army, which is making records to rival the Iliad. The Poets' Committee offers a prompt and practical way to help to new and possibly decisive victories. We are not engaged in general relief, but only in this particular piece of special work.

I have not the slightest compunction in asking every one who can do so to send me at once a check for $2,000 "to the order of George A. Plimpton, Treasurer," so that his or her car may bear the donor's name, not in vanity, but in pride, as a "Chariot of Mercy" and a substantial reinforcement of Italian valor.

More Help for Italy.

I congratulate you upon the very instructive article entitled "Italy's Plan to End the War," appearing in your Sunday's Magazine Section. Such an article has, undoubtedly, made every true lover of humanity jubilant. However, will we send the indispensable material to crush the craven cowards?

If unprejudiced military experts are now being convinced of Italy's worth in this world war, it will be but a matter of time, of course, before our already generous offerings will be increased—in order to make the "world safe for democracy."

Our President has manfully stated that the forces of the barbarous quartet—Germany, Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria—must be completely vanquished before we shall even condescend to listen to the demand for peace. He has heeded the good counsel of the popular idol, General Joffre, but will he respond to the request of General Cadorna, who has paved the way to a complete victory?

It is true General Joffre stemmed the tide of autocratic aggression at the Battle of the Marne, but General Cadorna has led the army of liberty lovers into the haunts of the Hun.

Shouldn't we do just a bit more for Italy and thus bring about a quicker realization of a "peace with victory"?

PAUL F. FRABBITO.
New York, Sept. 26, 1917.

Dr. Kaempf's Speech.

Dr. Kaempf, President of the Reichstag, is reported as stating:

"We read in President Wilson's note to the Pope the word 'humanity.' Are we to believe the words of a man who had the power to preserve hundreds and thousands of lives by preventing the export of munitions and war materials from America to the Entente?"

Has Dr. Kaempf no sense of humor? It is a little late for Germany to begin a discussion as to the best way of saving lives. But if Dr. Kaempf goes into this question, where does his argument leave his "all highest master" the Kaiser? Paraphrased, "Are we [Germans] to believe the words of a man who had the power to preserve hundreds and thousands, [yes, millions,] of lives by not beginning the war?"

A little sense of humor might save some Germans from stating things that imply that all but Germans are fools. But, perhaps, Dr. Kaempf intended his words only for the Germans, that wonderful people, so full of intelligence and kultur, who believe that England started the war, or at other times believe Russia did, and at still other times that France did, and now seem to be coming to the belief that Belgium did. Perhaps, however, Dr. Kaempf intended his words for the pacifists in the United States, as his words seem more or less suited to the intelligence of the pacifists. H. H.

On behalf of the members of the Mounted Military Police, Twenty-seventh Division, I wish to appeal to the readers of your paper to assist us in making our stay in camp more enjoyable. One of the members of our organization has very kindly donated a Victrola to us, and consequently we find ourselves in need of records. We would appreciate it beyond measure if any of your readers would send records that may have outlived their usefulness and popularity in New York. Kindly remember to pack them very carefully and don't forget the address.

SENATORS REJECT CAUCUS ON PERKINS

WHITMAN DEFERS MESSAGE

Senate Notifies Him It Is Ready to Act, but Renewal of Nomination Is Withheld.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Oct. 2.—A conference of Republican Senators, which lasted until after midnight, refused to make confirmation of George W. Perkins as head of the new State Food Control Commission, a Republican caucus measure, by a vote of 15 to 16.

Prior to this decision a vote was taken in the conference to determine the sentiment for and against Mr. Perkins among the Republican Senators. This vote showed 17 for Perkins and 16 against him. When the name of Mr. Perkins was last up for confirmation he received 17 Republican votes. With four Democratic Senators said to be committed to his confirmation, the indications after the conference came to a close, were that Mr. Perkins would lack three votes of the number necessary to confirm him.

Only one Republican Senator who voted to reject the nomination of Mr. Perkins when the question came before the Senate last month voted to make it a caucus matter at the present conference. This was Senator William H. Hill of Broome, father of the City Local Option bill. Senator Hill has been a consistent supporter of Governor Whitman, and was induced to vote against Mr. Perkins before only on account of hostile sentiment against the Harvester Company magnate among his rural constituents. With his confirmation decreed by a caucus, Senator Hill would have a good excuse to present to the people at home.

There are thirty-four Republican Senators. Eighteen votes would be required to apply caucus rules, which would bind the minority to any action determined upon. Before the conference was called the Governor's friends had succeeded in obtaining only fifteen signatures to a petition calling a caucus on the nomination of Mr. Perkins. In all it was said there would be seventeen Republican votes for his confirmation on the floor of the Senate.

When the name of Mr. Perkins came before the Senate for confirmation last month he received that number of Republican votes and one Democratic vote, that of Senator John V. Sheridan of the Bronx. Now it is reported that three other Democrats, Senator Edward J. Dowling, Salvatore A. Cotillo, and James J. Walker, all of New York City, will vote for the confirmation of Mr. Perkins. This should make the vote very close.

Senate in Night Session.

The Senate, prior to the conference, was in night session and sent a committee to call on Governor Whitman and inform him that it was ready to receive any communication he had to send. But no message came.

While Governor Whitman earlier in the day had made it plain that he intended to urge the confirmation of Mr. Perkins and his two other nominees for places on the Commission, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University, and Charles A. Wieting, ex-State Commissioner of Agriculture, friends of the Governor, intimated that in the event of adverse action in the Republican conference Governor Whitman might find it expedient to save Mr. Perkins the humiliation of a new defeat in open Senate.

Three Republican Senators from Brooklyn, Alvah W. Burlingame, Jr., Charles C. Lockwood, and Alfred J. Gilchrist, who voted for the confirmation of Mr. Perkins last month, called on Governor Whitman early in the evening and told him that before they signed the caucus petition they must know definitely whether Mr. Perkins would support Mayor Mitchel or William M. Bennett, the Republican nominee, for Mayor in the municipal campaign. Governor Whitman immediately communicated with Mr. Perkins at his town home in New York over the long-distance 'phone.

"Mr. Perkins authorized me to tell the Brooklyn Senators," said Governor Whitman later, "that if confirmed he would consider himself definitely out of politics and would take no part whatsoever in the Mayoralty campaign. I so told them."

All three Senators, after their talk with the Governor, signed the petition for the caucus.

Democrats Begin to Waver.

There were indications that the Democrats, who, with the exception of Senator Sheridan, presented a solid front when the nomination of Mr. Perkins was laid before the Senate, were beginning to weaken in their opposition. Tammany members of the upper house with whom THE TIMES correspondent talked made no attempt to conceal their fear that if the new food control law should continue to remain a dead letter as a result of the combination between Tammany and Republican Old Guard members of the Senate to defeat Mr. Perkins, it would provide Mayor Mitchel with a powerful issue, of which he surely would take advantage in his campaign against Judge Hylan, the Tammany standard bearer.

Joseph M. Callahan, minority leader of the Assembly, sent a letter to Governor Whitman, urging him to recommend legislation vesting in the new Food Control Commission powers to fix a maximum price on milk to consumers.

Over the telephone last night Mr. Perkins was told of a statement made at Albany by the Republican Senators from Brooklyn that they would insist upon knowing whether he would support Mr. Bennett or Mayor Mitchel in the Mayoralty campaign, and that they would not vote for him if he favored Mayor Mitchel. In reply Mr. Perkins dictated the following:

"I have heard today that some Senators have expressed the fear that if I became Chairman of the Market Commission I would use the office to further Mr. Mitchel's candidacy. Any such idea is absurd. The office should be kept absolutely out of politics in every respect. You cannot put my views on this subject too strongly, regardless of who is Chairman of the commission."

In these lively songs and rhymes the rookies give voice to their surface humor and their deeper sentiment of patriotism and determination. They make fun of their fatigues, of their privations, of their home sickness, of the drills in which they "simulate" non-existent horses and guns. Some of the rhymes are parodies of well-known songs and many of them are already being sung at Plattsburg and elsewhere.

STATE MERCHANTS JOIN IN FOOD SAVING

Agree to Push the Conservation Work Started Here by Michael Friedsam.

50 TOWNS REPRESENTED

Each Retailer Will Devote Part of His Advertising Space to Food Propaganda.

Retail merchants in fifty towns in New York State promised the National Food Administration that they would call together all the merchants in their respective localities and urge the necessity for preaching the gospel of food conservation. This promise was made in a resolution adopted yesterday at a meeting in the Waldorf-Astoria of the merchants of the State called by Michael Friedsam, President of B. Altman & Co., and the State Merchant Representative in the Food Administration.

Mr. Friedsam, who had already explained the plan of campaign to the retailers of this city, said that the response to his call by out-of-town merchants gave him assurance that they would enter into the work with an unselfish spirit and carry it on for the general good of the country and for the winning of the war.

"Our armaments may be ever so large and our men ever so brave, but all this will be without avail unless we supply them and the Allies who are fighting with us the food that will give them the strength to go courageously 'over the top,'" he said. "Conservation is a matter for the individual, and none can shirk the responsibility. It is a matter of honor for the people of the United States as well as one for humanity. Mr. Hoover in his appeal tells us that by the elimination of waste we serve ourselves economically and morally. It is our duty as merchants of New York State, and as men who therefore come into direct and intimate contact with the people of our State, to impress upon the public the absolute necessity for a wise and careful conservation of food."

In response to this appeal by Mr. Friedsam, John F. Norman of the firm of H. S. Barney offered a resolution in which this was embodied:

"Be it resolved that each merchant present representing his city or town assume it as his duty to call the merchants of his locality together and outline to them the definite plans that have been formulated and adopted at this meeting."

No voice was raised against this resolution, and it was followed by another in which the merchants pledged themselves to undertake a conservation advertising campaign throughout the State, each using part of his advertising space to impress the public with the need of food saving. By another resolution it was agreed to use window displays for the same purpose. These campaigns will be carried out during the present month, and will be followed by other educational work, as Mr. Friedsam may deem advisable.

"It is obvious," Gage E. Tarbell said, "that before we can accomplish anything of importance in the world we must be fed, and the first thing in importance is to see that those who are called upon to do the work of fighting are fed. Our people are beginning to understand that this is quite as much our war as anybody's war. We have a good object lesson in the way President Wilson is doing things. We sometimes wonder whether things are going as they should. Sometimes we are likely to criticise, but we should not. When it was necessary to handle this great food question, and to choose an administrator, notwithstanding the criticism that came from politicians of various sorts and from various sections of the country, Mr. Wilson chose the one man who knows more about the subject than any other man in the country, he selected Mr. Hoover. When it became necessary to get some one to lead the great merchants of New York State, Mr. Wilson very naturally selected the greatest merchant in this great city, Mr. Friedsam."

The campaign that is to be carried on throughout the country between Oct. 21 and 27 to enlist every housewife in the country as an active agent of the National Food Administration was explained by Arthur Williams, who is directing the campaign in the New York district. He commented upon the wonderful progress that the country had made in preparation for war in the short period since it has entered the conflict. Food conservation, he said, was just as important as national conscription.

NORA BAYES AT THE PALACE.

One of Her New Songs Depicts the Woes of Late Czar Nicholas.

Another Nora Bayes homecoming took place at the Palace Theatre yesterday afternoon, and again Miss Bayes cast her mystic spell over the audience. Among her new songs is a pathetic ballad depicting the woes of the late Czar Nicholas, and another number appraising the effect upon democracy if Paul Revere had chanced to be of the opposite sex. These, with a variety of her established numbers and Irving Fisher to help sing them, kept the pot boiling for forty minutes or more.

George White, who is at the Palace almost as often as Miss Bayes, remains for a second week with Emma Haig, and the remainder of the bill includes Aaron Hoffman's playlet "The Question," and George Whiting and Sadie Burt.

KATMAI EXPEDITION BACK.

Leader Believes Volcano Will Be Quiescent for Many Years.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 1.—The National Geographic Society's expedition to Mount Katmai, which sailed for the north from Seattle May 28, returned here last night. The head of the expedition, Dr. Robert F. Griggs of the Ohio State University, said today that Mount Katmai, with its enormous number of vents, probably would not be again active in thousands of years. Katmai's eruption in June, 1912, was one of the greatest ever recorded.

The crater is the largest in the world, nine miles in circumference and 3,600 feet deep. The Island of Kodiak, which was rendered a desert by volcanic ash from Katmai, is now green, all the volcanic ash having been covered.

MISS MEYER BRIDE OF ITALIAN DIPLOMAT

Daughter of Ex-Secretary of the Navy Marries Giuseppe Brambilla at Country Home.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, Mass., Oct. 1.—The wedding of Miss Julia Appleton Meyer, daughter of the former Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, and Giuseppe Brambilla, Counselor of the Italian Embassy in Washington, was celebrated today at noon at Rock Maple Farm, the country home of the bride's parents.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. John J. McGarry of St. Cecelia's Roman Catholic Church, Boston, in the Italian room.

The bride was gowned in white chiffon and lace with a full Court train of satin, and her bridal veil of tulle was edged with rare old lace. Her father gave her in marriage.

Mrs. C. Raymond P. Rodgers, a sister of the bride, wife of Lieutenant Rodgers, U. S. N., was matron of honor. The bridesmaids included the Misses Camilla Lippincott of Washington and Julia Appleton, a cousin of the bride.

Baron Pietro Arone di Valentino, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, acted as best man in the absence of Count Macchi di Cellere, the Italian Ambassador, who had been expected to serve. The ushers were Signor Andrea G. Celesia di Vegliasco and Basil Miles, both of Washington.

Society from the North Shore, Boston, and Washington attended the wedding.

The bride first met Mr. Brambilla in Rome when her father was Ambassador to Italy.

QUESTION MINING ENGINEER.

E. S. Woodford Asked About Maps of Costa Rica He Had.

Among the first cabin passengers arriving yesterday at an Atlantic port from Costa Rica was Ethelbert G. Woodford, an American mining engineer, who was questioned by agents of the United States Department of Justice because of several topographical maps of the coast line and the hinterland of Costa Rica, which were found in his baggage. The officials said that Mr. Woodford was merely questioned, and his baggage would be held on the pier.

Mr. Woodford was born in New York State and was one of the early pioneers in the Kimberley diamond mines and the Transvaal gold fields. He was State Mining Engineer to the Transvaal Republic under President Krueger with whom he quarreled.

He also had a concession from the former Portuguese Government for wealthy mining lands in its East African colonies out of which he would have cleared over a million dollars, but lost it.

Ethelbert G., as he is known by mining men, is 6 feet 6 inches tall, 54 inches around the chest, weighs about 300 pounds, is clean-shaven, has a square jaw, and iron-gray hair. When he asked a miner in camp to pass the salt or move out of the way, his requests were always obeyed without comment.

J. N. Popham, another American mining engineer who arrived on the same ship, said that Costa Rica was practically dominated by German influence until the Gonzalez Government was overthrown by Frederico Tinoco, now President, who found the situation so serious that he had to organize a secret police and several arrests were made.

DUBLIN HONORS ASHE.

Sinn Feiner's Funeral Procession Longer Even Than Parnell's.

DUBLIN, Oct. 1.—The funeral procession which followed the body of Thomas Ashe, the Sinn Fein leader who died Thursday, from the City Hall to Glasnevin Cemetery yesterday was extremely large, exceeding in number even that of the Parnell funeral in 1891. The procession was well organized, and perfect order was kept.

The principal contingents were Irish Volunteers, the Gaelic Athletic Association, the Gaelic League, the Liberty Hall Citizen Army, and the Dublin trade unions. There were also many representatives from women's clubs. More than a dozen bands played Irish airs. The three-mile route was lined with spectators, and the bells of the Catholic churches were tolled as the procession moved along. The Irish Volunteers wore their uniforms and carried hurley sticks, although these were offenses against recent military regulations. There was also a firing party at the graveside.

The Government authorities did not interfere with the demonstration, which was most impressive. The embittered feeling over the death of Ashe was much allayed by a change in the policy of the treatment of prisoners under the Defense of the Realm Act. The prisoners are now allowed to meet one another and are separated from the ordinary criminals. They are also allowed to receive food from the outside. Their hunger strike was abandoned when the Lord Mayor carried them this decision of the Government.

SEEKS A WILL IN WAR ZONE.

Lawyer Goes to Belgium to Ask Germans for Copy of Document.

Gerald Van Castell, a lawyer, will leave tomorrow for Antwerp, Belgium, to try to get the permission of the German officers there to photograph the will on file of Johannes Dionysius Eugenius De Ridder, owner of a brewery there, who died at The Hague a year ago and left an estate of $650,000, part of which is in this country and part in Belgium and Holland. The copy of the will is needed in defending a contest of a similar will made on March 16, 1916, at The Hague, by which the decedent gave one-quarter of his estate to his brother, Stanislaus De Ridder, of Oscawana, N. Y., and the remainder to Mrs. Elise Françoise Huberta Walter of Cedarhurst, L. I., to whom he was engaged to be married.

The brother has filed a contest of the will, and the copy of the earlier document on file in Antwerp, which is practically identical with the later will, will be used, if Mr. Van Castell is permitted to photograph it, in support of a contention that the decedent's intention as to the disposition of his property remained the same. Mr. Van Castell said yesterday he didn't know whether he would be permitted to go to Antwerp and whether the German Governor General of Belgium would authorize him to photograph the will if he gets there.

Wills Gifts to Columbia and N. Y. U.

The will of Miss Kate Collins Brown, formerly of New Orleans, who died at the Hotel Breslin on Aug. 19 last, disposes of an estate of more than $700,000 of which she left nearly $500,000 in direct bequests and gave the residue to Columbia and New York Universities and the Presbyterian Hospital. The share of the educational institutions is to establish scholarships paying $300 a year to needy students. The Free Church of the Annunciation at New Orleans got $50,000. Miss Brown gave $100,000 to her friend and attorney, John E. Miller, of 45 Nassau Street, and $50,000 to Gerardus L. Miller of Englewood. She left $10,000 to Professor Henry V. Arny of the New York College of Pharmacy and $25,000 each to Marguerite Collins Clancy, Birmingham, Ala.; Clarence P. Collins, Gulfport, Miss.; Elizabeth C. Willy, Tuxpam, Mexico; Edward J. Bobet, New Orleans; Mary V. Pickert, 144 East Seventeenth Street, New York, and Lena Litts, New Orleans.

SWANN SENDS FOR BIG MILK DEALERS

Starts Inquiry to Find Out if Donnelly Anti-Trust Law Has Been Violated.

HOPES TO HELP CONSUMERS

Dairymen Say Prices Will Be Lowered if They Succeed in Starting Co-operative Stations.

While milk dealers and dairymen are passing back and forth the blame for raising the price of milk, District Attorney Swann yesterday assigned Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith to conduct an investigation to determine whether the producers and members of the New York State Dairymen's League were guilty of violation of the Donnelly Anti-Trust act when they raised the price of milk to the dealers at their convention in Syracuse last month. Facts obtained in the inquiry will be put before the Grand Jury. Action may be taken also by Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, who said his office had been considering the milk situation for some weeks. He intimated, however, that his action would be deferred until the State Food Commission was organized.

Mr. Swann has asked Loton Horton, President of the Sheffield Farms-Slawson-Decker Company, one of the largest distributing concerns, to come to the District Attorney's office today for a conference with Mr. Smith. Mr. Swann said he was also anxious to get the testimony of small dealers, who, he said, were not apt to be connected with any so-called Milk Trust.

"We have got to take into consideration all of the elements involved," the District Attorney said. "My desire is to save the ultimate consumer from the oppressive taxation of this necessity of life. We intend to question both large and small dealers, and as many producers as we can reach. One thing is certain, and that is, the farmer gets 50 per cent. of the ultimate cost, and every time the producer raises his price, the distributer puts his up. We want to know whether this is by prearrangement.

"We have obtained a recent circular letter sent out by the Dairymen's League in which they urge their members to stand fast. This letter was sent out from the headquarters of the league at 110 West Fortieth Street and was signed by R. D. Cooper, Chairman of the Executive Committee. I have also learned that the Executive Committee of the Dairymen's League held a meeting in Syracuse on Sept. 20, at which the members fixed the price that commencing Oct. 1 the dealer should charge the distributer 1½c. more a quart."

The situation is complicated by the fact that the dealers have shut up nearly fifty of their receiving stations, alleging that it is necessary because of the decrease in demand and because there is a surplus of milk. Some of the dairymen see in this an attempt to reduce the supply of milk and throw it back upon the producers and so break the farmers' organization. The dealers contend that with milk so high they can only handle enough to meet immediate demands and, under present prices, there is no profit in using any surplus in the manufacture of by-products.

John J. Dillon, State Commissioner of Foods and Markets, says that the closing of the plants is an attempt to punish the farmers for asking more money for their product. Mr. Dillon said yesterday that even though the farmers were asking more for their milk there was no excuse for the dealers to put up prices.

"If the dealers are allowed to shut down their stations and refuse to take the milk offered by the farmers and limit the supply to the consumer, then they have the game in their own hands," said Mr. Dillon. "To shut down these plants is to deprive the farmers of a market for their milk, and, if left without the protection of the Dairymen's League, they might be forced to throw their milk on the market at prices dictated by the dealers.

"There is no reason for the present high price of milk. The last statement from one of the large dealers, that I had a year ago, gave the cost of pasteurizing as 56 cents for a forty-quart can. This is ridiculous. What it really costs is far less than that. We have a plant at Montgomery, and our actual cost for pasteurizing a can of forty quarts of milk is 7 cents. Allowing for deterioration, I would place the cost at 10 cents, not 56 cents."

The Dairymen's League believes the way to solve the problem of the closed milk stations is to establish co-operative stations of their own. R. D. Cooper, President of the league, said that he was not worrying over the present situation. He added that the investigators would have the co-operation of the league and all the information they wanted.

"Those who would hold inquiries into milk conditions in this State," he said, "are not alone in this matter. The Dairymen's League is trying to solve the milk problem. The most practical solution, it seems to me, is for the farmers to establish co-operative stations, and not depend upon the dealers' creameries. The league started out with one creamery, which is at Little Falls. From April 1, 1915, up to January of this year we cleared $7,000. We have the equipment for making cheese and butter and for pasteurizing milk. I would advise farmers in the league to establish stations in their sections, or to buy or rent the stations abandoned by the dealers."

SWANN SAYS REYNOLDS MADE 20,000% PROFIT

Alleges Ex-Senator Put $2,000 in Marginal Railway Deal and Got $400,000.

District Attorney Swann made the following statement yesterday by way of an indirect reply to the charge that he was degrading his office by attempting to assail Mayor Mitchel through ex-Senator Reynolds:

"The profit of $400,000 on an investment of $2,000 was made by ex-Senator Reynolds in the sale of land for the South Brooklyn Marginal Railroad to the city while his close friend Mayor Mitchel was the President of the Board of Estimate," Mr. Swann said. "Mr. Mitchel did not oppose this deal. He did not protest against it. How far he furthered it we cannot say at present. Our investigation of this transaction has barely begun.

"The plan for acquiring property for the South Brooklyn Marginal Railroad had been entirely completed before ex-Senator Reynolds entered upon this transaction. The most peculiar part about it is that the South Brooklyn Marginal Railroad deal was evidently opened up just in order to enable ex-Senator Reynolds to sell this piece of property to the city at a profit to himself of nearly half a million on a shoestring investment. We are very much interested in the way ex-Senator Reynolds bobs up again and again in these land deals, always to his own great benefit and to the injury of the city. I want to find out how he was able to perpetrate transactions of this kind with the city again and again, and I will not be deterred from the prosecution of this search by political attacks, no matter where they come from.

"It appears from our evidence, which is about to go before the Grand Jury, that ex-Senator Reynolds originally acquired control of some 800,000 square feet of property by the payment of $100 to obtain an option. Shortly after he acquired the option, the city's plans were altered to make his property a necessary part of the South Brooklyn Marginal Railway plan. Then he paid down $2,000 in cash as part of the purchase price, carrying a mortgage for the rest of the price. Then he sold the property to the city at a profit to himself of $400,000.

"I have not seen the statement issued from Fusion Headquarters and signed by the Mayor and Controller in regard to the Neponsit land deal. It is admittedly a political document, and my investigations into the land deals are in no way connected with politics. Any communication addressed to me by them will be promptly answered.

"The operations of the land ring in connection with the South Brooklyn Marginal Railroad matter and Dreamland will be started before the Grand Jury Wednesday. They show more than one remarkable instance of high financing in real estate deals."

Ex-Senator Reynolds could not be reached last night.

MAYOR LAUDS MR. SELIGMAN

Says That in Trying Problems His Patriotism Was Inspiring.

Mayor Mitchel yesterday sent a letter to Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman expressing the sympathy of the city in the loss of Isaac Newton Seligman of the banking house of J. & W. Seligman & Co., who died in Mount Sinai Hospital on Sunday afternoon from injuries sustained in a fall from his horse near his home at Irvington, N. Y. The Mayor's letter follows:

Mrs. Isaac N. Seligman, Willowbrook, Irvington-on-Hudson.

My Dear Mrs. Seligman: The news of your loss came to me last night as a very great shock. Will you let me express to you on behalf of the people of the City of New York their most earnest and heartfelt sympathy? We lose through the death of Mr. Seligman a man who stood in the front ranks as a patriot, a philanthropist, and a public-spirited New Yorker with a splendid record of unselfish service.

Will you also let me tell you how great a personal loss his death is to me? Your husband was my very good friend. It was my habit to call upon him in many emergencies for counsel and help. His response was always ready and effective. In the many trying problems which I have faced, especially during our national crisis, I always found Mr. Seligman's patriotism inspiring.

With assurances of high regard and most earnest sympathy, I am, very sincerely yours, JOHN PURROY MITCHEL.

Many other messages of condolence were received by Mrs. Seligman and other members of the family at their home at Irvington. Lieutenant Joseph Seligman, who received the news of the death of his father in a telegram sent to him at the New York National Guard camp at Spartanburg, S. C., reached home yesterday. It was announced that the funeral services this morning would be private, and that burial would be in Salem Fields Cemetery, Cypress Hills, L. I.

SILK INDUSTRY HERE BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Largest Imports of Raw Material in Country's History Indicate $400,000,000 Output.

The silk manufacturing industry of the United States shows no signs of abatement by reason of war conditions. A compilation by the National City Bank, made public yesterday, showed that the quantity of raw silk imported in the fiscal year, 1917, was larger than ever before, and at a higher price than has been known in past years. This indicates that the outturn of the silk factories of the United States, in the current year, will far exceed that of any earlier year.

The total value of raw silk imported in the fiscal year 1917, was $156,000,000, against $119,000,000 in the former high record year 1916. The quantity imported aggregated 33,869,000 pounds in 1917 and 33,071,000 pounds in 1916.

The statement emphasized that the United States was now the greatest silk manufacturing country of the world. The value of the outturn of the silk manufacturing establishments has grown from $41,000,000 in 1879 to $87,000,000 in 1889, $107,000,000 in 1899, $197,000,000 in 1909, and $254,000,000 in 1914, the latest date for which census figures are available. In that year, the total value of raw silk imported was $100,000,000, while in 1917 the total of raw silk brought into this country aggregated $156,000,000. Should this increase in cost of raw material be reflected in the output of the mills the current year, the total value of silk manufactures of the United States in 1917, would be nearly $400,000,000, or practically four times as large as in the year 1900.

The average import price of raw silk brought into the United States in the last fiscal year was the highest on record, averaging $4.61 a pound, against $3.61 in 1916 and $3.00 in 1915, the highest previous annual average of the last quarter of a century having been $4.20 in 1907.

Most of this great increase in raw silk imported comes from Japan, from which the imports of 1917 were 26,342,000 pounds out of a total of 33,869,000 pounds, while the total of 1916 from Japan was 22,915,000 against 18,217,000 pounds in 1915.

The total value of silk manufactures of all kinds brought into the country in 1917 was $40,323,000, against $31,912,000 in 1916 and $25,043,000 in 1915. The large increase in production of silk is resulting in a very considerable exportation of silk manufactures, which showed a total for the fiscal year 1917 of $7,203,000, against $5,205,000 in 1916 and $2,745,000 in 1915.

YANKS TAKE LAST FROM WHITE SOX

GILHOOLEY PROVES FOXY

Suddenly Halts in Dash for Home, Leans Over and Touches Plate, Outwitting Chicago's Catcher.

The Chicago White Sox, American League flag winners of 1917, finished the season at the Polo Grounds yesterday by meekly submitting to a 4-to-2 defeat at the hands of the exploded Yankees. The Sox won 100 games, and yesterday's result made their defeats 54, giving them an average of .649. It is the first time the bunting in either league has been won by a Western club in seven years.

In this final series with the Yanks the Sox have shown some pretty poor baseball, but that was probably because they had no incentive to win. When Rowland's bunch clashes with the Giants at Chicago on Saturday it will be a different team. Those who are betting on the Sox hope that the club's appearance here has been only a bit of camouflage to spoof the Giants' spies.

The Sox heard that John J. McGraw and Charley Herzog were hiding somewhere in the stands, so they were careful not to uncover too much. There was one old party in the box close up to the White Sox bench. He had long white whiskers and a long linen duster. Probably McGraw in disguise. If Charley Herzog was there, he also had a makeup.

The White Sox lost the game in the seventh inning through a clever bit of playing by Frank Gilhooley, the Yankees' right fielder. In this session Gilhooley scored a run by the narrow margin of a fingertip, breaking up the 2-to-2 tie. If the runner had tried to score in any other way but by his fingertip he would have been a sure out. With two gone in that seventh inning Gilhooley got a three-bagger when Joe Jackson raced in and tried to pluck his single from the grass. Catching for the Sox at this time was Lynn, whose first name is Byrd, and he is all of that.

Gilhooley Thinks Fast.

Lynn let the ball flirt by him, and Gilhooley raced in from third. Lynn fell over in recovering the ball, giving quite an amusing performance of tumble-Tom. He knew well he couldn't get to his feet and back to the plate in time to get the runner, so he tried to creep back. Both Lynn and Gilhooley arrived at the plate at the same time, approaching from opposite directions. Smart little Gilhooley saw Lynn's hand, clutching the ball, on the plate waiting for him as he was about to slide in.

Gilhooley did some quick thinking, changed his mind about sliding in, and just before he reached the plate he stopped short, stooped over, and touched the plate with his index finger—just like that. He was very careful, however, to touch the plate at a point some distance from where Lynn was holding the ball. Gilhooley was safe, and Lynn entered an appeal to Umpire Dineen, which was thrown out of court.

Manager Rowland gave his southpaw Claude Williams a warm-up for five innings, during which time the Yanks got five hits and two runs. Then he sent in Urban Faber, the right-hander who is expected by Chicago fans to accomplish much in the coming series. Faber was touched up for three hits and two runs in three innings. Shocker pitched for the Yanks, and held the American League champions to seven hits.

Eddie Collins was the only one of the Sox players who showed the Giants' scouts anything about the game. In the third inning he nipped a grounder over near first and scooped it to Jourdan in time for a put-out. Eddie also ran wild on the bases and stole three sacks. He got a single in the ninth inning with one out, and was forced by Jackson. John Collins, who earlier in the game had made a home run, smashed a terrific liner to deep left. It looked as if the Sox were going to break up the game right there, but Elmer Miller chased after the ball and made a pretty grab.

White Sox Start Early.

The White Sox helped themselves to a run in the first chapter. Leibold walked and McMullin was thrown out at first by Gedeon. Little Nemo tried to do a Ty Cobb and go to third on the out, but he died in the attempt. Eddie Collins got a single to third, and proceeded to steal second and third, passed balls by Walters aiding his journey. Jackson singled to left, counting E. Collins. Jackson died stealing.

The Yanks tied it up in their half of the same inning. With one gone, Peckinpaugh slammed a triple to right, and tallied on Pipp's single to centre. Another Yank run was coined in the second. Miller got an infield tap to first, went to second on Gedeon's out, and, after Walters fanned, Shocker pushed Miller home with a single.

John Collins tied it for Chicago in the fifth by sending a home run into the left-field bleachers. The Yankees came within half an inch of a score in the sixth. With one gone, Pipp was hit by one of Faber's twisters, and was forced by Baker. Baker stole second and Miller walked. Gedeon spanked a single to centre, and Baker started on a through trip to the plate. Leibold made a gorgeous peg to the plate, and Baker was out.

New York went out in front in the seventh. After two were out Gilhooley banged a hit to right, Joe Jackson attempting to pick it off the daisies. The ball rolled to the wall for a triple. On a passed ball Gilhooley scored with his smart trick of touching the plate with his finger, which Lynn failed to locate. The Yanks added another for good measure in the eighth. With two disposed off, Miller got a pass and stole second. He scored on Gedeon's single to centre, Gedeon stole second and went to third on Lynn's wild toss. Walters's strike-out ended the inning.

SERIES MONEY TO LOAN.

Herrmann Proposes Investing Major Part of Receipts in Bonds.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 1.—Chairman August Herrmann of the National Baseball Commission announced today that he would recommend to his colleagues at their meeting in Chicago on Friday next that the money received by the National Commission, the interested clubs, and the players during the world series, excepting such sums as may be necessary for expenses, be invested by the respective parties in the second issue of Liberty bonds.

Guy Emerson, Secretary of the Publicity Committee of New York City, when notified of this plan, stated that "the plan to invest the world series gate receipts in Liberty bonds is a patriotic one which will appeal strongly to the millions interested in baseball. If this were done it would be a real service to the Liberty Loan."

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—When informed of August Herrmann's suggestion that world series money be invested largely in Liberty bonds, Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Americans, said: "I think it is a splendid idea. Herrmann is to be congratulated for thinking of it, and I'm with him."

Since the opening of the season Mr. Comiskey has given 10 per cent. of the earnings of his club to the Red Cross.

NO TICKETS IN CHICAGO.

Fans Protest When Applications for World's Series Seats Are Returned.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Vigorous protests from scores of local fans were received today at the Chicago American League Park when the first batch of unfilled applications for world series seats were returned to their senders. Letters stating the applicants had been among the first to send their requests for seats came in by the hundreds. Resentment was expressed by many because the first applications filled had been from those which reached the park by special delivery, while those coming through the ordinary mail were unfilled until later. On one day, it was announced, 3,000 special delivery requests were handled.

The games in this city will start at 2 o'clock it was announced today.

A resolution directing the police to cooperate with park officials to prevent scalping of tickets was adopted by the City Council today. The police were directed to prohibit the sale of tickets in streets or alleys and to aid in excluding all purchasers of tickets from scalpers from the parks.

M'TAGGART PILOTS ANNCHEN TO FORE

Johnny Lands 10 to 1 Shot First in Bellrose Selling Stakes at Aqueduct.

Johnny McTaggart celebrated his return to the saddle yesterday, after three days on the ground, by riding R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Annchen to victory in the Bellrose Selling Stakes for two-year-olds, which was the feature of the Aqueduct card. The success of the daughter of Olambala was as unexpected as most of those which marked the beginning of the last week of racing on the local tracks. It appears to be an unwritten law of the sport in its dying days that not more than two favorites shall win in a day. Annchen was not one of the chosen two yesterday, and in a field of nine the Wilson filly started at the long odds of 10 to 1.

Two other outsiders followed Annchen to the judges, Gifford A. Cochran's Ballast, which was coupled with Amackassin, finished second at odds of 12 to 1, and F. D. Weir's Golden Glow, an 8 to 1 chance, was third. Before the race it was thought that T. P. Thorne's Panaman, an imported colt that won a good race last Tuesday, had a royal chance for victory, with John Sanford's Nominee as his most dangerous opponent. Panaman, however, had a rough trip over the five-furlong course, and after being pinched off at the start was cut off in the stretch by the in-and-out running of the first and second horses.

Annchen, after acting badly at the post, was away well and raced through the early part of the running alongside of Dawn Star. Ballast also was in the first flight, but in the drive through the last sixteenth both Annchen and Ballast swerved. Annchen straightened out quickly and came away at the sixteenth pole, winning handily by a length. Ballast lasted long enough to stall off the challenge of Golden Glow and take the place by half a length. Panaman never could find an opening, and landed in fifth place behind Dawn Star.

With the small field of four the fifth race, a handicap for mares, furnished a spectacular contest. Ima Frank, Wistful, and Rhine Maiden were all well supported, the latter closing favorite. McTaggart had the mount on Ima Frank, and after waiting behind Rhine Maiden until the stretch, made an effort to win the race by a premature dash at the head of the stretch. The favorite shot into a lead of two lengths in such a hurry that it looked as though the race was over.

Lyke, however, had been waiting patiently in last place with Wistful to move up, with Queen of the Water keeping her company at the eighth pole. Ima Frank held her lead for another sixteenth of a mile, then the weight began to tell. As she faltered Wistful bore down on her and Ima Frank had nothing in reserve, so that Wistful was a length and a half in front as she crossed the line. Queen of the Water hung when she reached Ima Frank and lost second place by a head. The time of 1:39 3-5 marked a good performance for Mr. Butler's filly, as she was giving weight by the scale to the other starters.

For the second time at this meeting Allan Pinkerton's Andes proved a disappointing favorite. He met a poor lot in the first race, but could only finish fourth. The winner was W. C. Clancy's Paddy Dear, a horse which he bought for $160 early this year, and which ran for the first time in his colors. There was another reversal of form when F. Ambrose Clark's Grey Leg defeated Garter, a strong favorite for the steeplechase, for only last week Garter beat Grey Leg under the same weight conditions.

John Sanford's Gex, which captured the third race at a mile, was the first public choice to win. He scored impressively, beating Peep Sight, a 30 to 1 shot, by five lengths.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—For three-year-olds and upward; selling; purse $600; six furlongs. Time—1:14.

HARVARD MAY PLAY YALE.

Fred Moore Favors Contest for Benefit of Red Cross.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 1.—The extent of Harvard's competition on the gridiron will be decided tomorrow evening at the first meeting of the Harvard Athletic Association. Present indications are that the Crimson will meet no college team except Yale, and then will play only if the Red Cross desires to conduct such a match.

"Speaking unofficially, I would say Harvard would be glad to face a team from Yale for such a good cause as the Red Cross," said Fred W. Moore, graduate manager of the Harvard Athletic Association. "We have offers for games from military teams at Ayer, Portland, and Newport, and will probably be able to make public some definite schedule after our meeting tomorrow."

Dr. E. H. Nichols, for years football physician, was reappointed today, and Thomas K. Richards, football manager in 1914, was made his assistant. The freshman squad was cut tonight, thirty-five men being retained, and a scrimmage with Captain Snow's team is due tomorrow.

Five 'Varsity and two freshman crews were out on the river this afternoon. Coaches Haines and Brown were in charge. A hundred men are out for the crew.

HARD WORK FOR FORDHAM.

Maroon Eleven to be Pointed for Ambulance Eleven Game.

The usual light Monday football drill at Fordham was conspicuous by its absence. Coach McCaffery is looking forward to a hard game with the ambulance eleven at Allentown on Friday afternoon, and he started a big drive with a two-hour workout, including a thirty-minute scrimmage. The forwards received special attention, as Fordham's line play was poor in Saturday's game. Interference for the backs and how to shake off tacklers were emphasized in the scrimmage.

The 'Varsity players had exclusive possession of the ball and scored two touchdowns. Colletti and Frisch carrying the ball over. Gurlick, a former Princeton Prep star, played a strong game at tackle on the scrub eleven.

RUTGERS PRACTICE LIGHT.

Work Devoted to Correcting Errors Displayed on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 1.—Every member of the Rutgers football squad came out of the Ursinus game in good condition on Saturday except Hummell, right end, who has a bruised arm. He is expected to be in shape again within a few days. This afternoon the work was light, consisting mostly of correcting errors brought out in the play against Ursinus. Tomorrow hard work will be started for the Syracuse contest, which will be played on Oct. 13. Rutgers is looking for a game to be played in New Brunswick on Saturday of this week, but has so far been unsuccessful.

MANY INDEPENDENT TEAMS.

Walter Camp's Prediction Borne Out by Report from Washington.

Walter Camp's prediction before the Central Board of Officials of the Intercollegiate Football Association on Saturday that owing to the number of elevens organized at the various cantonments and training stations for soldiers the gridiron game would receive a big boost this year is borne out by a report which recently appeared in The Washington Evening Star. Describing the situation of independent elevens around the capital the writer in The Evening Star states:

"More independent football games will be staged in and around Washington this year than have been played in a long while. Besides the elevens that usually have operated and again are planning for campaigns, several teams representing organizations of soldiers camped in this vicinity have got together and hurled challenges at every other combination in sight.

"Vigilants and Mohawks, the strongest independent elevens of the last few years, are practicing. They are arranging schedules of Saturday and Sunday contests. Down in Potomac Park are encamped two companies of Coast Artillery doing White House guard duty, and among the members of the two companies are the majority of the players who held down positions on the champion Fort Monroe eleven a year ago. The team has been organized and a schedule now is in the process of formation. Walter Reed Hospital has a bunch of big men at work and expects to make a good showing against the other teams. Over at Fort Myer the Third Regiment of the District National Guard is ready to meet all comers. Out at Camp Meade, at Admiral, one of the new cantonments, several teams are to be organized. Among the officers there are some players who last year were on strong college elevens.

"Football, while this year it may not be developed as strongly as it might in the colleges in Washington, will receive a general impetus that it never has enjoyed before. With many independent elevens playing two or three games each week there is not likely to be much lacking in the way of interest in the sport."

N. Y. U. HAS SCRIMMAGE.

Makeup of Eleven to Face R. P. I. Still Is Doubtful.

A stiff scrimmage greeted the New York University football squad yesterday after the rest over the week-end. The freshman team, strengthened by a few of last year's squad, was pitted against a tentative 'Varsity, the personnel of which was changed frequently by the coaches. It is still an open question as to the make up of the team that faces the R. P. I. on Saturday.

The temporary regulars had the ball for the most of the afternoon, and, though finished teamwork was lacking, the back field made several effective gains. Covello, Finley, Worth, and Egan each did well. Several forward passes were tried, but few succeeded. On the line of the regulars were the veterans Sokolower, Brin, Goldberg, and Goff, while Christopher alternated with several others at the quarter back position.

LAUREL FALL MEET OPENS.

Westy Hogan Makes Show of Field in Handicap.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 1.—The Fall race meet opened auspiciously here today with representatives of most of the principal Eastern owners engaged. There were many scratches owing to delay in transporting horses to the track, but enough high class competitors were on hand to furnish good sport.

Wilfrid Viau proved that he made no mistake in purchasing the three-year-old Westy Hogan, when that son of Dick Finnell picked up top weight in the Laurel Handicap at six furlongs and defeated the best field of the day. In spite of the fact that he was giving away weight to good sprinters, most of them older than himself, Westy Hogan was an odds on favorite. He led most of the way and won easily from M. Shea's Tea Caddy.

A. K. Macomber started four horses and two of them scored. His greatest disappointment was when the two-year-old War Machine, a strongly played favorite, finished only third in a field of four in the opening event for two-year-olds. Harry Payne Whitney's speedy filly, Ruth Law, for once lasted long enough to get down in front of August Belmont's Belvale.

Walnut Hall, carried the Macomber colors in the Advance Purse for three-year-olds and surprised the talent by winning from Gloomy Gus, with the favorite, Sunflash II., outside the money. Hank O'Day, the other winner for Mr. Macomber, had little opposition and won as he pleased from Candle.

RECORD EQUALED BY NELLA DILLON

Filly Trots Two Heats at Same Speed as World's Mark in Kentucky Futurity.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 1.—Alexander B. Cox's bay filly Nella Dillon, driven by Joseph Serrill, won the twenty-fourth renewal of the five-thousand-dollar two-year-old Kentucky Futurity today in spectacular style, equaling the world's record for two heats by a two-year-old trotter of Peter Volo, made at Columbus, Ohio, in 1913.

She also in each heat lowered the season's record by trotting in 2:07 and 2:06¼. Peter June, the favorite, driven by Geers, was second in each heat, but was beaten decisively. Serrill stayed in behind until the stretch, when he pulled out and passed Peter June with ease.

The Walnut Hall Cup, a three-thousand-dollar event, was won in straight heats by Early Dreams. In the first heat he was forced to equal the track record of 2:04¼. In the first heat Early Dreams, Alma Forbes, Ima Jay, and Busy's Lassie finished heads apart. Baxter Lou won the 2:07 pace, after losing the first heat to Barlight in 2:04¼.

The 2:14 pace was unfinished, with George E. Hutton and Bingen Direct each with a heat to their credit.

More than thirty entries have been received for the Fall century run to be held on Oct. 28 by the Long Island Division of the Century Road Club Association. One-half of the entries are from out-of-town riders from Baltimore, Md., Connecticut, New Jersey, and Massachusetts, who will ride the 100 miles constituting the century event. This event is attracting attention among cyclists, and promises to eclipse previous events of its kind. An added feature will be the five-mile race to be held en route, for which twenty-five prizes have been given by the manufacturers through the United Cycle Trade Directorate.

The contest will be decided on the night of the opening game of the world's series at the Polo Grounds. Both boxers have already started training for the bout, and Cline will get an extra workout tomorrow night at Providence, where he boxes Lou Cardell, the Newark lightweight, twelve rounds to a decision.

MISS BERNHARD DEFEATED.

Mrs. Waring Provides Upset in Women's Tennis Tourney.

After successfully avoiding the pitfalls in the first two rounds, Miss Helen Bernhard fell before a comparatively unknown tennis expert in the opening day of play of the New York Lawn Tennis Club's women's open tournament, held at the Williamsbridge courts yesterday. Miss Bernhard was defeated by Mrs. Samuel Waring after a bitter struggle and by the score of 6—4, 9—7. Mrs. Waring developed a careful placement game which matched anything Miss Bernhard had to offer, and finally brought the first big upset of the tournament.

Of the thirty-two women who entered the tournament none of the favorites were eliminated excepting Miss Bernhard. Miss Marie Wagner, women's national indoor champion, won the only match she was called upon to play without great difficulty. Miss Helene Pollak, who with Miss Bernhard was runnerup for the women's metropolitan doubles championship, gained two brackets. Miss Florence Pond, the sixteen-year-old New Jersey girl, made a favorable showing, but was defeated by the more experienced player, Mrs. Percy Wilbourn. Others who achieved victories were Mrs. Ingo F. Hartman and Miss Bessie Holden.

The summaries:

NEWSPAPER GOLFERS PLAY.

Hall Wins Qualifying Medal in Cooper Cup Tourney.

Members of the Newspaper Golf Club began their annual competition for the Cooper Cup, emblematical of the President's championship for the year. Although thirty-two players were to have qualified for the match play rounds only fourteen members of the club turned in cards. Several more played and made the round fairly well sized. David Hall carried off the qualifying medal with 82, 16—66. Those who turned in cards were:

David Hall, 82, 16—66; A. Carter, 82, 15—77; C. M. Amory, 85, 17—68; C. Wood, 86, 15—71; P. R. Grimler, 89, 17—72; M. Guth, 102, 30—72; Charles Laux, 91, 19—72; H. Heindl, 93, 19—74; R. A. ## P. S. A. L. PLANS GREAT YEAR

Athletics for Schoolboys Scheduled on a Large Scale.

Through the co-operation of the Department of Education and the Public Schools Athletic League, athletics for school boys in this city will be conducted on a more extensive scale than in former years. In all the public high schools a large percentage of the students who last year competed on the various school teams, such as rifle shooting, soccer football, tennis, baseball, basket ball, and track and field athletics, have enlisted in either the army or navy, leaving this year's teams composed mostly of new material.

It is with this in mind that the Public Schools Athletic League plans to do everything possible to create a "big drive" and arouse a spirit of enthusiastic interest in all forms of athletics by interclass and interschool competition, hoping thus to fill up the ranks left vacant by those student athletes now serving their country. The success of the movement is now being manifested in the schools by the large number of students applying to the school coaches for placement on one or more athletic teams.

In basket ball, always one of the major sports of the high schools, the championship series will start on Dec. 8. This tournament is preceded by a class tournament, now in operation. When the class winners have been decided, an interclass series will be played. By this method the basket ball coach becomes familiar with the playing ability of all the boys of his school, and from the large number of students participating he is able to select the team to represent his school. In this series of class and interclass games the boys are always working with the object in view of making the "big team" which will represent the school in the championship tournament.

MISKE IN RING TONIGHT.

Will Meet Charlie Weinert at Broadway S. C.—Other Bouts.

Billy Miske, the St. Paul light-heavyweight, will make his second metropolitan appearance in five days at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn this evening when he faces Charlie Weinert, the Newark heavyweight, for ten rounds. This will be the second local meeting between these boxers, and it is attracting unusual attention. In their previous bout Miske surprised the boxing critics by carrying off a popular verdict, and with the confidence born of his victory over Carl Morris the other night the St. Paul boxer expects to repeat. Another ten-round bout will bring together Walter Laurett, the west side welterweight, and Kid Alberts of Elizabeth, N. J.

Two good ten-round bouts between lightweights will be the attraction at the Pioneer S. C. this evening. In the first Eddie Wallace, the Brooklyn boxer, who gained a decision over Freddie Welsh when the latter held the lightweight title, will oppose Tommy Touhey, the sturdy Paterson, N. J., lightweight. The combatants in the other ten-round event will be Pal Moore of Philadelphia, and Johnny Harvey, the Italian lightweight of Harlem.

MRS. LE ROY WINS IN CLASS A PLAY

Mrs. Cassebeer, Miss White, and Mrs. Candee Also Reach Tennis Semi-Finals.

Every one of the leading feminine tennis exponents of the West Side Tennis Club participated in the opening rounds of the annual club championship for women started at Forest Hills yesterday. The play in the Class A division resulted in several well-contested encounters, Mrs. Robert LeRoy and Mrs. Theodore Cassebeer reaching the semi-final round in the upper half of the draw and leaving Miss Edith White and Mrs. De Forest Candee with similar brackets in the lower half.

Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris made an admirable start for the Class A title by disposing of Miss Adele Cragin at 6—2, 6—4 in the first round, but there Mrs. Morris stopped, since she wished to conserve her energies for the doubles tournament. She defaulted to Mrs. Cassebeer in the second round. Mrs. LeRoy triumphed over a rival of many former matches when she defeated Miss Gertrude Della Torre at 6—4, 6—3. Miss Della Torre was hardly up to the fine game she has played.

Mrs. Candee gained the most decisive victory when she eliminated Miss Theresa Lansdowne at 6—1, 6—0. Mrs. Candee is a finished player at all times, but she was unusually accurate and severe against Miss Lansdowne. The victor's chop strokes and her half volleys from the back court were entirely too much for Miss Lansdowne.

In the doubles, also started yesterday, three teams reached the semi-final round. They were Miss White and Miss Eleanor Goss, Mrs. L. G. Morris and Mrs. LeRoy and Mrs. George L. Chapman and Mrs. Marshall McLean, former national champion in singles. It was the season's first appearance of Mrs. McLean on the courts, but she played with much of her former ability.

The summaries:

CLASS A, SINGLES—First Round.—Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris defeated Miss Adele Cragin, 6—2, 6—4.

Second Round.—Mrs. Robert LeRoy defeated Miss Gertrude Della Torre, 6—4, 6—3; Mrs. Theodore C. Cassebeer won from Mrs. L. G. Morris by default; Miss Edith White won from Miss Eleanor Goss by default; Mrs. DeForest Candee defeated Miss Theresa Lansdowne, 6—1, 6—0.

CLASS B, SINGLES—First Round.—Mrs. G. T. Hill, Jr., defeated Mrs. A. Chisholm, 6—2 6—1; Miss M. Cape defeated Miss Speath, 6—4, 6—2; Mrs. F. A. Straffin defeated Mrs. A. Elliot Ranney, 6—4, 6—2; Miss L. Eyre drew a bye.

DOUBLES—First Round.—Mrs. Theodore C. Cassebeer and Miss Florence Ballin defeated Mrs. G. B. Rossman and Mrs. G. T. Hill, Jr., 6—2, 6—3.

Second Round.—Miss Eleanor Goss and Miss Edith White defeated Mrs. A. Chisholm and Mrs. A. Elliot Ranney, 6—2, 6—3; Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris and Mrs. Robert LeRoy defeated Miss Theresa Lansdowne and Miss Marie Ballin, 6—3, 6—1; Mrs. George L. Chapman and Mrs. Marshall McLean defeated Miss L. Eyre and Miss M. Cape, 6—4, 6—2.

Here's a customer completely turned 'round! Thought he had to go to a tailor in order to get two pairs of trousers to go with a suit. Wrote us a long letter about it (for which we're duly thankful) because it reminds us to remind "thousands of other thrifty folks" that they may have the second pair of trousers for most any suit they now select.

"THAT," said the man who knows cars, "is technically the most correct brougham type which has ever been motor driven."

He was referring, of course, to the Liberty Brougham. You have probably seen them on the avenue, and admired their compact grace, and the low lines which are possible on none but the Liberty chassis.

So with the Sedan—a closed car of seasonable interest to car owners who demand grace and comfort, with the wheelbase best adapted to city traffic.

Beyond a doubt your inspection of these smart closed cars will be worth your while.

Tentative Valuation for All the Boroughs for 1918 Is Made Public.

PERSONAL ASSESSMENT UP

Increase Is $376,385,380—H. P. Davison and Mrs. E. H. Harriman Not Now on List.

The books of the Department of Taxes and Assessment, showing the tentative assessed valuation of all the real estate in the city, as well as the personal assessment, were opened to the public yesterday. They show an increase of the valuation of all real estate in all boroughs for 1918 over 1917 of $130,184,828. The real estate of corporations show an increase over last year of $7,194,985. The combined valuation of real estate and real estate corporations for 1918 is $7,930,351,113. The increase on personal assessment for 1918 is $376,385,380. In all boroughs 8,391 buildings were erected during the year.

In the valuation placed by the commission on the personal property held by residents of Manhattan, a number of changes from the rating for last year were noted. In the case of Henry P. Davison, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., who was assessed at $1,000,000 last year, no assessment appears on the books for 1918. Mr. Davison swore off all as a resident of Nassau County. George Ehret, the brewer, is on the list for a million, while J. Coleman du Pont is down for only $20,000, and no mention is made of Mrs. E. H. Harriman. The list of tentative personal assessments for all boroughs for 1918 as compared with 1917 is as follows:

| Borough. | 1918, Tentative. | 1917, Final. |
| Manhattan | $561,882,900 | $289,106,700 |

| Richmond | 4,901,600 | 2,756,300 |

MORE ELEVATED EXPRESSES

All-Day Service on Third Avenue Line in Operation Soon.

Plans for the operation of the all-day express trains on the Third Avenue elevated railroad, were completed yesterday and were reported to the Public Service Commission by George Keegan of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. The new express trains will leave Bronx Park on a three-minute headway, and will run as locals as far south as 138th Street, where they will run as expresses to the City Hall.

Local service will leave 129th Street on a three-minute headway and run alternately to the City Hall and to South Ferry. The last express train will leave the Bronx Park about noon and the first northbound express will leave the City Hall about forty-five minutes later. This schedule will cover all of the non-rush hour periods in the directions in which the heaviest travel is expected. The service will be in operation in a few weeks after the changes in the switch tower at Ninety-eighth Street are made.

CITY BANK HOPEFUL OF AFTER-WAR WORK

Asserts That Prophecies of Universal Poverty and Bankruptcy Are Likely to Go Astray.

The National City Bank, in its monthly circular on business conditions, takes a much more hopeful view of the probable conditions after the war, in the so-called reconstruction period, than other authorities have recently taken.

"Everywhere there is anxiety as to the effect of debts upon industry and living conditions after the war, but it is noteworthy that in all countries the people are busy with plans for reorganization and development," it says. "It is generally recognized that the main problem is that of getting the people back to work. If the industries can be put on their feet promptly, the fiscal problems can be handled. The early forecasts of war finance went astray because they assumed that the war expenditures would be taken out of capital, but that has been true only in minor degree. The bulk of the war expenditures consist of labor and of supplies of current production.

"A year of war means that the work of the year has been to a great extent expended unproductively. It has been lost. But the stock of fixed accumulated capital, in the form of implements, tools, equipment, railways, factories, houses, &c., by means of which wealth is produced and trade is carried on, has not been destroyed, except in limited districts. It is for this reason—because the wealth-producing capacities of the countries remained—and because the energies of all peoples were enormously stimulated, that the prophecies of an early end of the war through exhaustion have failed.

"For a like reason the prophecies of universal poverty, industrial prostration, and general bankruptcy after the war are likely to be astray. The world never has very much consumable wealth on hand; its wealth is in the equipment for production. It never does very much buying with money; the purchasing power of every country is in its own powers of production. As soon as the industries of every country can be put in order and started, as soon as everybody can be got to work and earning something, and trade can be reorganized, markets will be re-established and conditions will naturally become normal.

"It is time to stop talking about war debts as though all payments upon them were to be sunk in the sea. The expenditures which created the debts were unproductive and the wealth to liquidate the debts must be created in the future, but when it is created it will not be consumed or lost to society by being passed through the Government Treasuries and into the hands of the debtholders. That is an error due to the persistence of the idea that wealth is of no value to anybody but those who hold title to it.

"In all the warring countries the period immediately following the war is looked forward to with more or less apprehension. It is recognized that the months following demobilization, until the men who are leaving the armies are located in regular employment, and until the industries are reorganized and have found a regular outlet for their products, will be a critical time. The trade of the world is disorganized and will have to take shape again. May there not be a period of hesitation, confusion, unemployment, and depression?

"The best assurance that this danger will be averted is in the fact that it is everywhere recognized, and that steps are being planned to deal with it. It is agreed in all countries that demobilization will be accomplished gradually, and that provisions will be made for placing the men in employment. The general feeling in England is that there will be a demand for labor in the industries that will absorb the supply as fast as it is available. Shipbuilding will be very active, and there is a great amount of construction work which has been held in abeyance. The Government is considering an extensive housebuilding program, to provide sanitary tenements for the working classes.

"In Germany plans for the post-war period are being carefully made. In France the Government will lend its credit for the rehabilitation of the devastated provinces and probably for the assistance of the industries. Normal progress has been everywhere interrupted, and will be resumed with a rush as soon as general confidence in the situation is established."

OFFICE BOYS SCARCE.

Opening of School Season Makes Need More Acute.

With the opening of the public schools there has come the annual dearth of boys to help carry on the business of New York. In advertisements which have literally crowded other items off the back pages of the city's newspapers, New York's business has been proclaiming its need for boys, and yet more boys.

Boys of all ages, sizes, creeds, and races are called for by the advertisements. Experienced boys are wanted and those without experience. Most firms require "bright boys" or "intelligent boys," but any number of places are open for the genus "plain boy." The same applies to the physical development of the desired youths. Big, strong boys are in demand, but several advertisements specifically stated they wanted "small, neat appearing boys."

Some idea of the importance of boyhood in the commercial and business life of the city may be gained from a list of the employments open and anxiously waiting for a boy to come in and help them out. Boys are wanted by factories, dry goods houses, milliners, druggists, jewelry merchants, printers, tailors, plumbers, grocers, and hardware men. They are asked to come down and "glue envelopes," run elevators, tend doors, address letters, tend news stands, aid shipping clerks, and "make themselves generally useful."

These are some of the situations which await a New York boy today, or did await him yesterday, according to the advertisements in the morning papers.

INVADED BY FOREIGN LABOR.

Waterbury, Conn., Affected by Influx of Munitions Workers.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERBURY, Conn., Oct. 1.—The influx of alien labor here by reason of the great activity in munitions industries has taxed housing facilities until every purchaseable dwelling has been bought up by manufacturers to accommodate the small armies of foreigners who are quartered in frame houses of six to twelve rooms. These places, sprouting up in localities where for years only the native American has lived, have reduced the value of nearby real estate.

The housing being insufficient, shacks must be erected, and every available barn, stable, and even henneries and cow houses have been fitted with bunks, with a place for a cook stove. The larger places fitted for thirty to fifty men have regular cooks and have been arranged in a co-operative system.

The city has nearly 1,500 of these men running to the savings banks with their weekly wages to hoard for the final return home. No such wages were ever before paid to any laborers here. Men who sweep out the factories receive nearly $30 a week for less than ten hours night work, labor which before the war brought $12 a week. The city is becoming alarmed over the coming of cold weather, as most of these habitations, which include seven old cellars, twenty tents, and some exposed wrecks of frame houses may breed disease.

Drafted Man Must Pay Alimony.

The first Yaphank conscript to be directed to pay alimony out of his pay of $30 a month is Eugene H. Soeder, who has been sued for a separation by Edna Worst Soeder. Mrs. Soeder, who alleged that her husband abandoned her in July, will get $10 a month under an order of Supreme Court Justice Goff.

Children Come Here to Study.

Among the first-cabin passengers who arrived yesterday on an American steamship were 125 children who have come here to attend American schools and colleges during the Winter term.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Rails Weak, Industrials Irregular—Banks to Pool Funds to be Loaned by Committee.

The stock market was pulled this way and that by conflicting views of the effect of the new war profits tax, Government financing, and current railroad earnings statements yesterday, and closed very irregular. In general the high-class rails were depressed, being influenced by the August earnings reports of the two big Eastern systems; the motors and copper issues were weak, and steel and equipment stocks gained in favor. Liberty bonds broke below par again after selling at 100.24 last week, but closed at 100.

An interesting development in the money situation, which did not become generally known until after the close of the market, was the announcement that under the guidance of the Federal Reserve Bank the "money committee" had pooled upward of $200,000,000 in a fund, to be augmented later, which will be loaned at the discretion of the committee. This was taken to mean that from now on rates will be controlled with a view to avoiding the severe fluctuations to which the market would naturally become subject during the process of floating Government loans. Call money loaned at 6 per cent. throughout most of the session yesterday, with scant offerings of time money.

The conviction that the railroads are in the grip of circumstances beyond their control was voiced in a fresh wave of depression which carried leading issues back from one to three points. St. Paul made a new low price by selling at 52⅝, closing off 3 points, and ⅜ of a point under its previous low record, made in 1895. Baltimore & Ohio made a new low for a period of several years when it touched 61⅞, the final price showing a net decline of 2¼. Canadian Pacific dropped 1⅞, Chesapeake & Ohio 1, Delaware & Hudson 2¼, Missouri Pacific 1, New Haven 1⅜, and New York Central 1⅛. The Pennsylvania reported an increase of $4,650,000 in its gross revenues for August, practically all of which was consumed by higher operating costs. In the eight months of the year to date this company has received $23,385,000 more gross than it earned for the corresponding period of 1916, and yet it enters the last four months with a decline in net of more than $5,000,000. The Central's August showing was even less satisfactory. With an increase in gross revenues of $1,400,000, net showed a loss for the month of $4,350,000. Much of the loss in other income was explained by a decrease of nearly $3,000,000, representing special dividends paid a year ago by the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie and the Western Transit Company and not repeated in 1917.

An interesting campaign among its stockholders was launched yesterday by the New Haven with an appeal for approval of a proposed issue of $45,000,000 of new 7 per cent. preferred stock, the proceeds of which would be used to retire a like amount of notes maturing next Spring. On its showing of increased efficiency the company merits further support from its stockholders, but whether the new preferred issue, if authorized, can be sold at par, as required by the Massachusetts law, appears to depend on the return of easier financing conditions than those prevailing at the moment.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

Business Starts with Accumulation of Week-End Orders.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The stock market started today with a fair accumulation of week-end orders for gilt edged securities and rubber and oil shares, which imparted cheerfulness to the other sections, but as a good deal of money is waiting for the new war bonds tomorrow, business slackened later. Russian issues were uncertain, but shipping, armament, and Brazilian stocks were firm.

Money was in increased demand and discount rates were firm.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 60 francs 30 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 18 centimes. Five per cent. rentes, 88 francs 30 centimes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Rail Issues at New Low Levels.

The decline of St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, and other railroad stocks yesterday took much of the joy out of a market session which before the decline began was satisfactory to most of the followers of the bull side. St. Paul at 52⅝ was especially depressing, as the quotation established an absolute minimum record for the stock, the previous minimum being 53⅞ in 1895. Baltimore & Ohio, with a three-point drop to 61⅞, reached the lowest of the year, and Canadian Pacific set a low level for two years with a recession of 2⅞ to 146⅝. These were the gross declines, and in each case something of a recovery occurred before the close. Declines among the other rails were of fractional extent for the most part, with unsettlement general in the afternoon. The railroad issues supply a hard problem to traders and a harder to investors who bought them at much higher prices. The inclination of investors to average their holdings down by fresh purchases has been offset for many weeks by continuing declines, and this probably has had a part in causing the market to work lower. The support of buying orders for the purpose of averaging has been lacking.

Interesting Bond Market.

The bond market promises to supply a subject for careful study during the current month. With the majority of Wall Street bond salesmen concentrating their efforts on the Liberty Loan, it is to be expected that corporation issues will be neglected. The market is being left to itself during a period of declining prices. It might be expected that a condition of the sort would impel a more rapid decline. At the same time account should be made of the probability that the enthusiasm displayed for the Liberty bonds will have some sentimental reflection in other issues.

Uncertainty.

The stock market as a whole passed through several phases, reflecting a great deal of uncertainty among speculators. While the industrial and mining issues were strong in the morning, it became evident as time passed that the buying power was slowly receding, except in the case of Distillers Securities and a few specialties. Inspiration, Kennecott, and Utah became conspicuous for their weakness, and in this they afforded a sharp contrast with their stability a week ago. The declaration of the plain quarterly dividend of $1.50, without the extra of three months ago, by the Miami Copper Company may have had some effect on the copper shares, as it became known that the drop in production during August as the result of the strike had borne influence with the Directors in omitting the extra payment. The Miami's output in September, however, showed a substantial recovery over the August total.

Business Failures.

Whether because of excellent business conditions or extreme caution on the part of business men, Bradstreet's failure report for the nine months ended with Sept. 30, published this week, shows a remarkably low figure. Altogether 10,073 failures were reported throughout the country in the nine months, with total liabilities aggregating $126,133,636. This is a smaller number of failures than has been reported in the same length of time for any year since 1911 and the smallest liabilities since 1900. But the percentage of liabilities covered by assets was only 52.6 per cent., the smallest since 1912. Last year in the first nine months there were more than 12,000 and the year before 14,000 failures.

New Financing in September.

According to compilations made by The Journal of Commerce, borrowing by industrial and railroad corporations in the last month totaled $80,800,000, which compares with $180,000,000 for the month of August and $95,600,000 in September, 1916. The falling off in new financing has been due to the general disposition of banking and corporate interests to leave the investment market clear for the Government loan. The total for bonds, stocks, and notes of industrial and railroad and public utility corporations issued in the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1917, is $1,348,707,000, compared with $1,712,826,000 for the corresponding period last year, or a decrease of $364,000,000.

Pennsylvania Holds Up

The report of earnings of the Pennsylvania Railroad for the month of August shows that the big system was able to hold a little, though only a little, better than even against the rising tide of expenses. The gross earnings increased $4,650,000 and expenses only about $4,450,000 over the figures for August, 1916, leaving a margin of $200,000 in the month to the benefit of the road. From Jan. 1 to Aug. 31, however, the Pennsylvania has suffered like most other roads, losing more than $5,000,000 in net operating income despite a tremendous increase in the amount of business it has done.

Some Comparisons.

In a compilation of reasons why the business men of the country will subscribe for the Second Liberty Loan bonds, William Morris Imbrie & Co. point out that the wealth of the United States is greater than that of Great Britain, France, and Germany combined; that our estimated debt in 1917, amounting to $7,000,000,000, is only 3.04 per cent. of our wealth, as against a ratio of 27.9 per cent. for Great Britain, 32.25 per cent. for France, and 34.20 per cent. for Germany. It is shown further that the 1917 debt is only 17.5 per cent. of our estimated income of $40,000,000,000, while Great Britain's debt is 192 per cent. of her income. France's is 333.4 per cent. and Germany's is 286.27 per cent.

MAXWELL EARNS $5,914,904.

Motor Company's Profits Applicable to Dividends, 30.8 Per Cent.

The Maxwell Motor Company showed in its annual report yesterday that total earnings in the year ended July 31 were $5,914,904, a decrease of $11,968 from the record of the preceding year. After depreciation and repair allowances had been made there remained a net income of $5,507,697, a gain of $218,702 over 1916. The increase was largely accounted for by a smaller reserve for the depreciation account than the year before. Profits applicable to the common stock dividends, after the first and second preferred dividends were paid, were equivalent to 30.8 per cent. on the outstanding issue.

The company's earnings exceeded expectations in the financial district, as a ... in the neighborhood of $5,000,000 ... for Walter E. Flanders, President, said in his statement to shareholders that the number of cars sold was 39 per cent. greater than in 1916 and that, at the time the report was prepared, Sept. 15, sales contracts had been signed with agents for 82 per cent. more cars than at the same time last year. The sales contracts, he added, indicated that a ready market would be found for all the one-ton trucks which the company could produce in the current fiscal year.

The report said that the company's properties had been appraised at $8,305,389, or $2,909,650 more than the net figures at which they were carried on the books. The net working assets of the concern and its subsidiaries at the end of the year were $12,280,977. The balance sheet showed a surplus of $8,017,444 when the year ended.

The Maxwell Company has taken over the operation of the Chalmers Motor Company, which was recently refinanced. The Chalmers put out $3,150,000 five-year 6 per cent. notes, which were taken by the shareholders and C. D. Barney & Co. and J. S. Bache & Co. The manufacture of the Chalmers car will be continued and the surplus room in its factory will be utilized in the manufacture of motor trucks.

THE COTTON MARKET

Trading Quiet and Steady, Closing at a Net Gain of 4 to 20 Points.

The cotton market was quiet and steady yesterday, closing at a net advance of 4 to 20 points. Few or no complaints of damage were received from the Gulf storm area, and there appeared no change of sentiment as to the showing of today's Government reports, but scattered liquidation on the prospects for fair and warmer weather was absorbed by a moderate demand from Liverpool and domestic trade interests. December contracts sold up from 23.60c to 23.87c, and closed at 23.83c.

The market opened steady at a decline of 13 points on October, but generally 5 to 11 points higher. Early buyers seemed to be disappointed by the absence of storm damage reports, and there was selling on the improved weather outlook which sent December and later months about 3 to 4 points under Saturday's closing figures shortly after the call. Offerings were well absorbed at this level, however, with the market turning firmer during the afternoon on a very small volume of business. Active months sold 13 to 24 points net higher, and the close was within a few points of the best.

The liberal export movement, which is now catching up on last year, was probably a factor on the afternoon advance, while there may also have been some buying on the unseasonably low temperatures reported in the South for the last twenty-four hours. Two more private crop reports were issued, one making the condition 63 compared with the Government report of 67.8 last month, while the other made it 64.5, compared with 69.6 last month. The nine private condition reports issued average 62.7, and the average of ninety-five guesses by members of the New York Cotton Exchange as to the showing of today's official report pointed to 62.6. There will be two Government reports published this morning, the first one to appear being the census report showing the amount of cotton ginned prior to Sept. 25. The condition report which is to be published an hour later at 11 o'clock, will be the last condition report of the season, but the Government's final estimate of the yield will not be issued until Dec. 11. Yesterday was the first day of trading in the new Liverpool contract, but there was no increase in straddle or arbitrage business, and local spot people feel rather doubtful whether the emergency contract abroad will be of much value to merchants, as they understand that deliveries are prohibited. Exports for the day were 48,537, making 792,906 so far this season, against 905,758 last year. Southern spot markets as officially reported were 50 points lower to 25 points higher, generally unchanged to 25 points higher.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Owing to the comparatively slow movement and the urgent milling demand stocks are increasing only moderately. The visible increased 932,000 bushels last week, bringing the total to 7,789,000, compared with a total last year of 57,416,000. Farmers are very indifferent about marketing their grain and there seems to be little prospect of any material accumulation in the near future. At the same time the movement in Canada is quite free and some authorities maintain that a considerable supply for milling purposes might be obtained from this source. Attention has also been called to the very large surplus in Australia, part of which might move to the Pacific coast if tonnage is available.

The appearance of frost over the central corn belt, extending from the Mississippi River eastward, caused an early advance of about ⅝c in the corn market, with covering by nervous shorts. Subsequently, however, a reactionary tendency developed and at the close prices were net unchanged to ⅝c lower. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $2.15; No. 2 mixed at $2.12 cost, insurance, and freight New York. Receipts of old corn at primary points were small and the visible showed a decrease of 669,000 bushels for the week, bringing the total to 1,136,000 bushels, compared with 5,093,000 a year ago.

OATS.

Price changes in the oats market were confined within very narrow limits, and the close was ⅛c net lower. The action of corn discouraged buying, and operators as a rule seemed inclined to await developments. The visible supply increased 1,806,000 bushels for the week, bringing the total to 14,268,000, compared with 38,866,000 a year ago. ## PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was comparatively quiet and, aside from a show of firmness in October ribs, the undertone was easy and values were lower. Hogs showed a decline in the West, although receipts continue small. October deliveries at Chicago consisted of about 8,250,000 pounds of lard and 7,000 barrels of pork. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 20,000; estimated for Tuesday, 12,000; Kansas City received 6,000 and Omaha 2,000.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Trading operations in the market for cottonseed oil were limited, with sales amounting to only 23,000 barrels. Recent efforts to curtail bullish operations have had a tendency to disturb confidence to some extent. At the close prices ranged from 4 points net lower to 2 points higher.

COFFEE.

The coffee market was lower yesterday under scattering liquidation, accompanied by talk of an easier tone in Brazil. Some stop-loss orders were uncovered on the decline, which extended to 7.47c for March and 7.87c for July or 15 to 22 points from Saturday's closing figures. Rallies of a few points followed on covering, but the close showed a net loss of 18 to 17 points. Sales were reported of 46,000 bags. ## SUGAR.

There was a gradual readjustment going on in refined sugar and the American and the National reduced list prices 5 points to basis 8.35c fine granulated. Arbuckle was unchanged at 8.50c and the Federal and Warner were withdrawn from the market. Two Philadelphia refiners also reduced their list to 8.35c. Owing to a shortage of raw supplies practically all interests who are accepting business at all, are limiting sales. The country, being low on stocks, is furnishing a good demand and old contracts are also being drawn against. In raw sugar conditions were about unchanged from last week. Canadian interests are in need of raws and were firmly bidding 5⅝c, cost and freight, for prompt sugar, while there were moderate offerings at 6c, cost and freight. Spot quotations follow: Centrifugal, 6.90c; Molasses, 6.02c; Cost and freight, 5⅝c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 4,680 packages. A strong market for all grades, with fair buying interest and stock working out of first hands about as fast as it is received. Prices for creamery extras are fully ½c higher, and in some instances ½c. Several lots of held creamery sold at 44@45c. Renovated firmer, with jobbing sales up to 44c for fancy quality. EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 9,514 cases. There is a little more activity in the market for high-grade eggs today. Advices more generally indicate decreased shipments in transit, and the tone of the market is fairly steady, although buyers at top quotations are still critical, and there is pressure to sell the accumulations of medium and lower grades which are still in large supply. Storage eggs very dull and selling values for any considerable business are little more than nominal at the moment. Buyers looking for good sized lots would undoubtedly obtain some concession from recent asking prices. Nearby white eggs of fancy quality are scarce and in sellers' favor, but the accumulation of irregular qualities still range widely and are freely offered with a quiet trade. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 45@46c; extra firsts, 42@44c; firsts, 39@41c; seconds, 37@38c; thirds and poorer, 35@36½c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1, 36@36½c; No. 2 and poorer, 32@35½c; fresh gathered, checks, good to choice, dry, 33@34c; undergrades, 30@32c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 38½@39c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 37@38c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 35½@36½c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 34@35c; refrigerator, State, whites, 41@43c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 58@62c; ordinary to good, 45@57c; gathered whites, good to fine, 42@58c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 42@56c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 48@56c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 42@48c.

NEW HAVEN EXPLAINS PROPOSED STOCK ISSUE

Circular Letter to Shareholders Emphasizes Necessity for Raising $45,000,000.

The Board of Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company has published a circular letter to the stockholders, describing the new $45,000,000 issue of 7 per cent. preferred stock, which they will be asked to approve at a special meeting held in New Haven on Oct. 24, immediately after the regular annual meeting. This stock issue, if approved, will be used to take up the $45,000,000 of notes which the road has outstanding, and which fall due in May, 1917. This $45,000,000 represents the last installment of the floating debt of the company.

"This debt at one time was over $56,000,000," the letter says, "but during the last four years has been gradually reduced to $45,000,000 out of earnings and the sale of miscellaneous pieces of property." The letter then goes into the alternative proposals for paying the floating debt, either by a bond issue or by selling the Boston & Maine, the trolley lines and other property held by the road. The difficulties in the way of these proposals are pointed out, and the letter continues:

"A preferred stock issue offers the soundest method of finance. It allows every stockholder to subscribe, but compels no one to do so. It will make the stock and indebtedness substantially equal in amount and so strengthen the company's credit.

"The company is now paying more than 7 per cent. interest and discounts on its short term notes; it can as easily earn and pay 7 per cent. dividends on $45,000,000, with the great advantage of not being required to make renewals every year."

The letter then reviews the financial condition of the company, showing the various improvements in the equipment and service of the road, and the manner in which $12,000,000 of the floating debt has already been paid off, and points out that if the notes are not met, the company may lose the collateral securing them, now carried on the company's books at $96,512,516, but not likely to bring that amount at a forced sale. "Your Directors," the letter concludes, "unanimously recommend that you authorize the issue of preferred stock."

Some tables appended to the stockholders' letter show the improvements already accomplished in the road's service. Earnings per freight train mile, it is shown, have steadily increased from $5.42 in March last to $6.42 in June and $6.25 in July.

The chief difficulty in the way of approval of the new stock issue is in the wide distribution of the New Haven stock, which may make it hard to secure the necessary two-thirds majority of all stock outstanding for approval. There are only three shareholders having more than 10,000 shares of New Haven stock, and all of these are corporations, the Pennsylvania Railroad owning 53,000 shares and having a Director on the Board, the Mutual Life Insurance Company 30,000 and the American Express Company 15,000 shares. All three have tentatively approved the new issue. The average number of shares per stockholder is 60.9, and 11,915 persons each hold fewer than ten shares, while 9,375 hold less than fifty. There are 25,769 individual shareholders in all.

FEWER FAILURES NOW.

War Conditions Work Favorable Change in Commercial Affairs.

The record of commercial failures in the nine months ended Sept. 30 supplies no evidence of unusual unsettlement resultant from the entrance of the country into the war. On the contrary, the figures display a substantial improvement over the same period last year.

The number of insolvencies was only 10,787 and involve $141,950,038 of defaulted indebtedness, exclusive of banking and other fiduciary suspensions and a large life insurance receivership in Pennsylvania in the second quarter.

These figures compare with 13,250 business reverses for $154,586,707 reported to R. G. Dun & Co. in the first nine months of 1916 and with 17,288 in 1915 for $241,464,060.

The present returns, in fact, are the best for the period since 1911, while in number the September defaults, but 963, are less than in any month in practically six years, and the liabilities, $11,903,051, are the smallest, excepting those of May, back to last October, though slightly larger than in September, 1916. When it is remembered that more people are in business than ever before, and that there have been many other factors calculated to enhance the possibilities of financial embarrassment, the failure statement may be regarded as favorable.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

On the initial day for the flotation of the new Liberty Loan there was a general rise in prices at the start of trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Gains of substantial proportions compared with Saturday's closings were recorded all along the line. The subsequent action, however, of the railroad issues checked the improving tendency, with irregularity developing so far as the industrials were concerned and real weakness in respect to some of the prominent rails.

GUARANTY BANKING

2. The Guaranty Plan

Should automobiles be sold on time you ask?

Take sales at retail for instance, for even the most conservative banker approves of the application of ordinary commercial credit to wholesale transactions involving the purchase and sale of automobiles as well as any other new standard merchandise.

Installment banking, to be sound, must be premised upon identifiable merchandise, insured against practically all the hazards that inhere in the transaction, sold to individuals who establish adequate equity by substantial down-payment, and who have credit responsibility undoubtedly sufficient for the debt involved. The entire debt should be completely liquidated in a period considerably shorter than the useful life of the merchandise bought.

The Guaranty Plan is available only on standard makes of cars, produced by manufacturers of ample capital. Of course, every car is identifiable through serial and motor numbers.

The purchaser is required to pay down one-third the price of the car or more and to pay for insurance against fire, theft and conversion. This insurance is for the protection of all parties as their interests may appear.

Each purchaser must submit a signed statement and other proof of his ability to pay. His general credit standing is investigated.

Monthly payments on passenger cars may not exceed ten months, so that they far more than keep pace with depreciation. The average life of motor cars is four and three-quarter years.

Convincing proof of the economic soundness of the Guaranty Plan is provided in the collection record extending from the inception of the business to the present time.

Charts showing these collections will be gladly sent any bank or other investor.

All bad and doubtful debts have been charged off up to August 31, 1917. Of more than $39,000,000. of paper bought to date losses have amounted to $29,516.05. $32,498,236.09 of this paper has matured, $32,451,142.40 has been paid.

Should automobiles be sold on time? Indiscriminately, no. Under restrictions that yield the foregoing results, emphatically—yes.

Based on such paper there are issued Collateral Trust Securities maturing in from 2 to 10 months, which have been purchased by the foremost banks throughout the U. S. to a total of $30,214,000.

May we send you our new booklet in which are presented in detail the full facts relating to this form of investment? It discusses such topics as the following:

Self Liquidation; Maturities;
Margin of Security; Volume of Paper;
Insurance Protection; 10,000 Name Paper;
Collection Record of Underlying Collateral;
Vocational Diversification of Underlying Names;
Geographical Distribution of Underlying Names;
Credit Check on Underlying Collateral.

Since the publication many months ago of our circular entitled
we have from time to time issued special analyses on the stock of certain railroads and allied industries whose earnings and prospects we believed to be particularly susceptible to the adverse conditions prevailing among the roads.
The last of these analyses was .. months ago and presented of the Delaware & Hudson Co.
We have now prepared for free distribution a special paper giving the result of a careful examination of the financial status of the Pullman Company
Copies may be had upon request.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday..5¼@5½ per cent. for the best names
Saturday..5¼@5½ " " " " "
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Percale Prices Cause Surprise.

The action of one of the leading printers of cotton goods in making Spring prices on percales on bases 3 cents a yard higher than those asked for the same goods last year and a cent a yard above prices recently current apparently came as something of a shock to the jobbing trade. While higher prices had been looked for in view of the advanced position of cotton and increased manufacturing costs generally, it is doubtful if a rise as large as the one that took place was expected. A prominent jobbing buyer of these goods would not comment yesterday on the advance beyond saying that "they've got us up in the air, all right."

Women's Necks Now Larger.

An odd fact disclosed by the return to favor of high collared waists for women is that the average woman's neck is larger than it used to be. Whereas, years ago, when every woman wore high-necked waists or frocks, the collar sizes ranged from 11½ to 13 inches, now, after a few years of low-necked freedom, the sizes most called for are between 13 and 14½ inches. As a result, buyers and manufacturers have had to strike a new average neck size.

Dark Silk for Fall Not Unusual.

Speaking of the popular notion that the war in its varied phases is responsible for the demand for the darker colors in silks, a local mill agent says: "There is nothing unusual about the call for dark shades this Fall. They have always prevailed at this time of the year. The war has had no material influence on the trend of trade in this respect, even though some Americans are at the front and others are on their way. What is more, victory does not call for sombre colors, and victory is coming back with the American forces."

Says Coat-Dress Is Fad.

The coat-dress, a development of the season which is said to be attracting more attention throughout the West and Middle West than in the East, is nothing more than a passing fad, according to several manufacturers of this city. "Its appeal," points out one authority in the trade, "is necessarily confined to women of some means, and for them, even, is practical only in Fall and Spring when the heat has been turned off in the house and it's not quite cold enough out-of-doors for a coat. At such times, a warm frock is welcome. But, ordinarily, it is too warm for house wear and too heavy for service under a coat."

Something New in Suits Needed.

"If these suit people don't do something startling pretty soon," a local retailer of prominence was heard to remark recently, "they are going to find their business gone to pot. Women will be wearing coats and dresses, or coat-dresses, or anything else they can get with some degree of novelty about it. If you want to hold women as customers, you have got to keep giving them new ideas all the time. And if your ideas happen to be a little in advance of the styles, you will have them for life."

Flower Novelties for Fall.

Among the flower novelties that are now being brought here to trim women's hats are embossed effects in appliqué roses, in silk and velvet combinations on backgrounds of black silk velvet. With them are used light and dark leaves. Steel and antique gold metal flowers also are seen, sometimes combined with small silk moss roses and velvet and metal leaves. Long, narrow wreaths are included in the showings, as well as being used with tiny velvet and metal vine leaves and small metallic buds. Several colors are seen in each wreath.

Burlaps Stocks Depleted.

Active trading in the last week has practically denuded the local market of all kinds of burlaps, particularly the heavier ones. As a result, not only are prices very high on goods that can still be had, but business is practically nil. In addition to the lack of merchandise, the delays in cabling and the irregularity of foreign mails also are giving traders something to worry about. Late reports from the primary market say that Dundee is very high, with very little goods left to ship during the remainder of the year. From Calcutta comes word that the exchange situation, if anything, is worse. These were the prices quoted on standard 40-inch burlaps here yesterday, some of them being nominal because of the shortage of goods: 10½-ounce, 15½ cents; 10-ounce, 15.15 cents; 8-ounce, 11¼ cents, and 7½-ounce, 11.10 cents.

Wash Fabrics Sales Large.

Reports that have come from sellers of white goods, telling of unusually heavy advance sales for Spring, apparently are not worrying wholesalers of wash goods any, for they tell the same story. Not only are the men now out with these goods said to be sending back orders calling for more dollars and cents than did those of a year ago, but they are said also to call for a greater yardage than was contained in the early orders of a year ago. Novelty effects in printed cottons are selling almost on sight, while no fault can be found with the movement of ginghams, especially some of the newer large-plaid dress ginghams. One of the nice features of the demand is the almost general call for the better grades of goods, notwithstanding the advanced prices.

Advance Dress Goods Sales.

Wholesalers with men on the road with Spring lines report an excellent advance business in dress goods, with the orders received so far well ahead of those taken at this time last year. Not only is the demand varied, but retailers in all parts of the country are buying. The big factors in current business are French serge weave Scotch plaids, which are selling freely at wholesale on the basis of 72½ cents, net, for 42-inch goods. Fifty-four-inch domino velours in large black and white block effects also are selling well for immediate delivery. These goods are jobbed at prices which will permit profitable retailing at $2.50 to $3 a yard. One of the big local jobbers announced yesterday the disposal of the last of a 15,000-piece lot of brocades, which is an indication of the position of these cloths.

Gray Goods Sales Pick Up.

The local gray goods market opened yesterday with a pretty fair demand at full prices. One of the features of the day's business in printcloths was a sale of 5,000 pieces of 38½-inch 64-60s at 9¾ cents for this year's delivery. Other lots of these goods also were disposed of, and it is estimated that the sales for the day totaled close to 15,000 pieces. Most of the mills were firm in their demands for 11¼ cents for this year's deliveries of 39-inch 68-72s, but it is understood that some business was done on them yesterday at an eighth under that figure. Sales of 38½-inch 60-48s and 60-52s were reported for 1917 shipment at the prices given below. The sheetings inquiry was confined chiefly to the kinds available for bag uses. These included 40-inch 4.25s at 10½ cents, and 3.50s at 12¼ cents. Printcloth prices closed this way for first-hand spots:

LARGE DROP IN EXPORTS.

$177,463,507 at This Port in August Against $271,380,156 in June.

Embargo restrictions and inadequate tonnage combined to bring about a big slump in exports from the District of New York in August. A report made public yesterday by Collector Byron R. Newton, showing the month's outward movement by grand divisions and countries, showed total exports of $177,463,507, against $208,868,970 in July and $271,380,156 in June. Shipments to Europe made an especially poor showing in August, their value being placed at only $131,498,976, compared with $156,324,128 in July and $211,505,713 in June. European shipments in August were far below those of the corresponding month one year ago, when the movement reached $219,438,566.

August, the first full month in which the export licensing system was in effect, was expected to show a tremendous curtailment in exports to the neutral countries of Europe. This anticipation, so far as the Port of New York was concerned, was not realized, as the Netherlands, Spain, and Sweden actually shipped more merchandise from here than in June, the last full month before the licensing plan was put in operation.

The Collector's report showed that whereas in June the Netherlands' exports fro mhere amounted to $1,847,691, they jumped in August, when licenses were required, to $5,534,132; Spanish shipments, from $2,486,605 in June to $2,720,541 in August, and even Swedish purchases from $1,058,637 to $1,063,683 in August. There was, however, a notable drop in exports to Norway in August, their value being officially returned at $2,161,316, against $7,547,826 in June. American shipments from here to Denmark, which in June reached the high figure of $4,802,202, fell in August to $948,721. August Swiss shipments amounted to $726,852, against $1,178,788 in June.

Supplies leaving here for England and France in August declined, when compared with July, while both Italy and Russia exported more merchandise in August than in the month before. Exports to England in August aggregated $46,064,999, against $58,167,492 in July, while French shipments, which in July had been up to $45,936,123, were only $31,369,030 in August. Cargoes out of this port for Russia in Europe in August were manifested at $19,294,626, besides railroad and military equipment sent to Siberian ports worth $1,285,888. Italy's August shipments were valued at $16,886,176, against $12,849,201 in July. Relief supplies for Belgium carried out of this port in August totaled over half a million dollars. Nothing was shipped to Austria-Hungary, Germany, Turkey, Serbia, or Montenegro.

The action of the Exports Board in denying licenses for the export of steel plates and other shipbuilding material destined for Japan resulted in trade from here to that country being cut in August one-half, compared with June, the last full month of unrestricted trade. The figures were: August $644,690 and June $1,380,194.

THE COMING FUR SALE.

Larger Offerings Than Last Year at the Auction Here.

Offerings at the forthcoming sale of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, which will be held in Masonic Hall, beginning Oct. 15, will be larger than those at the Fall auction a year ago, in spite of the war and the consequent decreased importations of foreign skins. More than 1,300,000 pelts, embracing fifty-five varieties, and coming from practically every fur-producing country in the world, will be put under the hammer by J. Gordon Noakes. In groups the furs to be offered will range all the way from two sea otter to 650,000 muskrat.

The quality of the offerings, as a whole, never ran better, according to William Zobel, executive manager of the corporation, and in view of the present scarcity of all of the most wanted furs in the finished state, it is expected that excellent prices will be obtained at the sale. It is further expected that the attendance will be even larger than at previous sales, which on several occasions exceeded 800.

It is the last of a large plottage acquired by the sellers about two years ago from the J. Hood Wright estate. The projected apartment will be one of the tallest in the upper Manhattan area.

In part payment the Mandelbaums took four six-story tenement structures at 421 to 427 West Fifty-third Street, the buildings being 25 by 115 each, the lots varying from 140 to 146 feet in depth. The tenements were built by Mr. Laul sixteen years ago.

Education Notes.

In reply to F. C. Hamilton, Treasurer of the Anti-Gary League, President Willcox of the Board of Education wrote that statements of economy in connection with the Gary plan had been published by William Wirt with reference to Gary, Ind., and not by the Board of Education of this city. The duplicate school, Mr. Willcox said, was being introduced in New York not primarily as an economic measure, but rather because it afforded means for providing a practical modern education for the children of this city.

Evening Elementary School 19, 344 East Fourteenth Street, is now open. There are classes to prepare for evening high school and for those who have not yet completed the work of the day school. There are also classes in sewing and dressmaking, millinery, and in embroidery. Special classes for foreigners offer a course in the English language and a course in history and civil government. Dancing and social activities will not be neglected.

The Board of Education, upon the recommendation of the Board of Superintendents, has again approved the course of study in hygiene, calling upon the class teacher to make a simple test of the pupil's vision and to discover through careful classroom observation other evident physical defects. The first week in October has been officially designated as the occasion when these tests and observations should be made. During the first week in March pupils registered since October should also be tested. A health day or week is a great time economizer. Time is saved for the teacher if early in the school year she becomes familiar with the physical defects of her children.

The Brooklyn Teachers' Association has issued a pamphlet announcing educational courses for 1917-8.

Most of the eighty-two evening elementary schools began their sessions last evening. Those in the Jewish sections of the city will open on Oct. 15.

The Teachers' Union will hold a mass meeting on Friday evening in the Washington Irving High School to discuss the question of salary increases.

LOYALTY SUPREME IN FUSION PLATFORM

Mayor Mitchel, It Declares, Measures Up to Intensely American Standard.

ADMINISTRATION INDORSED

Gary System, Special Service, and Police Are Highly Approved and Tammany Is Vigorously Attacked.

The Fusion Committee of 1917 made public last night the platform on which its candidates will run in the present municipal campaign. The platform emphasizes the necessity of keeping the Mayor in the City Hall "during a national crisis to which all other concern, public and private, are necessarily subordinate." The document states that the patriotic record of the present Fusion administration "is without parallel in the contemporaneous municipal history of the country."

The platform recites in brief the accomplishments of the present administration. The educational plank sets forth what has been done to give every child a seat in the public schools, and declares that the work of the so-called Gary system has so far proved successful, although the plan is not mentioned by name. The platform states that public service corporations have been vigorously handled, and that the city has been given a business administration. The Controller's "pay-as-you-go policy" is upheld, and it is stated that the entire Department of Public Charities has been rebuilt. Social service work is dwelt upon, and Mayor Mitchel's handling of the Police Department is extolled. Regarding the police, the platform says:

> Under the Fusion administration the police force has been divorced from politics. By a strong, straightforward policy the work of purging the department of its dishonest and inefficient minority has gone steadily forward with the co-operation of the honest and hardworking majority of the force. Lawlessness has been curbed, the gangs have disappeared, gunmen have fled the city or gone to jail, bomb outrages have stopped, public prostitution and gambling have been reduced, corrupt partnership of the police with crime and the levying of tribute upon legitimate business has been destroyed and ended. If Mayor Mitchel is re-elected Commissioner Woods will be retained in office. If Tammany is returned to power police debauchery and incompetence will again disgrace New York.

Under the heading "The Supreme Issue," the platform says

> Our country is at war with Germany. Every conception of justice and liberty for which our forefathers fought, and which brought our foreign-born citizens to our shores, is at issue in the struggle. Our country must win. Organized municipalities must do their part, and it is a large part. They can do so only under governments of the highest capacity, greatest strength and energy, and fearless outspoken loyalty. They must not be controlled or influenced by enemy sympathizers, or by discontented elements, nor must they be administered by the untried, the incompetent, or by those whose hesitation and evasion leave doubt of complete devotion to the cause for which the great body of our citizens, native and foreign born, are making supreme sacrifices. To maintain order within, to co-operate with the Federal Government against the menace from without, to detect intrigue, to suppress violence, to hold together the social and economic services of its citizens, the government of the great City of New York must be strong, capable, intelligent, experienced, alert and, above all, intensely loyal and intensely American. The city government under Mayor Mitchel and the Fusion Administration now measures up to this high standard. "It is not best," said Lincoln, "to swap horses while crossing a stream."

The platform sets forth what Mayor Mitchel has accomplished in the field of national preparedness and praises his organization of the Mayor's Defense Committee and the Home Defense League. The platform states that Fusion proposes to bend every resource toward helping the citizens through their personal difficulties caused by the war. Under the title "The Future Under Fusion" the platform says in part:

> The development of the city's educational facilities will go forward with increased effectiveness.
> Fusion believes in more parks and playgrounds; in increasing milk stations and public health works; in the establishment of great public wholesale terminal markets; in the maintenance of public employment bureaus and of pensions for widows with dependent children.
> Fusion proposes an expansion of municipal ownership by eliminating the private water companies and by the progressive acquisition of electrical conduits. Fusion will continue co-operation with the other municipalities of the State through the State Conference of Mayors, to the end that home rule may be secured by cities and unjust burdens lifted. Fusion is committed to the comprehensive development of the Port of New York. In the past four years it has added more dockage than any other previous administration.
> An essential detail of such development is the relocation of the New York Central Railroad along the west side of the Borough of Manhattan. For the sake of the city's food supply, for the sake of its manufacturing supremacy, and for the protection of its citizens on the public highways, a solution must be found and found without delay. Fusion will co-operate with the Public Service Commission to find such a solution, and failing, to exercise effective compulsion on the company. Fusion believes in the most liberal degree of borough autonomy consistent with effective organization and serviceable government.

The platform includes an attack upon Tammany Hall, in which it says:

> The alternative offered to the voters is a return to Tammany misrule. Against this we vehemently protest. Tammany in successive administrations brought the city to the verge of financial ruin, debauched the police force, permitted and even exploited vice and crime, neglected the welfare and comfort of citizens, substituted favoritism for service, and in an abandon of greed and evil practices so outraged the public conscience that it was driven from power in a normally Democratic city. It is now eight years since Tammany has been permitted unrestricted rule.

The management of the District Attorney's office under the present incumbent is cited as what Tammany will do if he gets into power. It states that the office "has been prostituted" and that "partisanship has run riot."

"It is increasingly plain," the platform concludes, "that every element, every faction, every individual in the City of New York who is opposed to the vigorous prosecution of the war—opposed to the maintenance of strong, energetic, alert government in the city during the war—is sought by Tammany as an ally."

PLACE BENNETT'S NAME ON REPUBLICAN BALLOT

Justice Whitaker Signs Order With the Consent of Counsel on Both Sides.

Supreme Court Justice Whitaker yesterday signed an order with the consent of counsel for Mayor Mitchel and William M. Bennett requiring the name of Mr. Bennett to be placed upon the ballot as the Republican candidate for Mayor of New York. Both sides agreed to waive all formalities in order that the ballots of the soldiers might be sent to all army camps in this country and abroad in time for the November election. When the matter came before the Justice, Abraham S. Gilbert, for the Mayor, said he consented to the entry of an order requiring that Mr. Bennett's name be printed on the ballots.

Assistant District Attorneys Neilson Olcott and James E. Wallace, in charge of the investigation into alleged frauds in the Republican primaries, announced yesterday that they would present to the Grand Jury today seven distinct cases involving twenty-eight election officials, where it is alleged there were discrepancies between the tally sheets turned in to the Board of Elections and the recent recount figures.

What appears to be the most flagrant violation, according to Mr. Wallace, occurred in the Fifth Election District of the Seventeenth Assembly District. On the original tally sheets he said Bennett received only 5 votes and Mitchel 42. The recount showed that Bennett received 24 and Mitchel 20 votes. The other districts where there were discrepancies follow:

| Assembly and Election District. | Discrepancy. |
|---|---|
| Fourteenth—Thirty-first | 23 votes |
| Sixteenth—Fifteenth | 27 votes |
| Seventeenth—Fourth | 18 votes |
| Seventeenth—Twenty-ninth | 20 votes |
| Eighteenth—Seventh | 34 votes |
| Eighteenth—Twenty-eighth | 30 votes |

District Attorney Swann yesterday subpoenaed the ballot boxes, ballot clerks' return and official list of inspectors. The boxes, except when taken before the Grand Jury, will remain in the custody of Commissioner Boyle of the Board of Elections.

District Attorney Harry E. Lewis of Brooklyn said yesterday that he intended to examine inspectors from eight election districts in that borough about the recent primary. It was learned that he had received a formal complaint of irregularities, but he would not give the name of the person who made the complaint, nor would he tell what districts he would subpoena the inspectors from.

Delegations of several hundred young men from many Harlem clubs, all within the Seventeenth Assembly District, met last night at Westminster Hall and formed an official City Democracy organization for that district. Bernard H. Reich, former member of the Executive Committee of the Tammany Club of the district, was chosen executive member. Abe A. Burger, former President of the College Speakers' Union and member of the Tammany Hall Speakers' Bureau, was elected President of the club.

With the slogan, "The same business for the same business office," the committee which will conduct the campaign for the re-election of Marcus M. Marks for President of the Borough of Manhattan opened headquarters yesterday in the Vanderbilt Building, 51 East Forty-second Street. The committee is composed of 1,000 business men, and Charles E. Hughes is Honorary Chairman. The active work of the campaign will be conducted by Louis Annin Ames as Chairman, William A. Ferguson as Secretary, and Fred A. Mack as Treasurer.

NEED GARY SYSTEM, THE MAYOR SAYS

Some Defects, He Adds, Have Been Deliberately Caused to Wreck Experiment.

Mayor Mitchel championed the Gary school system and the other educational and charitable activities of his administration in a speech delivered yesterday afternoon at the dedication of the Children's Clearing Bureau in the Bronx. This bureau is housed in what was formerly the Messiah Home, established by Mrs. H. H. Rogers, widow of the Vice President of the Standard Oil Company, and will be used as a receiving and distributing station for dependent children. Children in need of treatment will be kept there from one to six weeks before being sent to orphanages and various other institutions.

"We have undertaken to democratize, if I may use that word, the educational facilities, in order that the children in our public schools may have the same facilities, the same advantages, and the same opportunities as have hitherto been accorded only to the children of the well-to-do in the expensive private schools," said Mr. Mitchel. "The playground, the workshop, the auditorium, the science room, these things are necessary to develop child opportunity and child life, to let physical development go hand in hand with the mental development in order that the mental development may be quicker and better.

"Do you think that those men in the great array of manhood on that western front of Europe could hold back the onrush of those forces of aggression and autocracy as they have done if there had not been a virile childhood in France, in England, in Italy, and in the other allied nations? Do you think that if America had not concerned herself with her childhood that we would be able to send abroad, as we are doing today, great armies of the Republic, to take their places by those others and to protect this country from what otherwise might come to her shores?"

A great crowd of several thousand persons had gathered in the vacant space adjoining the Children's Clearing Bureau, at West Tremont and Andrews Avenues, and they applauded the Mayor frequently. Mayor Mitchel praised the work that had been done in the Department of Charities by Commissioner John A. Kingsbury and William J. Doherty, the Second Deputy Commissioner, who sat, with a large number of city officials and prominent men, on the platform. He told of what his administration had accomplished in the field of "direct charity," and of what had been done toward introducing cleanliness, efficiency, and kindliness into the administration of the institutions housing public charges. Referring to the quarrel with some of the Catholic charities several years ago he said:

"Let me say that, although we began in misunderstanding, in opposition, and in obstruction, those institutions today are co-operating with the Department of Charities. Today they conform to the standard. Today the care is good. Today the 23,000 children housed in them are getting the care to which they are entitled at the hands of the great City of New York."

MAYOR WILL FIGHT, HE TELLS CITIZENS

lignant influences are seeking to destroy you; but we know you and we know your enemies, and it is because we know you and we know your enemies that we want you to run again for Mayor. We are here because we believe in non-partisan municipal administration. You are the incarnation of that principle.

"With rare fidelity, with intelligence, and expertness highly trained by many years of service in this community you have raised the standards of administration. Every department shows the benefit of your untiring and unselfish work. Whether it is health or police or education, or the care of children, or just the interests of labor or of civic improvement, or better facilities for our expanding life in whatever direction we look we find here recorded the finest accomplishment.

"New York is no longer a by-word among cities of the United States by reason of its government. New York today holds up her head not only among the cities of the United States, but among the cities of the world, as a well governed city, and it is because of your devotion to these standards of administration, and of what you have accomplished, that we want you to run again for Mayor.

"Tammany Hall is the same old sinister organization. It plays new tricks, but it has the old predatory purpose. It selects now a mixture of ignorance, incompetence, and of demagogery, which is an insult to the intelligence of the people of this city. We do not propose to turn over the interests of this great town to that old enemy of all that makes for municipal good government and for civic righteousness—that old enemy of the municipal honor. But there is a deeper reason than all that? We are at war. Seditious and traitorous influences are seeking to benumb our activities at a time when they should show the full strength of the united people. They are seeking to poison public sentiment; they are seeking to paralyze the arm of government; this is a time when every one who is opposed to the efficient and vigorous prosecution of this holy war is opposed to you, Sir."

Crowd Demands More.

The crowd expressed its approval of the speaker's opinion of Tammany, and yelled for more. In a clear voice, that carried well across the park, Mr. Hughes continued:

"We desire to have a clean, patriotic, stable, strong administration in these times. You, Sir, have been a patriotic Mayor. There has been no resource of this metropolis but what you have tried to organize in the interests of that great cause to which America is devoting herself with her wealth, and, with what is far more, the precious blood of her children. We are not going to have any experiments at this time. We are not going to turn over this town to any one whom we do not know. We know you. We know that we shall have a man tested, not a mere purveyor of words, a man whose deeds mark him, a man who stands before you well known, and one who will be unshaken by any threat, stable in his resolve, who will allow no ambition to deter him, no popular suggestion to seduce him—that is the man to be Mayor of New York when America is at war.

"I speak as a citizen opposed alike to ringster and demagogue. I also speak as a Republican. The Republican Party must be devoted to the cause of good government in the City of New York.

"I turn to you, Mr. Mayor, as a citizen. You, the virile defender of the American faith in the time of great national peril, must sacrifice your great personal interests and stand forth in this manly contest you are waging for honestly efficient government and for triumphant Americanism."

Ex-President Taft's Letter.

When he had finished, the crowd gave three rousing cheers for Mr. Hughes, and then Chairman Outerbridge read the following letter from ex-President Taft:

Sept. 30, 1917.

The Hon. Charles E. Hughes, 96 Broadway, New York City.

My Dear Governor Hughes: I am sorry I cannot be present at the noon meeting tomorrow called to support the candidacy of Mayor Mitchel for re-election. I am not a citizen of New York City, but every American is deeply interested that our greatest city should be well governed. We all know that in the past under Tammany it has been badly governed. During his term Mr. Mitchel has wrought a great change and now our greatest city is the best governed. There is now no "pull" with the police. They know no interest but that of the public.

If the people of New York have saving common sense and governing capacity they should elect a man for a second term who has accomplished so much for them, the city, and the country in his first term. He has made enemies, but when their motives are dissected, their enmity does Mr. Mitchel honor. His zeal and effective appeals in behalf of proper preparation for this war have solidified against him those who are opposed to the war. At this time such opposition furnishes a strong additional argument for the Mayor's re-election, if any were needed. But the great and overwhelming reason for continuing the Mayor in office is that he has done what he was elected to do, and what many thought it impossible to do. It is no easy task to govern New York well with every circumstance favorable. It is a wonderful triumph to have effected the reforms needed in one term.

But the Mayor has been defeated in a Republican primary, and it is said that party regularity requires Republicans to vote for the candidate who in that primary, in a very small party vote, received a few hundred majority. I hope the Republicans of New York who believe in good municipal government and recognize how much the Mayor has done to maintain it will not allow the cry of party regularity to prevent their voting their convictions and for the best man. It is difficult to conceive of circumstances under which the plea of party regularity should have less weight than in this election.

It is said that Mr. Mitchel cannot be elected, and that Republicans should vote for the nominee of the party. My belief is that, even if it were certain that Mr. Mitchel would be defeated—as it is not—good citizens, moved only by a desire for good government, should vote for him. It is better to go down to defeat with the right candidate than to vote for an indifferent or an unknown aspirant. Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Henry Morgenthau was next introduced, and he got a laugh when he said he had thrown his hat on the steps and that Colonel Roosevelt was going to hold it. Mr. Morgenthau made this reference to the recent primaries:

"Mr. Mayor, there has been a great deal of talk and excitement about primaries. There has been a terrible miscarriage, but fortunately the strict party primaries are not the last word, and we are going to hold a primary right here in the open, and we are going to nominate Mitchel for another term in the Mayor's office. If this assembly, and the tone of the New York press speaks for anything, it is showing us what the result will be on Nov. 6."

The Monster of Tammany.

Mr. Morgenthau said he had just returned from France and had seen Alsace-Lorraine. A hush fell upon the crowd as he described his experiences there, saying:

"I have seen that fearful German monster, the line from Mülhausen to Ypres. I have seen it lying there, trying to destroy the freedom of France and England. That monster could not have been created were it not that the Kaiser has a life tenure of office, and has directed and arranged this thing for years past. I come back here and I find that the Tiger, though thin and emaciated, is ready to jump on us again. The Tiger is, but the American Kaiser. The autocrat of Tammany Hall seeks a like tenure. He works in the dark. He is trying to destroy us.

"If I read the sentiment of New York correctly I do not believe that they will allow any American Kaiserism to grow up in our midst. If I could show you what it means, if I could bring it home to you, what a terrible catastrophe has occurred in Europe, you would realize that as the first step to defend ourselves—we don't care who is to blame for opening that cage and letting the Tiger loose—we as a great city have to shut it and completely stop the Tiger from ever again being at freedom here. Mr. Mitchel, I have not only come here to urge you to accept this nomination, I have come to congratulate you that you have been honored to lead this great host of right-thinking citizens, irrespective of party affiliations, to this great victory which I see on Nov. 6."

George B. McGuire, the next speaker, said he had come as a representative of one of the largest organizations in the State of New York, but that was as far as got, when a cry went up for the Colonel.

"Teddy, Teddy! Give us Teddy!" came from all parts of the crowd. With a wide grin, the Colonel waved his campaign hat and shouted: "Please wait. I will speak to you in a minute."

Mr. McGuire made his speech short. He told Mr. Mitchel that he was the only Mayor for the last ten years who had given organized labor representation on the different boards, and then read a letter he had received from Charles E. Russell. In this letter Mr. Russell expressed regret that he was not able to take part in the demonstration for the Mayor. He said the Mayor's administration has been so incontestably superior to anything the city had ever known that, if nothing else were involved but efficient government, every good citizen must support him. The fight had been made upon him, he declared, simply because he "has been American and stood for the American faith and cause." Every vote cast against the Mayor, he wrote, was a vote for Germany against the United States.

"Pro-Germans have made the issue," Mr. Russell's letter concluded, "and let every American meet it like an American, face to face."

Jacob H. Schiff sent a telegram to the Mayor saying that while he could not be present he wished to state that he was for his re-election.

Oscar Straus was then introduced and an outburst of applause followed when he said: "Mr. Mayor, Candidate Bennett says that the people of New York have repudiated the Mitchel administration. See the evidence of that repudiation before us." Mr. Straus said he only wanted to mention that he had lived in the city for the last forty years and that the Mitchel administration has been the best the city has ever known. Colonel Roosevelt's turn came next, and any one could see that he was anxious to get into the fray.

"I come here to say a word for a fighting Mayor of fighting stock," began the Colonel with a swing of the arm. "I come here to say a word for the man whom every Hun and Shadow-Hun in New York hates with the utmost bitterness."

Colonel Roosevelt's Speech.

The crowd yelled for the Colonel and Mitchel. The speaker went on to pay a compliment to the police, and then paid this one to the Mayor:

"I know what I am saying when I say that during the last half century of municipal government, as to which I am prepared to speak, we have never had as good an administration as this of Mayor John Purroy Mitchel. The man serves his party best who makes that party an instrument for serving the country well, and every man, of whatever party, Democratic, Republican, Socialist Labor, every man who in the open backs Mayor Mitchel is by just so much helping his party organization. I ask you to stand by John Purroy Mitchel because he is the best Mayor we have ever had, but I ask you to stand by him because he stands in this city as the foremost, the most fearless, the most uncompromising embodiment of the American spirit.

"There is nothing fifty-fifty about his patriotism. He is straight United States. Nobody has any doubt where he stands, and there is no pussy-footing around. Sometimes they say, 'He is a good American, but not enough a one to hurt any one else's feelings.' That is not the way with Mitchel.

"John Purroy Mitchel stands for moral courage and for physical courage. He stands for entire disinterestedness. I have watched him close up, and I know that of which I speak when I say that he has scornfully tossed to one side any appeal whatever that could be made to him from the standpoint of his own interests or his own future. He has had but two purposes in view—first, to serve the city in executive office, and next to serve all of us by serving the nation as an American citizen and patriot. I ask you to see that we put in for another term in office the man who has given New York the best municipal administration it has ever had, and the man who now in New York stands foremost as an embodiment of the spirit of true Americanism."

The Colonel had the gathering on its toes, and it applauded him vigorously when he gave way to Mayor Mitchel.

Mayor Mitchel's Speech.

Mayor Mitchel spoke as follows:

"Judge Hughes, Colonel Roosevelt, Mr. Morgenthau, Mr. Straus, Mr. McGuire, Fellow-Citizens: I was warned, gentlemen, of your intention to come here this morning, and I am ready to answer you. [Cries of "Good boy!"]

"It would be idle for me to pretend, however, that I am not deeply moved by the tribute of this great outpouring, or that I do not feel genuinely grateful for the splendid words spoken by Judge Hughes, Colonel Roosevelt, Mr. Straus, Mr. Morgenthau, and Mr. McGuire, in commendation of the work that I have striven to do in these four years of labor as Mayor, to make the government of New York clean, capable, and strong, a credit to the city, and an asset to the nation. [Applause and cheers.]

"Gentlemen, you have come here to the City Hall—I see some of you from every borough of the city, and from every walk of life—to ask me to perform what you regard as a public service, a difficult service, a burdensome service. You ask me to offer myself directly to the people of the city, without partisan choice or party nomination, as a candidate for Mayor, in order that those who believe in honest and efficient government, in non-partisanship in municipal affairs, in the recognition of social obligations, that the community owes to all its citizens; and in particular to the destitute and to the derelict in a strongly American city government, untainted by sedition, uninfluenced and uninfluenceable by sympathy with the national enemy; may have the opportunity to commit the powers of government for these next critical four years to men who have demonstrated by their record and by their performances that they will discharge that duty solely in the interests of the people of this city, and in the interests of the people of the nation. [Applause.]

Did Not Seek Re-election.

"Gentlemen, I will make direct and positive reply. First let me emphasize the present situation. Now, once again and for the last time, I hope, in this campaign, I say, to the people of New York, I neither sought nor wanted re-election to the office of Mayor, but when it was put to me that to refuse to run meant the scattering of the Fusion forces and the surrender of this city to the plundering hand of Murphy and to the treacherous tongue and mind of Hearst, [applause,] then, my friends, then I waived my personal desires and my personal plans and consented to become the candidate for the office.

"Now, I hardly expect from a public that knows nothing of the tremendous burdens and obligations of the Mayoralty, of its bitter disappointments, of its great obstacles, in prejudice and in ignorance and in misrepresentation, to believe that any one would really wish to lay down this office; but those who urged me to this thing know that what I say is true, that immediately there began the expression of partisan disgruntlement, of individual self-seeking, and of those influences which seek to tear down self-government in the interests of the most insidious enemy that this nation or any nation ever knew.

"As the instrument, as the instrument of all those forces, the unwitting instrument, no doubt, Mr. Bennett put himself forward as a candidate for Mayor in the Republican primary. But 17 per cent. of the enrolled Republican vote was cast for Mr. Bennett, but on that he stands selected as the nominal candidate of the Republican Party, on strict partisan grounds. Stupidity, neglect, treachery, or perhaps all three, contributed to the failure to bring out a substantial Republican vote on Primary Day, and, what is much more serious, frauds apparently were committed in some districts in my interest, which I have found it my duty to remedy through a judicial proceeding in order that Mr. Bennett may have the nomination to which this scant vote entitles him.

Defines the Situation.

"This then is the situation. Three candidates are in the field. New York is offered Hylan, the nominee of Murphy and of Hearst—Hylan, the candidate of Untermyer and his kind, who out of an association with Duma and von Bernstorff, and their like, raise their heads [A Voice: Give it to them] to spit venom at any one who takes a strong stand for America against Germany. Hylan, the hope of Tammany Hall for the plunder and the patronage which mean its re-establishment in this city for a decade! Hylan, so much the creature of the Boss, of his joint bosses, that he cannot even answer questions without waiting four hours to consult with them. [Laughter.] Or, we may turn to the candidacy of Mr. Hillquit, avowed Socialist and Pacifist, avowed opponent of military service and of this war, avowed advocate of a national prostration, of helplessness, whose nostrums and whose program would leave New York at the end of a single year tax-burdened to the point of ruin, and bankrupt in her credit.

Bennett's Hopeless Candidacy.

"Or, we may turn to the hopeless candidacy of Mr. Bennett, chronic candidate, objector to everything and everybody, suddenly dragged into a candidacy through the laziness and neglect of the great body of his party, through the resentments over insufficient patronage on the part of a small group of machine politicians, and through the protest against true American city government on the part of enemy sympathizers.

"Now, gentlemen, you are here, I take it, to say to me that the people of New York must not be compelled to choose from among these three. [Cries of "Right!"] You are here, I take it, to ask me to submit to you for re-election an administration of constructive record and of demonstrated loyalty. As a citizen of New York, who loves his native city, as one who believes in effective, serviceable government; as one devoted to the principle of nonpartisanship in municipal affairs, but, above all, as an American citizen, [applause,] dedicated to the support of President Wilson and the National Government [applause.] in the successful prosecution of this war to a victorious issue, [applause]—as such, my duty admits of no debate. Gentlemen, my answer to you is that I will run. [Applause.]

(Cries of "And be elected, too"; "They can't beat you, kid"; "The Bronx is with you, too"; "We'll elect you if we have to work all night, don't worry.")

Names Those He Will Fight.

"Gentlemen, I will run, and will make the fight against Hearst, Hylan, and the Hohenzollerns. (Applause.) Against Murphy, Cohalan, O'Leary, and all the Tammany crowd; against the corruptionists; against the disaffected; against the obstructionists, and against the seditionists—against all those who would throw this city back into the corruption of police debauchery and graft, bad service, slovenly government, brutality and waste, which has characterized every Tammany administration that this city ever had.

"My fellow citizens, the record of this administration is the reason for its re-election, is its title to the confidence of the people of New York. We have recast the administration of the great services of government. We have made good the pledge of a business-like government in this city. We have cut down the cost of administration and kept at bedrock of the total of the city's budget. The budgets of the great departments under the jurisdiction of the Mayor were for 1917 a million dollars and a half below the budgets of those departments for 1914, when I inherited them from my predecessor; and if it were not for the war prices and the cost of living resulting from the war we would close this administration with a budget for the last year well within that of 1914.

"But, my friends, I would not be so proud of our record of saving and of cost reduction, did it not go hand in hand with extended and with better service, because that alone is sound economy, to serve while saving; as well or better than before. For the first time in this city's history, our administration closes with the public proud of its police department, and of its record. [Applause.] Gentleman, that department has not been free from grave and stupid blunders, but it has been lifted out of politics. The partnership with crime is ended. Thugs and gunmen have fled the city. Petty persecutions are no more.

Proud of the Police.

"Crime is less, disorder is absent. The men are organized, trained, prepared, as never before in this city's history, to quell disorder, to protect persons and property, and to maintain the public peace. We are proud of them.

"Commerce has been conserved to the development of port facilities; our streets are cleaner than they were, through better methods and more constant labor; our highways are better lighted at a lower cost; through preventive measures we have reduced the loss from fire; our parks are better kept, and yet their use as great playgrounds for the people has been extended, and will be still more extended in the future. The employes of the City of New York are more equitably and liberally treated than they have ever been, and new avenues of opportunity have been opened to them. My administration has fought consistently to reduce the rates of public service corporations. Some we have reduced and others we are still fighting to reduce.

"In the field of social service our record is exceptional. Here we have open a new era in administration. Public charity has been humanized. No longer does the city permit its feeble-minded wards, after the Tammany fashion, to be herded like cattle in a pen. No longer are they squalid, vermin-laden, infected with disease by contact with each other. No longer are they underclothed and underfed, or exposed to fire hazards in the top stories of death traps, beaten; the city treats these today like human beings. At this instant there is rising on the ashes of the old Randall's Island an institution that will challenge comparison with any in the world.

"No longer does the city neglect its public wards. Today it demands a standard of maintenance and care commensurate with the public funds it pays out. Beginning with opposition and obstruction, the Department of Charities today has the co-operation of these institutions. No longer are these children allowed to remain filty, unhappy, overworked, sitting for long hours on hard-back benches without recreation. Today the city discharges its duty to these little ones, recognizing that common humanity demands that it stand toward these, in such circumstances that they are torn from their own relatives, in the relation of a kind of gentle foster-parent. So likewise with those who are committed to our penal institutions. Not content, as Tammany has ever been in the past, to feed and house them and to hold them herded like swine in foul-smelling, germ-laden cells, we have sought to take them out into the country where healthy labor, friendly and humane and decent treatment will build up moral character to send them back into the community fit to begin life anew.

"In the field of health service we have undertaken to get constant education. That, coupled with better administration, has reduced the death rate from 14.21 a thousand in 1913 to 13.89 in 1916. In the field of public education we have supported with adequate preparations the plans and program of the Board of Education to furnish a full-time seat to every child in the city of New York for every school day, and a curriculum enriched by playground, auditorium, work in shop and science room."

"We have sought to encourage the Board of Education in its efforts to bring the children of all the people in the public schools the same advantages and opportunities that have hitherto been offered only to the children of the rich in expensive private schools. We have worked out and have obtained a fair and adequate pension system for the teacher. We have protected the future of New York by an ordinance restricting the use and limiting the height of buildings. We have at length obtained legislation to permit the establishment of a Department of Markets, to buy, to sell, to store food. We shall use that power to break the grip of the food monopolist, and to reduce the cost to the people of the City of New York.

"We have done battle with the Legislature to secure justice for New York. We have fought against unjust taxation, and have demanded a fair share of State support. Some we have secured. For the rest we shall fight on until we get it. We have battled, too, for municipal home rule, fortified by Constitutional guarantee. We made a good fight in the Constitutional Convention, and we shall fight for it at all times, and under all conditions, until we get it for New York.

"Gentlemen, fellow-citizens, this is a part of the record of this administration. What can Tammany Hall show to match it? The record of Tammany Hall has been a record of regulation and dishonor, of profligacy and of waste, of bad service, of broken promises, and of deceit. Mark this well: I do not supplicate the vote of any man. I stand upon the platform of my record in the service of the city, and in the service of the nation.

"That record is a challenge to the patriotism, to the conscience, and to the common sense of the people of this city. They will choose. If they prefer a government inspired by Murphy, Hearst, Cohalan, and the Kaiser they will vote for Mr. Hylan; if they prefer a government dedicated to pacifism and prostration, and following the phantasms of socialism, they will vote for Mr. Hillquit; if they wish to throw away their votes they will cast them for Mr. Bennett. For myself, I can promise what I have given in the past, an administration dedicated to service, conceived in honesty, guided by the principles of business, uncontrolled and unafraid, loyal always to America and to the ideals of America."

UNTERMYER REPLIES TO MAYOR

"I Cannot," He Says, "Permit Him to Assault My Patriotism."

Samuel Untermyer, when shown that part of Mayor Mitchel's speech referring to him, said:

"I noticed that the Mayor has opened his campaign by a false and malicious attack on me for having dared criticise his administration in my speech notifying Judge Hylan of his nomination. His insulting reference to me amounts in effect to a veiled assault upon my patriotism which I cannot and do not propose to permit to go unchallenged.

"It is most regrettable and almost inconceivable that the Mayor in his desperation at what I believe to be his impending repudiation should have permitted himself to indulge by innuendo in a gross and baseless slander. Nothing short of malice, because in the course of my professional duties as counsel for Senator Wagner before the Senate I had undertaken the cross-examination of the Mayor, (which was not concluded,) could have prompted such an unbelievably reckless charge, which he dared not make in words but conveyed by insinuation.

"What does he mean by my association with Dumba and Bernstorff? I never met either of them over three times in my life, and never sustained any social, business, or professional relation to either. It is not unlikely that socially or in the course of his public duties he was far better acquainted with one or both of them, which is nothing to his discredit. If it was disloyal for me, in common with many hundreds of our most distinguished fellow-citizens, including the President of the United States and the members of his Cabinet and many of the members of Congress, to have had acquaintance with these gentlemen when they were the accredited and honored envoys to our country from two great friendly powers, I, with them and perhaps with the Mayor, am guilty of that offense.

"In point of fact, throughout the European war and even before our country became involved I expressly declined all retainers from officials of foreign countries, although then under no national or professional duty to do so, having expressly in view that in the then improbable event of complications I would be under no obligations except to my own country.

"If the Mayor means to insinuate without daring to say so that I have not at all times taken a high, open, and patriotic stand with my country against its enemies, I challenge a comparison of his record with mine, which compels me briefly to refer to acts on my part which I would much have preferred to go unmentioned, but I will not permit him or any other man to question the depth of my love of country as an American-born citizen whose parents settled in this country over seventy years ago and were loyal American citizens. I have a son entered at Plattsburg as a volunteer, who abandoned his law practice to enter the service, having previously been a volunteer in a Western camp. He received his commission as a Captain in the field artillery, has been assigned to his regiment, and is now an instructor at the Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg. My daughter's husband is also now a volunteer at the Officers' Training Comp at Plattsburg, and others of my family are in active service. I was one of the first large subscribers to the Red Cross War Relief Fund, and subscribed $2,000,000 to the first Liberty Loan, and have done and am doing everything within my power, in and out of season, to promote the interests of my country in this war.

"Contrasting talk with acts and the Mayor's record with mine, what concrete thing has he done to prove his loyalty beyond eating expensive dinners and industriously seeking to at all times exploit his patriotism as a political asset? There is no reason why this campaign cannot be conducted on legitimate lines. The present city administration is on trial. Why not meet that issue? If Mayor Mitchel believes that the loyalty of every man who opposes him is or can be by him placed under suspicion with impunity he will soon find that he greatly underrates the sense of decency and intelligence of the people of this city.

"I venture to predict for him that if he continues on that tack he will lose, as he will deserve to lose, the support of the many estimable gentlemen who are now his champions. They cannot afford to stand idly by while he hurls blanket indictments at the hundreds of thousands of men who are unwilling to support him, as traitors to their country. In the name of common dencency and of the dignity of our great city as represented by its Chief Magistrate, let us have an end of this, now and here."

CALLS MAYOR A 'PUSSYFOOT'

Hylan Replies to Col. Roosevelt's Praise of Mayor Mitchel.

Judge John F. Hylan, the Tammany candidate for Mayor, in commenting last night upon the speech of Colonel Roosevelt, said:

"Colonel Roosevelt, at the meeting in the City Hall Plaza today, said: 'There is nothing fifty-fifty about John Purroy Mitchel. There is no pussyfooting about him.'

"I do not think Colonel Roosevelt would have made this statement if he had read all the newspapers printed in New York today. The newspapers printed in the English language carry a full page advertisement paid for by the Mitchel committee, in which the Mayor is pictured as a 'War Mayor who took a Plattsburg course and would like to be fighting in France right now.'

"In the page advertisement printed in the Jewish papers all reference to Mr. Mitchel as a war Mayor is omitted. Why does Mayor Mitchel proclaim himself as a war Mayor to one group of our citizens and omit all reference to war in talking to another group? To my mind this is about as near a fifty-fifty proposition as you can get. If it is not pussyfooting, I would like to know what it is.

"I regard this as a cowardly insult to the Jewish people of this city, whose patriotism has been as well demonstrated as Mr. Mitchel's."

Judge Hylan yesterday sent a letter to Benjamin Strong, Chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee, inviting that body to send its speakers to the many Democratic meetings which will be held during the next few weeks. He also tendered the co-operation of the Democratic Fusion speakers in campaigning for the new loan.

FIND NEW INCOME TAX HARD TO ESTIMATE

Statisticians Here Puzzled by Large Number of Complications Entering Into Calculations.

Statisticians who were put at work yesterday morning by a number of banking houses in Wall Street had not been able to agree last night on the working of the new War Tax bill, which came up for final action in the House yesterday. The law, as proposed, is expected to raise $2,700,000,000, but it is confidently expected in banking circles that some of the alleged faults of the measure, particularly those in the excess profits section, as it would bear on a considerable class of small corporations, will be remedied before the measure is enacted. The income tax is probably settled, but its application involves so many complications that it is not clear to many persons what the net increase will amount to.

The new war income tax is an addition to the income tax law of Sept. 8, 1916, and the original normal tax of 2 per cent. is doubled. The rates carried by the old law and the new additions are given herewith:

Brooklyn Republicans for Mitchel.

The Executive Committee of the Brooklyn Young Men's Republican Club, in session last night, voted unanimously to support Mitchel, Prendergast, Adamson, and Pounds in the coming election. The club is in favor of the return of the present administration because "Mayor Mitchel has given the city the best government it has ever known, and because of his practical support of the Federal Government in this time of war."

MAYOR OPENS FIRE ON TAMMANY IN BATTLE FOR CITY

HITS MURPHY AND HEARST

POUNDS IS OUT FOR FUSION

Great Crowd in Brooklyn's Academy of Music Cheers His Pledge to Mitchel.

Opening his campaign at Cooper Union last night before a crowd that jammed the hall and yelled itself hoarse for him, Mayor Mitchel made a bitter attack upon William R. Hearst and Tammany Hall, and linked the names with that of the Hohenzollerns and the Hapsburgs. The crowd rose to wild enthusiasm when the Mayor declared that Murphy and Hearst were the joint candidates for Mayor against him, and when he charged that Murphy had remained silent on his close association with Justice Cohalan, Jeremiah O'Leary, and Hearst because these forces, he said, do not want a City Government that will back up President Wilson and the National Government in its conduct of the war.

During his speech there were shouts of "Hang Cohalan," and "Hang Hearst." Later on, in his speech before a crowd that filled the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, the Mayor was vigorously cheered when he said:

"Mr. Hearst puts the Star-Spangled Banner on the front page and tries to stab his country in the back in his editorial columns."

The crowd at Cooper Union was more orderly than the usual political gathering there and gave the Mayor close attention when for half an hour he outlined what had been accomplished by his administration and what he hoped to do if re-elected. The Mayor devoted much of his speech to answering a statement made by Charles F. Murphy earlier in the day. He did this, he said, because he couldn't find out what Judge Hylan stood for, and because Murphy was the influence benind Hylan.

Every reference the Mayor made to the war and to Americanism being the prominent issue of the campaign was received with shouts of approval, handclapping and the waving of small American flags. The war issue was forced to the front even before the Mayor entered the hall. Job E. Hedges, one-time Republican candidate for Governor, presided at the meeting, and in waiting for the Mayor's arrival he urged all Republicans, regardless of party regularity, to support the Mayor. At one point Mr. Hedges mentioned the name of Morris Hillquit, the Socialist candidate for Mayor. Immediately a yell for Hillquit went up from the rear of the hall. Mr. Hedges looked disconcerted for a moment, but advancing to the edge of the platform he waited for the applause to die down, and then he said:

"Our friend, Mr. Hillquit, says that he is going to run on the proposition that we should not have gone to war and, having gone to war, we should stop it. Therefore, I take it that some of this applause —."

Waved American Flags.

"They are a lot of traitors," shouted a man in the rear of the hall. There were yells of approval all over the hall, and several stood up and waved American flags. Some one cried "Throw them out!" and Mr. Hedges continued:

"There is no reason why they should not applaud, because that is all they do on behalf of good government." There was continued applause at this, and Mr. Hedges followed up with:

"A man who is unwilling to serve his nation is not fit to support his city. A man who would give aid and support to the enemies of his nation would steal the honor of his city. And the time has come in this great municipality when, whatever a man's extraction or his belief on any other topic, from worship of the Almighty to worship of the almighty dollar, has for that is either for his country or against it, and those who are not for it are against it, that's all."

The applause that followed from all over the hall showed that the audience was apparently in the same frame of mind. Immediately after the Mayor came in and was given a rousing welcome. In all the Mayor spoke for more than an hour, and there were no more cheers for Hillquit. After the Mayor had finished other candidates on the Fusion ticket, including Controller Prendergast, Robert Adamson, candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen; Borough President Marcus M. Marks, and Judge Ransom, candidate for District Attorney, spoke. Upon leaving hall the Mayor went at once to the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, where a huge crowd, which had already heard the other candidates, awaited him.

The Mayor was in excellent voice and spoke with great earnestness. When he mentioned Hearst and Murphy he pounded his fist on the table or shook it at the audience. Again and again the applause interrupted him, and he found it difficult to proceed. He began by saying:

"I esteem it an honor to be here tonight, and I am glad to open this campaign and again face my fellow-citizens and discuss with them the record of this administration and its proposals for the future, and meet with them, face to face, every question that has been raised or that may be raised in the course of this campaign. I esteem it an honor to be here, and I come here tonight not as Mayor of the city, not as an administrator, not as one seeking a public office, but as one who has been commissioned to carry the banner of this cause by a group of red-blooded American citizens of honest minds and of undivided allegiance to our common country."

People on Their Feet.

That brought the people to their feet and there was prolonged applause. The Mayor went on:

"This call, my friends, has come from these men who have come in broad daylight to the steps of the seat of

Expressions of Peace Hopes Mark Hindenburg Birthday

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 2.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg's seventieth birthday was celebrated throughout Germany today as a national fête. The Emperor and all the Imperial Family sent greetings to the Field Marshal, expressing the hope that an early end of the war would crown his work.

Various cities bestowed their freedom on him and special celebrations were held by the schools, coupled with collections for the war loan.

Dr. Richard von Kühlmann, the Foreign Secretary, in a congratulatory telegram, said:

"Glorious deeds of imperishable greatness make this a national fête day. The German nation looks with unshakable confidence to your powerful protection of the Imperial frontiers, with the hope for Germany's happy future."

The recipient of these demonstrations spent the day at headquarters. He was reported to be slightly indisposed.

PERKINS REJECTED; MITCHELL CHOSEN

State Senate, 25 to 20, Defeats Financier for Head of the New Food Board.

BITTER CHARGES IN DEBATE

Unanimous Approval Greets the Eleventh-Hour Nomination of Ex-Labor Leader.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 2.—After an acrimonious debate the Senate today rejected the nomination of George W. Perkins as head of the new State Food Control Commission, and John Mitchell, Chairman of the State Industrial Commission and former President of the United Mine Workers, whose name had been substituted at the eleventh hour by Governor Whitman, was confirmed for the post by unanimous vote. Without a dissenting voice the appointment of Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell University, was confirmed, and only one vote was recorded against Charles A. Wieting of Cobleskill, as the other members of the commission.

Senator Ross Graves, Republican, representing a Buffalo, district, charged that a combination had been formed between Tammany Hall and the Republican Old Guard to humiliate Governor Whitman through the defeat of his nominee and at the same time cater to the food speculators. This charge was resented in many bitter speeches. Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson of Herkimer, former Progressive State Chairman, declared that Mr. Perkins "has invested a good deal of money and has a first mortgage on a great many people by investing in their primary campaigns." When pressed to elaborate this charge, he said he understood Mr. Perkins had spent $45,000 for a "White Book" which Governor Whitman used in his primary campaign last year.

After defeating the nomination of Mr. Perkins, the Senate received a special message from Governor Whitman urging favorable action on a bill, already passed by the Assembly, which would make it possible for Mr. Perkins to accept from Mayor Mitchel the place at the head of the New York City Market Commission without surrendering his Presidency of the Palisades Interstate Park Commission. Embodied in the message was a letter from Mayor Mitchel, urging that this legislation be enacted

Kills Whitman-Mitchel Bill.

The Senate War Committee, to which the bill had been referred, went into session at once and, after spending an hour behind closed doors, returned with an adverse report, which the Senate sustained by a vote of 19 to 23.

The vote on the Perkins nomination stood 20 to 25, a gain for Mr. Perkins of two votes since the question was last up before the Senate. The additional votes were furnished by James J. Walker and Edward J. Dowling, two Tammany men, who were absent when the first nomination was under debate. Here is the vote in detail:

For—Republicans: Argetsinger, Monroe; Burlingame, Kings; Carson, Ontario; Gibbs, Erie; Gilchrist, Kings; Graves, Erie; Knight, Wyoming, Lockwood, Kings; Mullan, Monroe; Murphy, Kings; G. F. Thompson, Niagara; R. L. Thompson, Nassau; Walters, Onondaga; Wallington, Rensselaer; Whitney, Saratoga, Wicks, Oneida; Yelverton, Schenectady—17.

Total—20.

Total—25.

Present and not voting—Hewitt, (Rep.,) Cayuga.

Absentees—A. P. Brown, (Rep.,) Otsego; Daly, (Dem.,) Queens, and Rampersgr, (Dem.,) Erie.

Governor Whitman expressed great regret at Mr. Perkins's defeat.

"I regarded Mr. Perkins as the best man in the State for the position," he said.

"He would have had behind him a driving force that no other man that I know of could possibly command in that position. But I have great confidence in Mr. Mitchell, too, and feel very happy and grateful over his consent to serve as head of the commission."

Debate Over Nomination.

Senator Henry M. Sage opened the fight against confirmation of the nomination.

WAR TAX BILL PASSES SENATE AFTER CRITICISM

But No Negative Vote Is Recorded as Measure Is Sent to President.

BRISK DEBATE OF AN HOUR

CUMMINS IS PESSIMISTIC

But Most of the Senators Accept the Bill as Being 80 Per Cent. Good.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—With only one hour of debate the Senate today without a dissenting vote approved the conference report on the War Revenue bill. The measure will go to the House tomorrow for the signature of the Speaker and back to the Senate to be signed by the Vice President. It will be in the hands of the President tomorrow night.

The Senate accepted the conference report in what might be characterized as a dirge-like spirit. The measure was advocated solely as a means of raising money by direct taxation to pay immediate war expenditures. Criticism of some features, chiefly the war profits tax and the levies upon individuals, was made by every Senator who took the floor during the brief debate.

The aggregate yield of revenue from the bill, Senator Simmons said, would be about $2,535,000,000, which is nearly $200,000,000 lower than that made when the conferees finished their work Saturday.

"The conference agreement is a distinct Senate victory," said Senator Simmons. "The House yielded on 275 out of 320 contested points. While the measure as passed may not meet with the approval of all, and I don't assume to say it is perfect, I do say, unreservedly, that it is a much improved bill, much fairer to the taxpayer and to the Government.

Senator Pomerene of Ohio and Saulsbury and Walcott of Delaware criticised the restoration of the special munitions tax. They felt that munitions manufacturers, having to pay the war profits tax, ought not to be obliged to meet an extra levy. Senator Saulsbury expressed the belief that the munitions tax was a product of pro-German propaganda.

The advance in second-class postage rates was criticised as tending to injure many publications. Senator Simmons defended the tax as necessary. He had read into the record a letter from the Postmaster General, stating that, even with the increase, the Government would lose $40,000,000 a year in handling newspapers and magazines.

Senator Cummins of Iowa attacked the bill as tending to bring industrial ruin to the country. He favored a much higher tax on the country's wealth. Senator Cummins calculated that the expenses of the first year of the war would be approximately $22,000,000,000.

"Of this stupendous amount we propose to raise by increased taxation less than $3,000,000,000 and borrow the remainder," he said. "I protest against that as ruinous to business and a most grievous injustice to those who come after us. It is unwise and inexcusable."

Easy on Unearned Incomes.

Senator Wadsworth attacked the war profits and income taxes.

"Sooner or later," he said, "we must discriminate between earned and unearned incomes. This measure taxes the worker infinitely more than the drones. We still leave uncured and uncorrected the injustices of the income tax. As it now stands it inflicts serious injury upon business and permits those who do not work to escape lightly."

Senator Smoot criticised the bill as not nearly so practical as before it went to conference. He objected to the adding of new legislation by the conferees, and declared his willingness to vote for an amendment to the rules forbidding the practice.

"I know that there are not enough votes to reject this report and send the bill back to conference," said Senator Smoot. "If we had the votes I would move to reject it, if for no other reason than the inclusion of the 'zone system,' which, I believe, means absolute ruin to many publications. We penalize people for having the temerity to live beyond a certain radius. It will cost more to send a magazine to Nebraska than to Siberia."

Senator La Follette attacked the bill as not levying a sufficient tax on wealth.

"I voted against this measure because it violated every principle of a wise and just policy for financing the war," he said. "I do not believe that it is possible for any Government to finance the war on economically sound principles, because wealth will not stand for it, and wealth is always potentially able to control the finances of war. However, it is the duty of legislators to approximate a just policy."

Mr. La Follette said he would defer until some time later "some observations he had intended on the bill and matters connected with it." Many members of Congress have been expecting him to answer the petitions for his expulsion for alleged disloyal utterances and actions.

Examples of Taxation.

Concrete examples of how the bill would operate as to corporations, partnerships, and individuals were given tonight by Representative Fordney of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee and a member of the War Tax Conference Committee. His statement follows:

The following table shows the total amount of income, corporation, and excess profits taxes that will be paid (a) by a corporation with a capital of $100,000 and a net income of $50,000; (b) by a partnership of three parties with a capital of $100,000 and a net income of $50,000, and (c) by an individual engaged in business with $100,000 capital and $50,000 of net profits:

(a) Corporation—Deducting from net income 8 per cent. of the capital, the

BRITISH REPULSE 6 YPRES ASSAULTS

Artillery Battle Continues, with Heavy German Loss in Counterattacks.

PRESS EMBARGO RAISED

Dispatches from the Front Are Allowed to Pass for First Time Since Friday.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Six German attacks were made upon the British lines east of Ypres yesterday and last night, all without success except for the capture of the two small outposts near Polygon Wood, reported yesterday. This information is contained in the afternoon official bulletin. Tonight the War Office issued only this meager statement on today's operations:

"Beyond artillery activity on both sides on the battle front there is nothing of special interest to report."

The French War Office reports the repulse of a strong German attack on the Verdun front between Hill 344 and Samogneux, although the Germans retain a foothold in some advanced trenches. There was also marked artillery activity on the Aisne front.

Today, for the first time since last Friday, when notice was given that the sending of press dispatches from Field Headquarters would be suspended, dispatches on the military situation at the British front have been received here by The Associated Press. No explanation of the suspension, however, is made public.

German Night Assaults Smashed.

Telegraphing under today's date, The Associated Press correspondent at the front says:

"Two more counterattacks were attempted by the Germans against the British lines between the northeast corner of Polygon Wood and the Menin road last night; but, as in the case of three heavy assaults made during the day, the enemy was smashed by artillery and rifle fire. Hard local fighting occurred at the place known as Cameron House, where the Germans yesterday forced the British back slightly, but, with the exception of two small posts lost in this area, the British line was intact this morning.

"The Germans also attacked during the night south of the Ypres-Roulers railway in the neighborhood of oZnnebeke, but were repulsed.

"The last twenty-four hours have been bitter ones for the enemy along the Ypres battle front. Not only have the Germans suffered a stinging defeat, but this defeat has been accompanied by grievous losses in men. The tremendous fire to which they were subjected by the artillery, rifles, and machine guns was a revelation even to those accustomed to watching the marvelous work of the great British war machine.

"In the face of the immense strength of the British artillery the Germans in their desperation essayed something which they must have known would result in reverses, unless some wholly unforeseen contingency arose. They gambled against great odds, and they paid for it in lives.

"South of the Menin Road, in the neighborhood of the Tower Hamlets battleground, it was quiet during the night. North of the Ypres-Roulers Railway the German artillery played heavily on the British front areas. The correspondent visited Westhoek Ridge and the region near Zonnebeke, where the artillery activity was intense. British guns of all calibres were keeping up their ceaseless thunder, and for every German shell landed in this zone were hurling back scores.

"There is no doubt that the punishment being dealt out to the Germans is tremendous. Every prisoner taken admits that and appears to be glad to be in the hands of the British.

"German air raiders were active again last night."

A delayed dispatch from the same correspondent, dated Monday, says:

"Once more the Germans have essayed, in a series of counterattacks, to break the new British lines between Polygon Wood and Tower Hamlets, across the open road to the south. Again they have been hurled back with heavy losses. The principal result of three bitter attacks by the enemy between dawn and mid-afternoon has been the merciless shattering of his ranks and a still further advance over the front south of Polygon Wood by the British, who pushed their line forward some hundred yards in depth behind the fleeing Germans.

"The first assault was delivered at 6:15 o'clock this morning. The enemy advanced in three waves toward the British, but immediately met with such a fierce fire of rifles and artillery that he was compelled to retire. It was apparent, however, that the Germans were not through with the attempt, and the big British guns turned loose such an avalanche of shells as is seldom seen along the front.

"At 8:40 o'clock the Germans surged forward once more and, as in the earlier attack were turned back by the intense fire from their opponents. Meanwhile the British artillery was hammering away with drumfire intensity, shaking the country miles back of the lines. The German guns were not silent, and in the midst of the roar of the British artillery could be heard the detonations of heavy enemy shells.

"It seemed impossible that another attempt would be made by the Germans in the face of such a hurricane of steel.

BRITISH REPRISALS FOR LONDON RAIDS ARE NOW LIKELY

Government Is Said to Await Only the Word from the Military Command.

IMPORTANT STEPS FORECAST

GERMANS EXPECT ATTACKS

Cologne and Wilhelmshaven Warn Their Citizens Against Entente Air Raiders.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 3.—Demands for retaliation in kind upon German cities grow with each recurrence of air raids on London, and intimations of a semi-official character were given yesterday that these demands would be heeded.

The Evening Standard yesterday asserted "on the highest authority" that the Government was paying special attention to the question of reprisals, saying:

"There is no qualification about the decision of the Government to undertake very effective reprisals at the earliest moment consistent with the advice of the high military command."

That the Government contemplates new and effective steps to counteract the air raids is borne out in speeches made by Major Gen. Sir Francis Lloyd, Director of the Defenses of London, and Dr. Christopher Addison, former Minister of Munitions, at a meeting called yesterday in the London district to discuss the recent raids. Dr. Addison remarked that the Germans had got the start of humanity in their different forms of ruthlessness, such as sinking unarmed ships with submarines and bombing open towns; but, he added:

"I can tell you this: We have got the mastery of the submarine menace, and I am perfectly confident that before long we shall achieve just as great a supremacy in the air, whether over this country or over their own."

Dr. Addison asked the country to have patience while the military authorities were working out a scheme for stopping the raids. He reminded his audience that it was a colossal business, and declared that the defense of the last week had shown an immense advance in defensive plans. If the people would only be patient, he said, they would defeat the main German idea, which was to destroy the nerve of the civilian population, so as to prevent the armies from hanging on until victory was achieved.

General Lloyd also referred to the improvement in the defenses and asserted that if this gunfire was lacking the first-class machines the Germans now possessed would come loaded with bombs and drop them where they liked.

Regarding the question of reprisals, he said that this did not concern him as a military man, who only acted under orders, but he added:

"If you desire reprisals, you must let the authorities know, and I shall be glad to convey your intentions to the proper quarter."

Reject Official Excuses.

Semi-official explanations that the British cannot spare machines for reciprocal raids are questioned by the Northcliffe newspapers, the Daily Express and others, which point out that the Germans are able to spare aircraft for raiding England and have enough along the battle lines to give the British a continuing fight for supremacy in the air on the fighting front.

It is argued that the Germans have evidently outbuilt the British in aircraft and may be expected to continue building on an increasing scale and to improve the types of their machines, while the British are trying to catch up with them. Predictions that this would be the case were made by some of the newspapers and by experts like Lord Montagu of Beaulieu months ago. Lord Montagu also predicts that the Germans will soon pass the experimental stage of operations and be able to attack London in all kinds of weather, nearly every night.

A dispatch from Geneva says:

"A Swiss painter, who has been copying Dutch masters in the Cologne Museum and has just returned here, says that the Germans are now expecting aerial reprisals and are placing valuable paintings in places of security. The police of Cologne have issued instructions to the populace as to their conduct during raids. Most of the Rhine towns, following this example, are taking precautions."

The Wilhelmshaven Tageblatt publishes advice warning the people of that German naval base against possible air raids by the Entente aviators.

Ten Killed Monday Night.

In Monday night's air raid ten persons were killed and thirty-eight injured.

Just as the guns began to roar an ambulance train with wounded from France arrived at a London station. Red Cross workers rapidly unloaded the train and carried the men to shelter, as glass broken by shrapnel began to fall on the platform.

Several bombs fell in the river in the southwest district, while the roof of a building in which a large number of people sought cover was damaged. No one was injured.

There has been a big influx of people into towns outside of London since the

BRITAIN DECLARES ABSOLUTE EMBARGO ON THE NORTHERN NEUTRALS TO STOP SENDING OF SUPPLIES INTO GERMANY

Pro-German Cabinet Resigns at Stockholm As King Attempts Coalition With Liberals

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 2.—The Swedish Ministry has resigned.

King Gustave has requested the Ministers to retain their portfolios for the present.

It is a custom, if not a law of procedure, in Sweden that the members of the outgoing Cabinet shall retain their portfolios until their successors have at least been designated. It was so when the Hammarskjold Ministry was succeeded by the present one, under Senator Swartz, last March.

On Sept. 27 King Gustave requested Oscar von Sydow, Minister of the Interior, to form a new Government, which he proceeded to attempt by seeking a coalition with Liberals. If the King now asks the Swartz Ministry to continue in office, it probably indicates that the new slate is not complete. Circumstances have rendered its completion difficult.

When on Sept. 8 the United States Government made public the famous "Spurlos versenkt" dispatches of Count von Luxburg, which had been transmitted to Wilhelmstrasse, in German code, through the Swedish Legation at Buenos Aires, Sweden was in the midst of a general election. The election then promised no sensational features, as it was really an indorsement of the Swartz Coalition Ministry.

The Swartz ministry from its beginning aroused grave fears of international complications. Its Foreign Minister was Admiral S. A. A. Lindman, noted for his pro-German sympathies, who had been Prime Minister from 1906 to 1911. The new Minister of War was Colonel Akerman, who had been the Swedish Military Observer with the German Headquarters Staff for two years. With Lindman, Dahlberg, the Minister of Agriculture, was noted for his Anglophobia, if not for his German leanings.

In response to the Luxburg revelations the Swedish Government asserted that as the unneutral dispatches were in the Wilhelmstrasse code they could not be read by the Swedish authorities, and that there was nothing unusual in their transmission. This explanation did not satisfy the Socialists and Liberals, and, although occurring late in the political campaign, the scandal had a perceptible effect upon the vote.

The Branting Socialists returned 86; the extreme Socialists, 12; the Liberals, 62; the Conservatives, 58, and the new peasant factions, 12. It has been stated that the Branting plurality is based solely upon criticism of the Government's foreign policy.

LOAN SALES NEAR HUNDRED MILLION

WHOLE CITY IS ENLISTED

More Accomplished in Two Days Than in Same Number of Weeks in Previous Drive.

Great headway was made yesterday in the campaign for the sale of the second Liberty Loan bonds, which opened Monday, and so pleased were the members of the Liberty Loan Committee of the New York District with the progress of the work of organization requisite for the mobilization of subscriptions that they frankly admitted that more had been accomplished in the two days than in the first two weeks of the previous war loan campaign. Exact figures for subscriptions filed throughout the district were unavailable, but it was roughly estimated that between $80,000,000 and $100,000,000 had been applied for in the two days. Up to 3:15 yesterday afternoon the Federal Reserve Bank had received reports of subscriptions to the amount of about $9,000,000, but this did not include records from up-State, nor did it take into account various subscriptions that had been announced in one form or another, but which were not officially reported to the bank.

The Corn Exchange Bank, the only State bank in this city which is a member of the Reserve system, will file today an initial subscription of $10,000,000. Among the large subscriptions reported yesterday were:

|---|---|
| Prudential Insurance Co. | $7,500,000 |
| Home Insurance Co. | 2,000,000 |
| United States Trust Co. | 2,000,000 |
| German-American Insurance Co. | 1,000,000 |
| Men's Clothing Trades Committee | 600,000 |
| Home Life Insurance Co. | 500,000 |
| Hornblower & Weeks | 500,000 |
| W. P. Bonbright & Co. | 500,000 |
| Jewelry Trade Committee | 326,000 |

The subscription of the Jewelry Trade Committee was collected at its first luncheon.

At the offices of the Liberty Loan Committee there were received subscriptions totaling $252,650, the same representing in most cases individual applications for small amounts.

Railway's Subscription $5,000,000.

Directors of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway Company at their meeting yesterday voted to subscribe $5,000,000. This will be distributed among five of the Federal Reserve Districts through which the road operates, and only a small part, if any, will be placed in New York.

The banks are very desirous of doing everything in their power to aid the public in financing Liberty Loan purchases, and it was learned yesterday that some institutions would fix a special rate of 4 per cent. for loans secured by Liberty Loan bonds as collateral. The bond interest rate is 4 per cent., and a great many banks take the position that the loan rate, while low, should be at least 4½ per cent. A great deal depends on the rate which the Federal Reserve Bank will fix for the discounting of paper secured by the bonds. In view of the fact that in the June campaign it was 3½ per cent., the same as the bond rate, it is assumed in banking circles that the present rate will probably be 4 per cent. No official announcement on the subject has yet been made. Banks agreeing to lend their customers and friends money at 4 per cent., with the view of aiding them in purchasing Government bonds, will do so only on the understanding that the borrower gives his ninety-day note, which is discountable at the Reserve Bank, and that he agrees to pay off part of the loan on maturity when he applies for a renewal.

Banks Give Attention to Loan.

All the banks, trust companies, and investment houses are devoting their time and attention to the Liberty Loan

LIFTS LICENSE BAN ON MANY EXPORTS

NAMES 600 COMMODITIES

But Regulations Barring Exports to Germany and Contiguous Nations Remain.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The Exports Administrative Board issued today a long list of American commodities which it has been decided may for the present be exported to other nations, with the exception of Germany, her allies, and the neutral countries contiguous to Germany, without obtaining a license. There are about 600 articles in the list.

The decision does not affect wheat and other vital cereals, the more important shipbuilding steel, meats, sugar, raw cotton, concentrated fodder, coal, fuel oils, and other products looked upon as essential to this nation's welfare. Neither does it disturb the complete embargo declared against Holland, Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, the nations which have come directly under the accusation of helping to feed Germany.

Steel and iron plates, demanded in great quantities here for shipbuilding, will be retained except under severe restriction. The only plates which may be exported without license are those less than one-eighth of an inch in thickness. A certain portion of steel bars will be withdrawn from the list of articles which demand export licenses, but not the steel essential to America's part of the war program.

The task of granting licenses for all of America's exports has been one of tremendous scope, and the list issued today was prepared with a view of leaving to the Exports Administrative Board only the problem of restricting, to a certain point, the materials over which control was believed to be absolutely essential. The board, under the terms of the President's proclamations, retains the power to take from the "free" list any article at any time.

The Official Statement.

The official statement follows:

"The Exports Administrative Board has determined that under the President's proclamation of Aug. 27, 1917, the following articles do not require an export license at present except when shipped to Albania, Austria-Hungary, that portion of Belgium occupied by the military forces of Germany, Bulgaria, Denmark, her colonies, possessions or protectorates; Germany, her colonies, possessions, or protectorates; Greece, Lichtenstein, Luxemburg, the Kingdom of the Netherlands, Norway, Spain, her colonies, possessions, or protectorates; Sweden, Switzerland, or Turkey, (excluding any portion of the foregoing occupied by the military forces of the United States or the nations associated with the United States in the war,) or any territory occupied by the military forces of Germany or her allies.

"The board has further determined that if any of the articles are subsequently classified as requiring a license, nevertheless they will in general be allowed to proceed without license when covered by ocean bill of lading or by railroad bill of lading marked 'for export' dated on or before the date classified. There may, of course, be some special instances where for certain reasons the embargo will have to be effective immediately, regardless of when the goods were shipped, but these cases will be rare, and special attention will be called to them at the time publicity is given to the fact that they have been classified as requiring a license. All future classi-

LONDON ANNOUNCES STEP

SHUT OFF FOODS AND ARMS

America Already Has Embargo in Force—Other Allies Are Expected to Follow.

HOLLAND AIDED FOE MUCH

In One Year She Shipped Into Germany Enough Food to Supply 1,200,000 Soldiers.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Gazette prints a proclamation prohibiting the exportation to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and the Netherlands of all articles, except printed matter of all descriptions and personal effects accompanied by their owners.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Concerted action on the part of the allied countries to isolate Germany from the rest of the world and end all possibility of neutral nations of Europe supplying her with food and ammunition, no matter what the consequence may be, is seen here in the proclamation published in London placing an absolute embargo on the exportation of commodities to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, and the Netherlands, known as the northern neutral group.

The United States took the lead in this movement on July 15, when, by Presidential proclamation, it declared an absolute embargo on the exportation of all products to these countries. Since that time not so much as an ounce of food or fodder, or the smallest quantity of any wartime material has gone to the northern neutrals of Europe.

So far as the United States was concerned the British blockade was unnecessary, and the embargo also was a much more effective weapon.

It is considered likely here that France, Italy and the other countries aligned against Germany in the war will follow the lead taken by America and Great Britain, and that a combination thus will be formed which will absolutely prevent materials entering northern neutral territory from these sources unless it is established beyond a doubt that Germany is not profiting.

The situation created by embargo regulations in connection with these neutrals has been rapidly developing to a point where some hold the opinion that certain nations now neutral will find it difficult to remain "on the fence."

It is certain, for one thing, that the United States will not aid in the support of Holland while any such agreement with Germany as that presented in full in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Sunday remains in effect, and neither will the United States send its supplies to Sweden while the Swedes, or at least the pro-German ruling classes there, are pouring foods and materials necessary for the manufacture of ammunition and high explosives into the territory of the Central Powers.

That such a traffic has been going on, it is reported here, has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of officials in charge of the export of American goods. They are in a mood to enforce to the limit the restrictions made possible by President Wilson's proclamation.

Action along the lines taken by the United States, by Great Britain and other allies has not been unexpected here, in view of the revelations concerning the movement of foodstuffs and other essentials into Germany by way of the neutrals since the United States clamped down the lid. The evidence was quick in coming in, and was heralded by vociferous protests from neutral nations of Europe. Officials here were satisfied that there was "fire" where so much smoke appeared, and went about their investigations with thoroughness.

An official here who is conversant with the situation in Europe stated that the war would end in sixty days to six months if Sweden's trade with Germany in materials needed for ammunition and explosives was cut off. Germany has made demands upon Sweden as she did upon Holland for these materials in return for other commodities. Up to the time the American embargo was declared, at least, this traffic was going forward on a scale that was alarming.

The fate of the northern neutral nations of Europe, if other countries allied with the United States join with America and England in declaring a complete embargo, is a moot question here. Obviously they cannot keep up their traffic with Germany on the present scale without outside aid in the shape of foods.

With the allied nations in an "embargo combination," South America will be practically the only field left open to the neutral nations of Europe, and Germany's actions in many directions have left those countries in no spirit to send their commodities to nations which may aid Germany if other more friendly markets can be found.

It is also more than probable that the British blockade will be tightened in the general plan of things to end this traffic, if it is not done so voluntarily by the South American countries. Certainly no ships of the allies, once the embargo is in full force, will be used in this trade.

The United States has endeavored to show the South American countries the extent to which Germany has gone in its "ruthless" warfare. It is understood also that this country, through its embargo powers, is prepared to refuse aid to German capital in South America which is accused of aiding Germany with its earnings by remittance of gold and by paying for the spreading of pro-German propaganda.

Much of the German capital invested in public utilities of South America which must depend upon American coal. There are some here who are willing to go to the extent to force the South American Governments to take over these interests in order to obtain the American fuels needed.

DUTCH ADMIT GERMAN DEAL.

But Insist Export Ratio Is Based on Before-the-War Division.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 2.—The Dutch newspapers republish tonight THE NEW YORK TIMES dispatch from Washington, detailing the Dutch agreements regarding the relative quantity of various foodstuffs which were to be exported from Holland to Germany and the Entente countries, and giving the indication that exports from the United States to Holland might be expected to cease until this ratio was changed.

The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, commenting on the dispatch, says:

"On inquiry in the proper quarter we learn that, as far as the figures are concerned, THE TIMES report is in the main correct. The division of Dutch exports was the result of long and careful consideration with the commercial representatives of both groups of belligerents, the British General Trading Association at London and the Deutsche Handelsstelle at The Hague. There is nothing abnormal in the facts, because the division was based in the main on the ratio of exports before the war."

PIERCE GERMAN LINE ON THE RIGA FRONT

Russian Advanced Detachments Push Forward For Distance of a Mile.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 2.—Russian advanced detachments in the Riga region yesterday broke through the German lines and pushed forward for a distance of one mile, says the official statement issued today by the Russian War Office, which reads:

In the Riga region, south of the railway in the Kronenberg-Spital-Groundull sector, our vanguard detachments have advanced one mile.

Caucasus—Nothing of importance has occurred, elsewhere there have been fusillades.

Two enemy airplanes and one captive balloon have been brought down recently. Two of our airplanes fell in flames, the aviators perishing.

BERLIN, Oct. 2, (via London.)—The following bulletin was issued by the War Office today:

Eastern Theatre—There has been minor fighting activity, and the position is unchanged.

COALITION IDEA GAINING IN RUSSIA

Government May Not Oppose Preliminary Parliament if Bourgeois Is Represented.

UKRAINE WANTS AUTONOMY

Also Demands World War Be Stopped—Allies Again Pledge Loyalty to Russia's Interests.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 2.—Confidence is increasing in Government circles that the coalition idea will receive the sanction of the Democratic Congress. There also are indications that the plan for a preliminary Parliament, advocated by certain strong groups in the Congress, will not meet with opposition from the Government, provided the property-owning classes receive a fair representation in it.

The organizations which favor the coalition have held a conference under the Presidency of M. Skobeleff, former Minister of Labor, regarding the admission of Constitutional Democrats. Their participation in the Parliament is approved, provided they are clear of suspicion of connection with the recent attempted revolution headed by General Kornilorf.

Velichko, Deputy for the Ukraine, who is attending the Democratic Congress, delivered a speech today demanding autonomy for the Ukraine and also the cessation of hostilities. He said his demands were made in the name of "three million brave soldiers, who will not stand firm at the front unless autonomy is granted." He said also that the world war should be stopped immediately.

The Government has appointed a special committee, including the Ministers of War and Justice, to arrange details for the election of delegates to the Constituent Assembly which is to determine the future form of government of the country. The preliminary expenses are estimated at 6,000,000 rubles.

The British, French, and Italian Governments, through their representatives here, have again declared categorically the intention attributed to the Entente allied powers of taking advantage of the difficult situation in Russia in order to insure their own interests. The British Ambassador has stated officially that Great Britain would never agree to such a policy.

The French Ambassador recently informed the Government that a personage occupying an important diplomatic post in Germany had made overtures to some French politicians with a view to the discussion of questions of interest to France, but that this German attempt was indignantly rejected.

The Italian Ambassador has informed the Government that Italy will continue her co-operation with Russia in the common cause, and that she has rejected all thoughts of peace negotiations which have neglected Russian interests.

KERENSKY DOMINATES PETROGRAD CONGRESS

Impressions of Russia's Premier at the Opening of the Great Democratic Gathering.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 28.—Kerensky has come out of the mists that have enshrouded him since the Korniloff affair. That was the central fact in today's opening of the meeting of the Democratic Conference, which outwardly is an assembly not unlike the Moscow conference, but is less imposing, rather more casual and bare more signs of hasty improvision.

The atmosphere of tense anticipation so noticeable in Moscow was lacking. A large number of Moscow delegates were there, but the Right Wing was wholly absent and their places were taken by representatives of various revolutionary organizations, including many Bolsheviks. Out of over a thousand delegates the proportion of Bolsheviks, judging by the responses to various speakers, was little over a third. Lenine was not ostentatiously visible, though he may have been present.

When Kerensky rose to speak the applause was loud and long, only the Bolsheviks stubbornly remaining silent. Kerensky, dressed in a creased khaki suit and looking worn and unhealthily stout, came on to the stage, shook hands with all the gentlemen at the green table, and then began to speak. Kerensky's speeches are always a puzzle to me. He is much more agreeable in private than on the platform. Personally I dislike his public manner, the rasping voice, an almost mechanical projection of sounds by a succession of forward thrusts of his chin and constant jerking of his right hand, the monotonous declamatory tone, calculated pauses, and painful emotionalism. It all looks like second-rate acting. And yet, if I may speak of my personal impression, though I am irritated by his manner, there is something in the personality of the man. I wish I could analyse my impression to the end. It is something disturbing, at times oppressive. It is not exhilarating or uplifting in any Western sense.

I do not know whether Kerensky is a great or a small man, but there is no other man in Russia at this moment who can take his place, and it was a relief to see that he won the sympathies of the conference today and that the great majority enthusiastically supported him. The Bolsheviks, it is true, repeatedly interjected sneering comments, but their interruptions only increased the fervor of the rest of the assembly.

The man who spoke was not the rather pompous Premier who appeared in Moscow. He was a new and harder Kerensky, embittered in his perpetual struggle with chaos. In the combination of his personality with his extraordinary position there is tragedy, and the tragedy of Russia is reflected in his speech. The assembly felt that today the personal estimates of Kerensky yielded to the oppressive sense of the tragedy of Russia, and that the Premier appeared again as a symbol.

That was the net result of today's meeting. There will be trouble and attacks and conflicts during the next few days, but for the present I think it may be said that Kerensky has got his way.

REVOLT IN TURKESTAN AGAINST PETROGRAD

Agitators With Local Troops Seize Tashkent, But Population Rises Against Them.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 2.—A revolutionary movement is in progress in Turkestan. General Cherkess, commander of the district, has been attacked and beaten.

The semi-official news agency issued the following statement today:

"Political agitators, with the support of two local regiments, took over the administration of Tashkent (capital of Russian Turkestan,) and announced that they no longer recognized the Provisional Government. The Mussulman population, which disapproved of the town's masters, rose in revolt and, aided by the pupils of the military academy, occupied the fortress.

"The Government has appointed the commander of the troops at Kazan (eastern European Russia,) General Korovnitchenko, Commissary General of Turkestan and has placed at his disposal sufficient troops to suppress the disorders."

The Minister of the Interior says he is not alarmed, and is confident the disturbances will soon be quelled.

Russian Turkestan is composed of four provinces in Central Asia extending westward to the Caspian Sea. It has an area of 420,000 square miles and a population of about 6,685,000. The major portion of the region is in the form of barren or partly cultivated steppes or deserts.

BIGGEST GUN DUEL OF WAR AT YPRES

Has Raged Since Sept. 26 Over Passchendaele Ridge, with Fearful Carnage.

DESPAIRING GERMAN NOTE

Officer Records His Escape from a Dugout Where All His Companions Were Killed.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Monday, Oct 1, (Delayed.)—Since the battle on Sept. 26, when English, Scottish, and Australian troops drew close to Zonnebeke and established themselves beyond Polygon Wood race course, on the southern end of Passchendaele Ridge, there has been a ceaseless artillery battle. It reached great heights of fury on both sides, so that for miles around by day and night there was a steady beat of heavy guns and long thunder rolls of lighter artillery, like a wild sea beating against high rocks.

The enemy has been massing troops again for a counterattack in the Zandwoorde region and northward behind the spurs of the Passchendaele, and each time they have been seen quickly by the British airplanes or have been reported by "S O S" signals from the infantry, and the British guns have smashed those German battalions and added to the great toll of slaughter which must surely give a sense of fear to the German high command.

When I went over the ground of Inverness Copse and Glencorse Wood a few days ago there were more dead than I had ever seen before on one battleground. They were strewn around blockhouses, lying in the foul water of swamps and shellholes, in dugouts broken by the British fire and half buried in the heaved earth. It is like that over a wide stretch of country, and behind that ground which the British have taken and hold there is other ground, miles back, over which the German dead are scattered like Autumn leaves. For the British gunners have no limit to their ammunition now, and their shells go in ceaseless flights over the enemy's lines to smash their human targets.

This morning again the German infantry was assembled three times and sent forward into the shambles—three times for attacks on each side of that Ypres-Menin road which strikes through this country of death. Polygon Heights was their goal, but the men up there are ready and strong for any hostile advance. With machine gun and rifle fire and the pounding of "heavies" these morning attacks have been beaten off.

Imagination fails to picture the scenes out there behind the German lines—the agony of those men who, like the Poles among them, have no desire to fight, and only terror of the fury of shellfire into which they are ordered like poor beasts for slaughter and sacrifice. Lines scribbled in German note-books and found on the battlefield give glimpses of this human anguish and of the blood and filth through which these men move. Here is one such note by an unknown German officer:

"If it were not for the men who have been spared me on this fierce day and are lying around me and looking at me timidly, I should shed hot and bitter tears over the terrors that have menaced me during these hours. On the morning of Sept. 18 a dugout containing seventeen men was shot to pieces over our heads. I am the only one who withstood the maddening bombardment of three days and still survives. You cannot imagine the frightful mental torments I underwent in those few hours. After crawling out through the bleeding remnants of my comrades and the smoke and débris and wandering and fleeing in the midst of raging artillery fire in search of refuge, I am now awaiting death at any moment. You do not know what Flanders means. Flanders means endless endurance; Flanders means blood and scraps of human bodies; Flanders means heroic courage and faithfulness even unto death."

The Germans do not lack courage. The enemy is, it is certain, seriously alarmed by the British position on Polygon Heights and up by Zonnebeke, which threatens the whole of the Passchendaele Ridge, and he is retaliating by tremendous gunfire over a wide stretch of front and in deep belts of sweeping barrage fire is trying to knock out the British batteries, to set dumps alight, to catch bodies of men on the march, and smash communications. It is, I am sure, the greatest artillery battle that has ever been seen in this war; for never on either side has there been such concentration of guns, nor such intense and widespread fire.

The British have to move through this and choose their tracks carefully and dodge shellbursts which fall about them; but the spirit and valor of them all is beyond words of praise, and they are carrying on with the same steady persistence which has already brought them far along many hard roads and through many rough times.

The enemy made a great bid last night, as on many other nights during last week, when the moon has been up, to spread terror and destruction behind the British lines by air raids. It was a wonderful night, with a full moon shining brightly in a sky that was strangely blue for a Flemish night, and with a milky luminance over all the fields. The air raiders came out as soon as the moon was revealed, and made their way across the British lines at many points, searching for camps, railways, and dumps, and dropping bombs haphazard over small villages of no military importance to them.

Germans' Efforts Desperate.

The artillery battle is endless, and on both sides is intense and widespread. It was followed yesterday by five German counterattacks, which did not reach the British lines. In a very desperate way the enemy is trying to push the British back from positions which are essential to the strength of his defenses. All his guns are at work. Is it the last phase of the war? Does the enemy know that he must win or lose all?

Haig's man have that hope in their hearts and fight more grimly and with higher spirit because of it. The success of the last two battles has deepened the hope, and the men come back from the line to the rest billets with the old conviction, newly revived, that at last they have the enemy down and under and very near hopelessness.

In any one billet in Flanders one hears the tale of the battle told by the men who were there, and it is worth while, as yesterday, when I sat down at a table with officers of an English county battalion in a Flemish farm house. They told the tale of the battle, and each of them had some detail to add because that was his part of the show. They spoke as though all the things had happened long ago, and laughed loudly at episodes of gruesome interest, belonging to those humors of war which are not to be written.

There were lots of troops to their right and left in the great battle which I have described before in its broader aspects; but these men only knew their own part in it. There was a thick mist when they went away at dawn, so dense that they could not see the line of the British barrage ahead, though it was a deep belt of bursting shells. They had been told to follow closely, and they were eager to get on. They went too fast—some of them almost incredibly fast.

Caught in Their Own Barrage.

"I was on the last position three-quarters of an hour before the barrage passed," said a young officer. He spoke the words as if telling something rather commonplace, but he knew I knew the meaning of what he said—a frightful and extraordinary thing; for with his platoon he had gone ahead of the storm of fire and had to wait until it reached and then passed them. Some of their losses were because of that, and yet they might have been greater if they had been slower, because the enemy was caught before he could guess they were near.

Some ran toward their own lines with their hands up, shouting: "Kamerad!" believing that they were running toward the British. They were so unready for the attack that the snipers had the safety clips on their rifle barrels, and others were without ammunition.

The way to the last objective was easy on the whole, and the Germans were on the run with the British after them. The hardest time came afterward, as it nearly always comes, when the ground gained had to be held for three more days and nights without the excitement of attack and under heavy fire. That is when the courage of the men is most tried, as this battalion found. The enemy had time to pull themselves together, the German gunners adapted their range to the new positions and shelled fiercely across the ways of approach and scattered shells everywhere.

It was rifle fire for the British men all the time. They had not troubled to bring up a great many bombs, for the rifle has come into its own again, now that the old trench warfare is gone for a time or for all time. So with rifle fire and machine gun fire they broke down the German counterattacks and caught parties of Germans, who showed themselves on the slopes of Passchendaele Ridge, and sniped incessantly. They used up a prodigious quantity of small arms ammunition, and the carriers risked their lives every step of the way to get it up to them. They fired 30,000 rounds and then 16,000 more.

There was one officer who spent all his time sniping from a little patch of ground that had once been a garden. He lay behind the heaped ruin and used his fieldglasses to watch the slopes of rising ground on his left where human ants were crawling. Every now and then he fired and picked off an ant until his score reached fifty.

but after a considerable rest they came forward once more. Again they broke, and this time ran, with the British in hot pursuit. The British did not pause until they reached a point 100 yards in advance of their lines, where they rested and at latest reports were holding firmly.

"Hot fighting was still proceeding near Cameron house, just south of the eastern extremity of Polygon Wood, where the Germans succeeded in pushing back the British a little. This was a local fight over a very small patch of ground. Further German attacks are not unexpected.

"Throughout the fight German airplanes were circling low over the British line in an attempt to assist their troops."

Following is the text of the afternoon official statement:

The latest reports show that yesterday and last night five separate attacks were made or attempted by the enemy with fresh troops upon the portion of our new front between the Ypres-Menin road and the northeast corner of Polygon Wood. Another attack was made without success south of the Ypres-Roulers Railway against the positions at Zonnebeke.

Except for the loss of the two small advanced posts already reported, all six attacks ended in complete failure. The enemy suffered severely in these attacks and gained no advantage.

A hostile raiding party was repulsed with loss during the night south of Lens.

Slight German Gain Near Verdun.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The official communication issued by the War Office tonight says:

In Belgium and at various points along the Aisne front the artillery action was quite violent. On the right bank of the Meuse, after an intense bombardment, reported this morning, the Germans delivered a strong attack between Hill 344 and Samogneux.

The enemy assaulting detachments, under the violence of our fire, were able to reach our lines only at one point north of Hill 344. After a stubborn combat we recaptured the greater part of the advance elements where the enemy had gained a foothold.

Last night enemy airplanes bombed the town of Toul, causing several casualties.

The afternoon statement follows:

There was marked activity of the artillery over the whole Aisne front, especially in the sector of Craonne. Two enemy attacks, one north of Braye-en-Laonnois, the other in the region of Ailles, were without result.

In the region northwest of Rheims our artillery dispersed enemy concentrations.

On the right bank of the Meuse (Verdun front) the artillery fighting was very intense during the night from Samogneux as far as Bézonvaux. The Germans made two efforts to recapture our trenches in the Beaumont sector. Our fire checked them each time, inflicting appreciable losses.

Everywhere else the night was calm.

Berlin Claims Success Near Ypres.

BERLIN, Oct. 2, (via London.)—Part of the fighting ground at Polygon Wood, on the Flanders front, to a depth of 500 meters, was captured by German troops from the British yesterday, Army Headquarters announced today. The Germans held their gains.

The text of the official statement follows:

Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht—In the centre of the Flanders front the artillery duel was intense. Between Langemarck and Hollebeke on several occasions it increased to waves of drumfire.

In the morning our storming troops wrested from the British a portion of the fighting region at Polygon Wood, north of the Menin-Ypres road, some 500 meters deep, and held it against strong and repeated counterattacks. In addition to considerable casualties, the enemy lost prisoners.

Front of the German Crown Prince: Northeast of Soissons the artillery fighting activity increased. Before Verdun there was a lively firing engagement in connection with a successful enterprise on the eastern bank of the Meuse.

Near Bézonvaux in the morning shock troops, with pioneers, broke into the rear lines of the French position, destroyed trench establishments, and returned to their own positions with more than 100 prisoners.

Turk Version of Maude's Attack.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—A Turkish official statement received here says, with reference to the operations at Ramadie, Mesopotamia: "Early Friday the enemy bombarded for several hours positions already evacuated, afterward launching an attack with six battalions of infantry and one of cavalry. The fighting continues. Four enemy airplanes were brought down."

An Architectural Triumph

by The Particular Person

IN speaking of "The Mansions," one cannot help but mention the Gardens, that are enclosed within them like something precious. So they are. Every bit of green is welcome in the stone-paved city. Dwellers in "The Mansions" are to see plants, trees, well-kept lawns from their windows, instead of the usual blank walls. An arcade running through brings added air and light. That is a clever arrangement, is it not, to build about the gardens like that? Every room, you see, is thus made an outside room, with abundant air and light. And every entrance within the Gardens is given the privacy of one's own home—perfectly protected from the public gaze.

Well-Planned Conveniences

Within, one sees the same master building. The architects, Messrs. Warren & Wetmore, have left no detail unplanned. Amid all the impressive elegance of spacious chambers, high ceilings, great fireplaces, inlaid floors, paneled and oil-painted walls, hallways that are galleries, closets that are rooms, one finds all the details that only the housewife can appreciate. Fixtures for chafing dish or percolator, connections for reading lamp and bell, separate sinks for glasses and dishes, a great store room, an individual laundry, separate service entrance in the servants' quarters, away from the living rooms—need one go further? Double floors and hung ceilings insure a quiet rarely found in apartments. Not even a sound will hint of the dancing or concert that is going on above or below. That is unusual, is it not?

Extraordinary Services

Living at "The Mansions," one may have the convenience of its service. By a simple telephone call in advance, one may arrange for a luncheon, a dinner, a banquet, in one's own rooms, or in "The Mansions" restaurant, over which the Ritz-Carlton so ably presides. And you need only call "The Mansions", office to set in motion an immediate, organized effort to supply you with whatever servants you need.

A step, and one is in the very heart of the lively city, with theatres, clubs, hotels, and shops all about just waiting to offer their pleasures. These are "The Mansions"—truly the ideal of comfort, privacy, service and location!

GREY SAYS AMERICA BALKS BERLIN PEACE

Writes of Our Influence in the Preface to London Edition of Wilson Statements.

ALLIES BOUND BY SAME AIM

Germany Dare Not Face Situation Now Existing, the Ex-Foreign Secretary Asserts.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Daily News publishes quotations from a preface which Lord Grey of Falloden has written to a collection of statements made by President Wilson on the war which a London publishing firm is issuing in pamphlet form.

The ex-Foreign Secretary says the entry of the United States into the war is a tremendous fact. Potentially the strongest country in the world, she enters the contest when Germany is in an advanced state of exhaustion. America's full strength has not yet been mobilized for war, and her intervention cannot, by military or naval action, be decisive in a short time, but it is now clear that no military or naval success of German arms in Europe can procure a German peace.

"Germany cannot get peace and the economic recovery which she, at least as much as other great European belligerents, needs, except on conditions that the United States may consider essential to their own interests and to the future peace and freedom of the world," Lord Grey writes. "It is impossible to get around this fact, and it is not surprising that Germany dare not face it, and turns her back upon it that she may not face it, for that is what the organized silence and contempt in Germany of the action of the United States really mean."

Lord Grey next discusses "deeper significance and far-reaching consequences" of the reasons and spirit that forced the tremendous national decision of Americans. He says they have a settled and paramount conviction "that this terrible war is a desperate and critical struggle against something evil and intensely dangerous to moral law, to international good faith, to everything that is essential, if different nations are to live together in the world in equal freedom and friendship."

Militarism stands for things that all democracies if they wish to remain free must hate, he says. Holding these convictions, no nation so great and free as the United States could stand aside in this crisis without sacrificing its honor and losing its soul.

Lord Grey points out that though the United States are not a party to the agreements binding the Allies this is of small practical effect "compared with the deep underlying identity of view, principle and feeling." The policy and purpose of all is human liberty and to secure peace. If this purpose is not attained, Lord Grey says, the future lot of mankind will be more desperate than in the darkest and most cruel ages.

To make peace on the basis suggested in Berlin would be gambling upon a chance, he contends. In other words of President Wilson, "a steadfast concert for peace can never be maintained except by partnership of democratic nations and no autocratic Government can be trusted to keep faith within it or observe its convenants." All the great nations of Europe, except Germany, Lord Grey concludes, are now in form and in spirit, and in fact, democratic.

No written agreement, he says, is necessary to draw America and Great Britain together or to keep them in friendship. What is needed is that each should continually see in utterances of representative men and in writings of the press not the eccentricities and and the fringe, but the real stuff of national feeling, not froth and eddies, but the main deep current of public opinion in both countries.

"This," says Lord Grey, "is what we on this side feel about President Wilson's recent announcements. They satisfy and carry conviction. If millions of dear lives that have been given in this war are to have been given not in vain; if there is to be any lasting compensation for the appalling suffering of the last three years, the defeat of the Prussian will to power, however it be brought about, will not by itself be enough. Out of that defeat must come something constructive, some moral change in international relations, and the entry of the United States of America into the war in the spirit and with the principles that have inspired their actions is invaluable and, I trust, a sure and inconquerable guarantee that in the peace and after the peace these hopes will be realized."

recent moon light air raids, and at many places difficulty at first was found in providing accommodations for the visitors. During the first few nights many of the poorer people who emigrated from the metropolis slept in the open, but since then the authorities have made arrangements for sleeping quarters for them in public buildings. The shopkeepers in the towns have done a thriving business, many of them having disposed of all their stocks of provisions.

Most of the people return to London after daybreak each morning, thus causing a big crush on suburban trains.

Bombs Two British Hospitals.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Oct. 2.—A German airman has dropped bombs on two hospitals behind the British lines. Three British nurses and some wounded soldiers were killed.

RAID FOUR GERMAN CITIES.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The German cities of Frankfort-on-the-Main, Stuttgart, Treves, and Coblenz were bombarded last night by French aviators in retaliation for German aerial attacks on French cities. More than 15,000 pounds of bombs were dropped on German military establishments in Belgium and back of the fighting front in France.

The following official announcement was given out:

The Germans last night made a new attack on the town of Dunkirk. The bombardment was very violent, causing serious material damage. It is reported there were numerous victims among the civilian population.

"In reprisal for the bombardments carried out by the Germans against Bar-le-Duc and Dunkirk, our aviators last night threw down bombs on the towns of Frankfort-on-the-Main, Coblenz, Treves, and Stuttgart.

"Our bombarding airplanes made numerous expeditions, in the course of which 2,120 kilograms (4,674 pounds) of explosives were thrown on military buildings in Roulers and 6,000 kilograms (13,230 pounds) on the railway stations at Metz-sur-Woippy and Thionville, the airdrome at Chambly, encampments at Spincourt and Tilly, and munition depots at the Longeau Farm, where a violent explosion was observed.

"Two German airplanes were brought down yesterday by our pilots, and four others were compelled to land in a disabled condition."

Report Three U-Boats Sunk.

Three U-boats were sunk on Sept. 14 off the Irish coast in the course of a series of attacks made on a fast-steaming fleet of six convoyed transports, which escaped injury, according to the officers of a British steamship that arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port from England.

The transports were steaming at 14 knots an hour. They were protected by destroyers and a cruiser.

PACIFISTS ARRANGING CONFERENCE AT BERNE

Austria and Hungary Encourage Project to Discuss a League of Nations.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 2.—Failure to arrange a Socialist Congress at Stockholm seems to have determined leading Austrian and Hungarian pacifists to try to hold an international assembly at Berne. The Austrian and Hungarian Governments have officially announced that they will accord passports to any of their nationals desiring to attend the Congress, which has been fixed provisionally for Oct. 15, and is intended to discuss a league of nations.

On the face of it the Congress will not concern itself with events preceding the conclusion of the present war, but the Austrian and Hungarian Governments may hope that the discussions will further their objective of precipitating peace negotiations. So far the German Government has not guaranteed any passports to delegates.

Among the Hungarians who have announced their intention of being present are Count Michael Karolyi and several prominent publicists and churchmen. The Austrian representatives will include Professor Lamarsex, who is named as a probable member of the next Vienna Cabinet; the chocolate king, Julius Meinl; Professor Redlich, and a leader of the Catholic peace party. Among the Germans who will come if they can do so are Professor Schucking, Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, George Gothein, Eduard Bernstein, and Professor Quidde, who was sent to prison for comparing the Kaiser to the degenerate and lunatic Caligula."

Chancellor's Policy the Only Means of Maintaining Internal Unity, Erzberger Says.

CONFUSION IN REICHSTAG

Continental Solidarity Adopted as Keynote of New Foreign Secretary's Declared Aims.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Saturday, Sept. 29, (via London, Oct. 2.)—It is almost impossible to form an accurate judgment of yesterday's proceedings in the Reichstag Main Committee, when Foreign Secretary von Kühlmann made his speech on peace, until further data and the full speech are available. The Socialist Moske's speech, it is known, was not allowed to be published, except a small extract on Alsace-Lorraine. Herr Hoch, another Socialist, accused Chancellor Michaelis of fooling the Reichstag again.

The Frankfurter Zeitung says it is understandable that, as up-to-date America is the only country in arms against Germany which has replied to the Papal peace note, German statesmen should maintain a certain reticence.

"However," adds the Zeitung, "there was every opportunity at yesterday's session of the Reichstag Committee to speak with more clearness and definiteness about things which could only be breathed diplomatically in answer to the Pope. This did not happen, and the speeches in this respect have not fulfilled the most modest hopes. We belong to those who desire a definite, open statement of Germany's attitude regarding Belgium. Von Kühlmann laid great stress on the unity of the country, showing that the need of maintaining domestic unity was the real reason why he did not dare go further in what he said."

Definite statements at the session in approval of the Government's attitude are attributed to Erzberger, who, it appears, expressed through support of the Chancellor's attitude and said that it was perfectly clear and in every sense good, and that only thus was the unity of the German people possible.

The tone of all the speeches shows that German diplomacy is directed, as Bethmann Hollweg intended, to prevent a direct breach between the Right and the Left, but still more that German policy is intended to produce abroad a belief that this threatened breach between the Right and the Left has been successfully avoided. It may be, as one would gather from leading articles in the German papers last night, that the collapse of Russia has actually restored the German's belief in their ability to maintain the military situation as it is now until the Allies are exhausted. That, at any rate, is the impression Germany wishes to propagate.

To one passage in von Kühlmann's speech special attention may be called—his reference to the solidarity of Continental interests. It is significant that this catchword, invented by von Tirpitz and the annexationists, has been adopted as the basis of his policy by the new Foreign Secretary. It will be remembered that this so-called solidarity of Continental interests has always meant German schemes against the British Empire and America. The Amsterdam Telegraaf observes tonight that the answer must be with guns.

WANTS GERMANS PUNISHED.

British Seamen's Union Leader Denounces Teutonic Peace.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Joseph Havelock Wilson, General Secretary of the National Seamen's Union, in a speech at Middlesbrough last night, said that all wanted peace, "but we're not going to have a German peace. It has been said that it is impossible to have a military victory. Well, if we cannot win the war with such a great weight as that of the United States, we do not deserve to win."

Wilson added that if he could have his way and the seamen asked him "we would deliberately punish the Germans for the crimes they have committed." He enjoined all the seamen "to keep the flag at the masthead, never to surrender, and to go straight on with the determination that we are going to win and bring about peace on satisfactory lines."

The speaker said that some pacifists "who love every country but their own," would make believe that Great Britain was as guilty in this war as the Germans.

"I can only describe them," he said, "as very foolish men."

PERSHING TO RECEIVE FULL GENERAL'S RANK

Baker Plans Revival of Title Held By Washington, Grant, Sheridan and Sherman.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Revival of the grade of full General is planned by the War Department to provide suitable rank for Major Gen. John J. Pershing, commanding the American expeditionary forces in France.

It was learned tonight that Secretary Baker already had submitted the department's program—which includes provision for the title General to be held by the officer serving as Chief of Staff and the making of several Lieutenant Generals to command corps under General Pershing—to the Senate Military Committee, and that legislation carrying it into effect was to be pressed for prompt passage when Congress reconvened in December.

TRUTH

It's surprising how many New York Stores have suddenly discovered that their clothes are Hand-Tailored since Franklin Simon introduced the genuine article to New York Men.

We suppose if we announced that we had discovered the North Pole, many of the stores referred to would claim that they have Resident Buyers there.

They simply cannot resist the temptation to take advantage of other people's opportunities.

But the Truth as to Franklin Simon Hand-Tailored Clothes does not suffer thereby, but rather, as Shakespeare says:

"It shines like a good deed in a naughty world!"

MAYOR OPENS FIRE ON TAMMANY

local government and have asked me, in the name of a public duty, that I recognize, in the name of decency in municipal affairs, in the name of effective and serviceable government for the people of the city, but above all, in the name of loyalty to the country that we, as American citizens, owe, to make this fight against these forces of darkness that are arrayed against America, and against its greatest city.

"Now, there are two kinds of divided allegiance—the divided allegiance that cries 'patriotism' and points to the flag and at the same time insidiously preaches the doctrine of the Hohenzollern; that is one kind of divided allegiance, a kind of divided allegiance that we must stamp out if we would secure the future of America. And the other is the divided allegiance that recognizes or rather accepts public office at the hands of the people of this city, but renders service to a small group of self-seeking forces that stand behind in the darkness. And that divided allegiance must likewise be stamped out if we would protect and insure the future of our city.

"Now, my fellow citizens, we have for years past been engaged in an effort to divorce from municipal business questions of national politics, recognising that the method of cleaning a street, the method of lighting a highway, the method of supplying pure drinking water for the people of the city, the method of administering the great social services—charities, correction and health—are not affected by the principles of government that guide parties in national affairs. We have been trying to get politics in the national party sense, out of municipal affairs.

"Let me say that never in the history of the city has there been an opportunity such as that which is offered today to secure an administration for the City of New York that owes its election and its nomination to no political party and to no political group, as this one will if it be re-elected to office. My friends, that we do not invite the support of every party man in the City of New York—Democrat, Republican, Socialist—not that we do not invite their support in the name of effective government, and in the name of loyal government, but that if this administration is returned to office it will owe no debts and no obligations except to the people of the city, from whom it takes its title. Now, one thing I have already noticed in the force of the campaign which has scarcely begun, and that is for the first time in his political career I have compelled Mr. Murphy to come out and declare himself in the open for his own ticket."

The Answer to Murphy.

The Mayor picked up a copy of the statement given out by Mr. Murphy, and went on:

"He did so in a statement that he issued today, in which he said that my charge that the ticket that Tammany has put in the field is not to be associated with those forces that have been working covertly and malignly to break down the effectiveness of a National Government in this war, because the rank and the file of Tammany Hall are loyal to America, because their young men have gone into the service of the nation. Of course they have; of course the rank and file of Tammany Hall are loyal to America. Whoever would undertake to charge that this great group of citizens of this city are in their hearts and minds disloyal to their country?

"But Mr. Murphy did not answer for those who have nominated this ticket, and who control these nominees. He did not discuss with me the loyalty of the man who nominated Hylan, Mr. Hearst.

He did not discuss the consistent policy of Mr. Hearst, beginning with the outbreak of this war, preaching the doctrine of the Hohenzollern and the Hapsburg, preaching the doctrine of the conqueror and of the oligarch, that doctrine which began with advocating that this country merely stand by and squeeze all the profit out of the warring nations that it could, until Germany was stopped at the battle of the Marne, and then began to point out the horrors of the war, and to show how it would benefit America to undertake to open negotiations for peace, in order that a peace favorable to the nation that had occupied another's territory might be effected at that time, and how then, as the war went on, that doctrine was continuously preached, pointing out that there were equal equities between the warring nations, and advocating interference here and there in the interest of Germany, and against the interests of certain of the Allies, down to the time that war was declared by the United States in protection of our interests, and for the sacred principles of human liberty involved. And then began to preach the doctrine that this country in this war ought not to send her men over there to fight the battles of democracy and to protect the territory of this country against the future invasion that would follow if we did not.

"That consistent course is one upon which Mr. Murphy has remained silent. Mr. Murphy has not discussed in this statement that he put out the activities of his friend, his close adviser, his intimate, Judge Cohalan."

Hisses for Hearst and Cohalan.

Hisses had greeted every mention of Hearst's name, but when he mentioned Cohalan they spread all over the hall. Raising his voice, the Mayor continued:

"Judge Cohalan we know now has been active even up to the point of the declaration of war in working insidiously against the interests of one of the great allied nations and against the neutrality of the United States. Mr. Murphy said nothing about that note which was discovered among the von Igel documents, von Igel, the German spy."

The Mayor here read the document found among the von Igel papers, which mentioned the name of Justice Cohalan, and went on:

"And this after Germany had sent Americans to the bottom of the Atlantic upon the Lusitania! This is the man closely associated with these forces that stand behind this ticket. On that Mr. Murphy remains silent. Mr. Murphy is not taking us into his confidence in this reply concerning all those forces—O'Leary, Cohalan, Hearst—all of them working insidiously behind this ticket nominated—why? Because, ladies and gentlemen, those forces do not want a government in the City of New York that they know will stand with President Wilson and the Government of the United States in every effort that that Government makes to bring this war to a successful conclusion.

"Mr. Murphy said, talking of loyalty and Americanism, 'Where do you find any better than our county ticket?' I suppose he was referring to the New York County ticket. He could not have been referring to the Bronx County ticket, for that is headed by Henry Bruckner, who voted to keep Americans in cowardly idleness and off our ships when he voted against the McLemore resolution. To keep them off the ships because he was defending the doctrine that if an American went on those ships it was well within the proprieties and the equities for Germany to sink the ship and send him to the bottom of the Atlantic. So Mr. Murphy could not have in mind his candidate for Borough President in the Bronx, for his record upon a question of Americanism is not quite such as to recommend him to the people of this city.

"Then he said, in comment, and, by the way, perhaps I ought to apologize, you may think, for discussing issues with Mr. Murphy, a boss. No, that is not the case, because Mr. Murphy and Mr. Hearst are really the joint candidates for Mayor upon this ticket. And as a candidate for Mayor, Hylan has shown no great disposition to discuss this matter since yesterday. I must discuss it with his principals. So Mr. Murphy says that Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft, who came down to the City Hall, or rather one of them, Mr. Roosevelt, came down to the City Hall, and the other wrote, to urge me to undertake this fight, don't count for much, because they don't vote in the City of New York. That is his standard—vote. Well, I think that Theodore Roosevelt counts for something. I think that ex-President Taft counts for something. And I am willing to stake the result of this election upon a comparison, in point of Americanism, capacity, honesty, anything that you will, between Judge Cohalan and Judge Hughes, and between Hearst and Theodore Roosevelt."

"Hang Hearst!" "Hang Cohalan!"

The mention of Colonel Roosevelt's name brought out a storm of cheering. This was continued when the Mayor mentioned Mr. Hughes. But at the mention of Mr. Hearst's name a man stood up and shouted at the top of his lungs. "Hang Hearst!" There was handclapping, and from another part of the hall another cried, "Hang Cohalan!" The Mayor appeared to be startled, and while he hesitated there came several cries of "Hang all of them!" The Mayor then proceeded:

"While this question, this great and fundamental question that I have been discussing with you, affects at every point the city government and therefore must and will be discussed in this campaign, affects it because the services of city government may be called upon at any time to co-operate with the services of the nation.

"Through the Mayor's Committee on National Defense we have co-operated in securing enlistments for army and for navy; we have co-operated in food control; we have co-operated by putting docks and parks and public lands at the disposition of the army and the navy, for the more effective prosecution of this war, and while the question touches the city government at every point and a municipal campaign this year cannot be conducted without regard to that great question, still I am here tonight to discuss with you questions that affect directly the civic life of the City of New York as well."

From then on the Mayor told of the things that had been accomplished during his administration. He launched first into a defense of the so-called Gary school plan. He said Tammany had raised a cry about the public schools and had charged that he had attempted to deliver the schools into the hands of Rockefeller and the foundations. This charge, the Mayor said, was based only upon the fact that Abraham Flexner and Raymond Fosdick had held office in the Board of Education. The Mayor said that Mr. Flexner had been appointed by Mayor Gaynor and Mr. Fosdick by himself, but that he took full responsibility for them. The crowd laughed when he declared:

"Even if these two men had actually represented the Rockefeler interests, the Board of Education is made up of forty-six men, and if we are to argue that these two could override the other forty-four and control the affairs of the Board of Education, we must credit them with almost superhuman intelligence and capacity."

The Mayor said that in attempting to establish the Gary system the administration had simply undertaken to democratize the public schools of the city.

"We have undertaken," he continued, "to bring to the children of all the people, of all the City of New York exactly those special advantages and opportunities that hitherto have been enjoyed only by the children of the rich in expensive, private schools. That is an accurate statement of the result aimed at, and very largely the result attained."

Room for Children.

The Mayor explained that when the Administration took office there were about 120,000 school children either on part time or double session. The city, he said, did not have $50,000,000 with which to put up new school buildings, so a plan was sought to give the children full time for every school day. A plan, he said, had been worked out in Gary, Ind., and this was adopted in order to give a school building its maximum capacity, as follows:

"By supplying classrooms enough for a full school of children, and playgrounds, auditoriums, science rooms, and workshops enough for another full school of children at the same time. While one group are in the classrooms, the others are in the auditorium, science room, workshop, or playground. The plan consisted of alternating so that the school building is used to its maximum capacity for a full school day and for almost twice the number of children that would use the school building under the old plan in the City of New York."

The Mayor explained that play space had to be found in order to take the children off the streets. The work plan in the schools, he said, was not to fit boys and girls to go out into industry or to make artisans of them, but to develop their aptitudes the better to develop their minds. The Mayor added:

"I am convinced that this work, study, and play plan is good. I believe that New York City ought to thoroughly test out the experiment that has been undertaken. We ought to give it a fair trial. If there is something in it for the advantage of the children of New York, we ought to have it. And if, when it has been fairly tested, defects are found, we ought to cure them. That is a matter of administration for the Board of Education."

Taking up other work of the administration the Mayor said:

"There is another thing that Mr. Murphy and his candidates, pulled by the strings that operate them, whether they be in the hands of Untermeyer or of Hearst, are fond of saying, and that is, that this administration has been controlled by malefactors of great wealth, has been inspired against the interests of the ordinary people of the City of New York by big business. Now, let me point out to you a few of the things that this administration has undertaken for the ordinary citizen where the interests of some big business have been involved on the other side."

The Mayor specified the newly established Department of Markets which, he said, had been obtained after a hard fight with the Legislature. He told of the work done by his Committee on Food Supply and the Food Aid Committee. He mentioned what had been done to reach an agreement with the coal dealers and in the settlement of labor disputes, and then took up the work of the Police Department. He said that the former partnership between the police and crime had been broken up and that gunmen no longer terrorized the city. The police today, he said, has new activities, and dwelt upon how the children were made to feel that the policemen were not their enemies but friends to go to in time of trouble and distress. He was applauded when he said:

"We have a police force that knows how to do social work, and we have a police force that knows how to maintain order; that knows how to protect the peace of the people of the city, and that knows how to stop disorder and sedition wherever they may show their heads."

The Mayor took up the work of the Charities Department, both in public and private institutions, and concluded:

"Now, my fellow-citizens, I have discussed with you some of the questions and some of the achievements of the present city administration. The question that is presented to the voters this year is whether they prefer to re-establish profligacy and waste, bad service, dishonesty and inefficiency in the service of the City of New York; whether they want to bring back the days of Tammany and Murphy, Murphy-controlled Tammany in New York, or whether they want the kind of service that I have outlined to you tonight to continue, administered from the seat of government at the City Hall.

"That is the city question, and the other, the broader national question, is whether we shall have in the City Hall a Government inspired by the ideals of America and desiring only to serve the people of the United States in the successful prosecution of this war to a victorious issue, or whether we are to have government inspired by influences that are not friendly to the ideals of America."

The Mayor urged those present to register this year and to vote on Election Day whether for him or his opponents.

Following the Mayor's address, Marcus M. Marks, candidate for re-election as Borough President of Manhattan, was introduced. In accepting the renomination Mr. Marks said he stood squarely behind his four years' record as head of the Borough of Manhattan. He told of some of the problems and difficulties associated with the office, and said that in the twenty-five years he was engaged in active business he never worked harder than in the past four years. Nevertheless, he went on, he felt recompensed in view of the accomplishments of the Fusion administration.

While there had been differences of opinion among the members of the Board of Estimate during the administration, Mr. Marks continued, he believed that the particular differences that developed prevented many serious mistakes and added to the good results of the Mitchel régime. In concluding the Borough President said:

"I have always been frank and outspoken according to the dictates of my judgment and my conscience, and it is only right for me to say here and now that I shall continue to stand openly and strongly for my principles and policies. I have been and shall be no man's man. I heartily believe in an unmuzzled government. No boss has in the slightest degree dictated to or controlled me, or the other Fusion members of the Board of Estimate, nor will any boss control us in the future. It is this faith in the independence of Fusion that has always made me heart and soul for nonpartisanship in city government."

William H. Ransom, candidate for District Attorney, the next speaker, renewed his attack on District Attorney Edward Swann. He told of the challenge, as yet unanswered, which he had sent to Mr. Swann urging him to debate before the public the manner in which the office of the District Attorney was being conducted. He proposed, he said, to tell the public of the state of affairs which existed under Mr. Swann and his assistants who, he asserted, had been selected by Leader Murphy. Mr. Ransom's assertion that recent events demanded the defeat of the present incumbent of the District Attorney's office was greeted with much applause.

"I have a conception of the kind of office which you would have there," he said. "I have a conception of an office which treats men fairly and justly and decently and humanly; an office which gives to the young men of this town a square deal, an office which does not make up its mind as to whether a man should be railroaded through or not, and then start to get those it has been determined to put through.

"I have a conception of an office which, as your Chairman has said, tries its cases, 'man fashion,' in the courts, and does not use the slime or the slur as a method of political manipulation; an office which is a law office and not a partisan tool, an office which is run as a law office should be, and is not run as a partisan press bureau; an office which is a great human instrumentality for justice and fair play in the community, a justice which means the confidence of our people in their laws, and a confidence of the people in their freedom from molestation at the hands of those who use public office for political purpose.

Adamson Attacks Tammany.

Fire Commissioner Robert Adamson, the next speaker, attacked the record of Tammany during the last twenty years, during which, he said, that organization elected three Mayors and two Governors. He indirectly referred to Tammany's Bureau of City Inquiry, which he characterized as "a paid slander bureau to blacken members of the present city administration."

"Three times in twenty years," he said, "Tammany Hall has elected Mayors in this city, and in every instance the man elected has either gone out denounced by the public or denouncing Tammany Hall. The first was Van Wyck, whose administration, with its red light, its Ramapo, its Ice Trust, and its Devery scandals, so humiliated the sense of decency of this city that it was overwhelmingly voted out of power at the end of his term.

"The second was McClellan, who, during his first term, attempted the impossible feat of keeping on good terms with Tammany Hall and in the good esteem of the public, and he, realizing the impossibility of that task, at the very beginning of his second administration repudiated Tammany Hall, and throughout his second administration was at war with them.

"And the third was Gaynor. Elected not because Tammany wanted him elected, not because he was the type of man that they desired to have in office, but elected because the exigencies of the situation, they thought, demanded it, and because he was a Mayor, because he would not turn over the office and the patronage of the city to Tammany Hall, he, at the end of his term, was coolly and contemptuously rejected for renomination."

In view of past performances, Mr. Adamson asked, could Judge Hylan expect to carry out the "beautiful program" which Tammany had presented. Whatever Judge Hylan's intentions might be, the speaker said, he was the candidate of a system which has never controlled the City Government without scandal and without disgrace.

Controller William A. Prendergast made a vigorous appeal for the re-election of Mayor Mitchel, whose Americanism, he asserted, was of the highest type.

"I am for him because during these nearly four years he has been rightly called a genuine American Mayor," the Controller said. "People have said to me within the last few days, do not push so hard on this American business; we are all patriots. Every one thinks just as strongly of his country as Mr. Mitchel's friends. Are they? Well, if so, let them act like patriots. We judge men by their actions not by their words, and some of them have not spoken enough words yet to determine whether they have got any ideas on Americanism or not. I said this had been a genuinely American administration. The public has no idea, because it is not necessary, nor possibly would it be wise—no, it would be unwise for the City Government to disclose the work which it has been doing maintaining order, helping the United States Government, acting as its strong right arm, since this great war commenced."

In closing Controller Prendergast said that the recent refusal of Judge Hylan to ask a simple question based on that candidate's attitude on the McLemore resolution he had had four hours in which to make a reply was proof that he was afraid to make a statement unless authorized by Murphy.

ITALY PREPARING GREAT NEW DRIVE

Army May Push Toward Laibach as Allied Fleets Join in Attack on Trieste.

AUSTRIA TAKES ALARM

Withdraws Nearly Whole of Her Forces from Eastern Fronts to Meet the New Peril.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Semi-official advices from Rome, reaching Washington today, indicate that the Italian offensive on the Austrian front is now entering the second and most important stage of the battle on the Bainsizza Plateau and both sides are making extraordinary preparations for the contest. General Cadorna, who has been in Rome for a conference with the Council of Ministers, has been consolidating his positions on the Bainsizza Plateau with the view to flanking Monte San Daniele and undertaking a new offensive toward Lubiano, (Laibach).

Meanwhile the French and British have sent additional warships to the northern waters of the Aoriatic, and Italian troops may soon strike at Trieste in a combined land and sea offensive, aided by Entente naval forces.

The cablegram reads:

"The battle on the Bainsizza Plateau is not to be considered as finished. It is only the first phase of the battle which is over, with this result, that the strategic advantage is now on the Italian side. New operations are in preparation and the activity of the artillery is intensified every day From the Austrian press we learn that following the last visit of the Austrian Emperor along the Isonzo front considerable changes in the disposition of the forces have been made.

"The Austrian troops in Galicia and Bukowina have been withdrawn and transferred to the Italian front. Also from the Russian front most of the Austrian troops have been withdrawn and massed along the Isonzo front in new lines of fortifications as a preparation against a new offensive.

"General Cadorna has arrived in Rome, where he has taken part in the Council of Ministers, explaining extensively the latest military operations.

"The King of Italy has just returned from an extensive visit to the French front, where he saw the French lines in Alsace, and afterward went to Rheims, Soissons, Artois, and Verdun."

ROME, Oct. 2.—"There has been moderate artillery activity along the whole front," says today's announcement from the War Office. "On the Bainsizza plateau local attacks which were attempted were at once checked by our fire. On the Carso our patrols have been very active both in the southern and northern sectors. By a surprise attack we gained some ground."

ITALIAN FORCES LINKED BY BAINSIZZA VICTORY

Communication Established Between Troops on Plateau and Those in Gargaro Pit.

By PERCEVAL GIBBON.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, Sept. 30.—There has been a lull in the fighting, but the Second Army—the army which stormed the Bainsizza Plateau, the army commanded by General Capello—knows no lulls. For this army the war is unceasing.

Now, in these quiet days, when an occasional action explodes like an unexpected shell, I have memory of Capello in his headquarters, pointing toward the heights plainly visible from the verandas of his villa, with a stout stick with which he walks, saying, in utter confidence, "Today I shall take that summit." I saw him so when Monte Santo hung in the balance. Now he had in forty-eight hours a double task to achieve, and carried both to a triumphant conclusion. The first, was to maintain his holdings on the slopes of Monte San Gabriele; the second was to perfect and make permanently tenable an line on the other side of that deep pit among the mountains which is called the Conca di Gargaro, where the plateau of Bainsizza slopes in a steep staircase of ledges to the valley of Chiapovano.

The second of the above problems was brilliantly solved yesterday by deft organisation of a movement local in extent, but of far-reaching strategic importance, which shoved back that portion of the new Austrian positions which impeded Italian connection between the forces on the Bainsizza highlands and that mobile force which occupies the Conca di Gargaro. Here, as already explained, the highlands descend in steep terraces to the great valley of Chiapovano, which is to the Austrians further south the main artery of supplies and the final channel of retreat in the event of disaster.

When, in August, Italian cavalry moved against the mouth of the valley, they were stopped by masses of wire, and the epic heroism of that day has still to be recounted. Yesterday's attack shifted the storm centre of action toward a point further north along the valley, threatening that stretched throat lower down, so to speak, and it succeeded brilliantly. The brigades employed were those of Venice, consisting of the Eighty-third and Eighty-fourth Regiments of Infantry, and of Tortona, consisting of the 257th and 258th Regiments, veteran formations whose part in the war has included a share in almost all the late actions across the Isonzo. To them was added a company of those weird heroes, the Arditi, who belong to no brigade, but were apportioned to attack by the Second Army—choice fighting spirits, volunteers every one, including the best and worst elements of Italy.

Their attack was preceded by two hours of bombardment, which opened at 6 o'clock in the morning. It was not such a bombardment as recently poured 40,000 shells a day on the granite forehead of San Gabriele, but it sufficed, and under shelter of it the Arditi raced up on the Austrian line, the bombers leading and the bayonet men following on. The Austrians, as always, were in dugouts. The Arditi, ripe for slaughter, were on them before they had recovered from the shelling.

Speaking humanly, for the moment my sympathy is with those Austrians. They were mostly Poles and Lithuanians, the latter speaking German, fresh from the peaceful resort of the front in the east, where they had hardly heard a shot fired in anger for five months. They had been fetched across the continent of Europe in four days from Galicia with all their artillery, and forthwith shoved into the line upon San Gabriele, of all places on earth. There they had been shelled and bombed and bayoneted, and generally bedevilled for nine days, after which what remained of them was withdrawn and sent to the Bainsizza Plateau, where but for the Second Army they would be yet. Something over 1,400 of them, however, are better off. They are prisoners, including about fifty officers, and these were the poor beggars who looked up from their shallow and unfinished dugouts to see the Arditi, bombs in both hands and avid for fight, come spouting in among them.

The Italian losses were grotesquely small. I have heard an estimate of twelve dead and twenty-three wounded. The Austrian losses, besides prisoners, in this small affair might be reckoned at nearly ten times those figures. They are certainly much more if one includes those who were slaughtered last evening, when they gathered their reserves together and made their half-dozen futile counterattacks, each one of which was cut down as it approached. The ground taken is firmly held.

TAMMANY'S CHOICE OF NEWSPAPERS

Hearst Publications and Staats-Zeitung Among Those Named for Election Advertising.

Of the $150,000 which the law sets aside for election advertising in New York City, $80,000 has been distributed by the Democratic element of the Board of Elections, which has the distribution of half of the election advertising expenditures. Four of the papers chosen by the Democrats are: The New York American, The Evening Journal, the Staats-Zeitung, and the Warheit. They, with The Morning Telegraph, have awards of $15,000 each.

Edward F. Boyle, President of the Board of Elections, a Tammany man, was one of those who had to do with the choosing of the newspapers for the Democratic allotment. James Kane, also a Tammany man, aided him. Victor F. Ridder, Vice President and Treasurer of the Staats-Zeitung, was recently forced to resign from the Mayor's Committee on National Defense.

¶ Every man in Manhattan owes it to himself to see the Saks' selections in Suits for Fall. We have always been proud of our productions, but to be able to show the variations in models, the almost limitless variety in patterns, and original color combinations in which Saks' suits for Fall have been developed, would make the most modest individual swell up like a Pouter pigeon with pride.

Woolen mills have been against the introduction of new patterns which made it still more difficult to accomplish that which we have achieved, but no matter what color or pattern you may lean toward, you'll find it here. And what is more the style of the suit you select will be fully in keeping with the marked individuality of the weave in which it has been developed. # MURPHY IS AROUSED BY PATRIOTISM ISSUE

"Tammany Will Not Support Any Man Who Isn't Loyal," Says the Leader.

HAS MANY MEN IN SERVICE

Calls Alton B. Parker "That Boob from Esopus" and Pledges Organization to President.

While Judge John F. Hylan, Tammany candidate for Mayor, remained silent yesterday on the issues of the campaign as well as upon the demonstration given to Mayor Mitchel at the City Hall on Monday when the Mayor announced himself as an independent candidate for renomination, Charles F. Murphy, leader of the Fourteenth Street organization, gave out his longest interview since he has been leader. Mr. Murphy was bluntly outspoken, and said he meant it when he referred to former Judge Alton B. Parker of the Court of Appeals and Democratic candidate for President in 1914, as "that boob from Esopus." The interview began when Mr. Murphy was asked if he had any comment to make upon Mayor Mitchel's campaign. This is what he said:

"Yes, I noticed that some well-known out-of-town residents nominated a candidate for Mayor yesterday. There was Colonel Roosevelt, from Oyster Bay, and ex-President Taft of New Haven sent a letter, and that boob from Esopus—oh, he wasn't there, but he was listed to make a speech. Charles E. Hughes was there, and that shows he is grateful. Mayor Mitchel was for Hughes for President last year, and now Hughes is for Mitchel. Nothing wrong about that.

"Just put it in the paper that we up here at Tammany Hall are not afraid of that Americanism issue, and that patriotic issue which Mayor Mitchel and his friends are trying so hard to raise. Tammany Hall will not support any man who isn't loyal. There's no pussyfooting about that, is there? Every man on the New York County ticket was born right here in this city. On Gettysburg battlefield the biggest monument is to the men of the Forty-second New York Volunteers, and if anybody wants to know the battles in which that regiment distinguished itself, there's a tablet on which they are all carved, right here in the hall. Al Smith's father was killed in the civil war in which Mayor Mitchel's father fought on the Confederate side.

"And as for what Tammany Hall is doing today, why, Johnny O'Neill, one of our three stenographers here, tried five times to get in the service, and finally was fixed up somehow (physically) and now he is in the selective draft contingent that goes off on Thursday. So, with our other two boys here—our stenographers—they go off Thursday. They are Tom Doran and Alfred Baulz.

"There must be thirty Tammany boys from my district, the Twelfth Assembly, in the Sixty-ninth Regiment, and next Thursday there must be fifty Tammany boys and sons of Tammany men going off with the draft contingent. Jimmy Hagen has three sons in the military service, Hayes has a son in the service, and Judge Mess has two boys in the service. My nephew, William H. Murphy, is in the Sixty-ninth Regiment, and Charles Culkins has two boys in the service. I could go on and name a hundred Tammany men who are in the United States fighting service.

"The people know it all. I don't have to say all this. The people know whether Tammany Hall is loyal or not. The people knew just how much weight there is to Mayor Mitchel's issue of patriotism and Americanism. We are not afraid of that issue.

"There will be no hesitation in meeting that issue. A letter has just been sent to the Speakers' Bureau and to every candidate reminding them they are to advocate the buying of Liberty bonds in every speech. Tammany is always ready to uphold President Wilson's acts, and to vote for him, too. All Tammany men in Congress have supported his war measures. I challenge anybody to question Tammany in any degree on its patriotism and its Americanism. Two years before this war you will find that we adopted resolutions urging a larger army and navy. We were for preparedness. Tammany clubs have all adopted resolutions offering their building to the Federal Government for any service, and they are open, ready, and free for patriotic meetings."

Justice Dugro 62 Years Old.

Justice Philip Henry Dugro celebrated yesterday his sixty-second birthday and his thirty-second year on the bench. He became a Judge of the Superior Court in 1887, and is now serving the fourth year of his third term on the Supreme Court bench. He will be retired at the age of 70 before his present term expires.

POUNDS COMES OUT IN SUPPORT OF MAYOR

Announcement Arouses Great Enthusiasm in Brooklyn Meeting —Cheers for Mitchel.

More than 3,000 persons received Mayor Mitchel and the other Fusion candidates with great enthusiasm at a meeting in the Brooklyn Academy of Music last night, following the meeting held in Cooper Union. When the Mayor, who was the chief speaker, entered the hall the audience got to its feet and cheered for five minutes.

Those who spoke besides Mayor Mitchel were Borough President Lewis H. Pounds, Republican nominee for re-election, who flatly announced that he would support the candidacy of Mayor Mitchel and all the other Fusion candidates, Robert Adamson, candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, and Controller Prendergast.

The crowd took great interest in the speech of Mr. Pounds, because it was not known until he had made his public announcement last night whether he would support Mr. Mitchel or Mr. Bennett. He kept his audience waiting for the announcement through a long speech, and the crowd finally became impatient and loud cries for him to assert whom he would support came from all parts of the hall. Finally, a man with a loud voice in one of the galleries kept shouting at intervals:

"Who are you going to support for Mayor? Who are you going to support for Mayor?"

"I have taken a great pride in being a part of the administration of the past four years," said Mr. Pounds. "I cannot tonight do aught else than support the men I have worked with. If I did not support them I would be admitting that they did wrong, which I shall not do under any circumstances. I purpose to do all that I can to re-elect them."

The Mayor was cheered when he opened his speech with an attack on Hearst, saying:

"Divided allegiance is represented by Mr. Hearst, who puts the Star-Spangled Banner on the front page and tries to stab his country in the back in his editorial columns. The divided allegiance has led that man, the most sinister influence in public life in America, to preach the doctrine of the Hohenzollerns from the day the war in Europe broke out down to the present moment."

He devoted most of his speech to the charges of District Attorney Swann regarding the land deals with the city, in which ex-Senator Reynolds was interested, and attacked the District Attorney bitterly for misrepresentations.

Mayor Mitchel said that the proposal to acquire Rockaway Point for a city park came first from a local committee at Jamaica, which, in 1904, urged that the city should buy the property. Two years later, after some agitation of the project, he said that the State Legislature authorized the city to spend up to $2,500,000 for property on the seashore for park or hospital purposes.

One of the leading proponents of the purchase of the Rockaway Park site at that time, Mayor Mitchel said, was President Dowling of the Board of Aldermen, one of the leaders of Tammany Hall. Another influence in favor of the project, he said, came from charitable and philanthropic societies and institutions who were supporting in the movement Jacob Riis, an ardent advocate of the acquisition of the point for a city park. He said:

"The District Attorney's office, which has respect neither for the living or the dead, has not hesitated in this connection to cast a contemptible slur on the memory of Jacob Riis."

Mayor Mitchel quoted from Board of Estimate records to show that Controller Metz had twice reported favorably on the project of purchasing the Rockaway Point site and to show that the Tammany Board of Estimate of 1907 had sought to acquire the property at a private sale, without condemnation proceedings, but that the owners of the property would not agree to it. During this period, he said, the project was opposed by Bird S. Coler on the ground that the title to the property was not clear, but later this difficulty was removed by a complete investigation by the Corporation Counsel who reported that the flaw in the title had been removed by an agreement between the owners and the United States Government. Most of the difficulties in the way of the purchase had been swept away by this time, Mayor Mitchel said, but the panic in 1917 caused the entire project to be dropped.

This was the condition, he said, in 1909, when the plan was recommended anew to the Board of Estimate, of which Mayor Gaynor, Controller Prendergast, Borough President McAneny, and Mr. Mitchel himself, then President of the Board of Aldermen, were members. The first step toward reopening the project, he said, was a letter from Dr. J. W. Brannan of Bellevue Hospital, urging the purchase of the property as a site for a hospital for sufferers from bone tuberculosis.

The other speakers talked from the notes they had used at the Cooper Union meeting, although there were some digressions when they paused to answer the questions of persons in the audience.

BAGS 47 HUN FLIERS, ALL IN FIVE MONTHS

Boy Aviator with Victoria Cross Stirs Enthusiasm of Canadian Club Diners.

DESCRIBES NEW METHODS

Armies at the Front Delighted That America Recognizes Value of Air Supremacy.

A boy, looking not all of his 23 years and weighing not much more than 100 pounds, stood before 800 members and guests of the Canadian Club at a dinner in his honor last night at the Biltmore and told how in 110 fights in five months he brought down forty-seven German airplanes. He was Major W. A. Bishop of Canada, member of the Royal Flying Corps, who left the front two weeks ago, bringing back the Victoria Cross and a string of other decorations and the reputation of having bagged more Hun fliers than any other British aviator.

There was nothing dramatic about the way Major Bishop told his story. He said he was just telling what he had come back from the front to tell fellow-Canadians who are going over to help back the Germans over the Rhine. He surprised his hearers when he said that of late days most of the fighting was done at altitudes of 22,000 feet and more. "Then," he said, "there is always danger of being attacked from above."

"Bombing is an interesting part of our work," he explained. "First all the bombing was done from about 12,000 feet. In the battle of the Somme one great airman missed a bridge with two of his three bombs at 12,000 feet. Then he flew down to about 200 feet and blew up the bridge with his last bomb. Now we all do it."

Telling of the work against the enemy's lines during an infantry attack, he said: "As soon as the soldiers go over the top, we dive down on the Hun trenches. Actual damage we do is little, but the moral effect is great. The Germans get scared to death, and our men cheer like mad, for they think we are killing thousands of Huns."

Major Bishop said the air fighting had reached the stage where the allied airmen were keeping all of the fighting on the other side of the line.

"The greatest thing to teach the new men," he said, "is how to shoot. A machine may be riddled and get back safe. Some of the motors will take fifty bullets and not go dead. The safest and only way is to get the aviator. Get him in the head if possible or in the upper part of the body. And don't trust to the bullet. One bullet is never certain to kill a Hun. Get groups of them into him, hunks of them into his head—that's what I tell 'em. When you can bring them down in flames—that is the nicest way. But one can't be sure of doing that. I shot six bullets into one petrol tank—incendiary bullets—and the thing wouldn't burn.

"One evening I was climbing through a cloud bank about 10,000 feet up, thinking only of getting through that cloud and going five or six miles behind the German lines, when I heard the rattle of machine guns. There they were, three of them, coming at me, straight on. Well, I started firing at 300 yards—so did they. When the first fellow was 100 yards away I was letting him have it. Then he swerved. He passed me at about ten yards in flames. I went at the second machine and let him have it. He fell, and the reports showed that the action was so quick that the two machines fell 100 yards apart.

FUSION GOES AFTER REPUBLICAN VOTES

Elated over the success of the demonstration at the City Hall on Monday, when Mayor Mitchell agreed to run as an independent candidate for re-election, the Fusion campaign managers laid their plans yesterday to bring over to the Mayor the support of the bulk of the Republican strength in the city. The Mayor's supporters hope to convince the organization Republicans who are inclined to remain "regular" by supporting William M. Bennett that the Mayor's candidacy has been lifted out of party lines and become a national issue through the indorsement of such Republicans as William H. Taft, Charles E. Hughes, Colonel Roosevelt and Oscar Straus.

From many sources Emory R. Buckner, manager of the Fusion campaign, yesterday received offers of support for the Mayor from organization Republicans. Bennett, it is expected, will be deserted by his organization in Mitchel's favor. The Fusion managers expect that the question of the Republican organizations of all boroughs indorsing Mitchel will be settled in a few days when the County Committees meet. The New York County Committee will meet at Bryant Hall on Thursday night. It is almost certain, it was said last night, that a resolution indorsing Mr. Mitchel's candidacy will be introduced. That the Bennett supporters in the committee will make a vigorous protest is expected.

The "Big Brother" of the people

Policeman—Friend or Enemy?

THERE is a story told of an immigrant from Russia who landed in New York and proceeded to walk up Fifth Avenue to his destination, somewhere in the Fifties.

He carried a trunk on his back and was followed by his wife.

They were both very ignorant, very foreign, very rustic. They wanted to cross the Avenue. A long line of automobiles was rolling by.

Suddenly the traffic policeman spied the two pitiful figures. He put up his hand and the stream of splendid vehicles halted. He motioned to the man and woman and they safely crossed the street. And when they landed on the opposite sidewalk, the woman, choking with tears, said to her man:

"Ah, Pachom! this surely must be a land of equality! For did you not see the soldier stop all the Magnificences in their carriages and help us to cross the street?"

This woman, coming from a land where those in uniform were the oppressors of the people, realized that she had found a city where the police were the friends and protectors of the people.

That is the spirit of the Mitchel administration. That is the mind of Police Commissioner Woods. It is to make the poor, the weak, the friendless man and woman, realize that the policeman is their servant, their friend, set in his place and dressed in his uniform to Help, and not to Hurt.

His business is to befriend and protect New York's citizens.

It is not to club, and abuse, and arrest, except as these things are necessary in order to insure protection for those who need it.

The policeman is my big brother, and yours, with the power of the Great City behind him, to keep us all in our ways.

Few realize how the policeman has been transformed from Bugaboo to Big Brother by the Wood's idea.

He still chases thieves, arrests rowdies, clubs the roughs, and is a terror to evil-doers, but he is doing a lot of other things these days.

He lectures the children in the schools about street accidents. He drills the boys in the Junior Police.

He gives the boys and girls presents from a grand Christmas Tree at the station house.

In other days when a criminal had finished his term in prison he was hounded by the police; now the police have an employment bureau for these unfortunates, and have helped 800 of them to get jobs and make a fresh start.

Today the New York policeman is the People's Friend and Protector.

They respect him, he respects himself, and we are all proud of the force.

If you want to maintain this standard of efficiency and preserve the finest police force in the world for the finest city in the world—

DESIGN NEW MOTOR TO OUTSPEED U-BOAT

EXPERTS OF ALLIES TEST IT

Chasers Equipped with This Engine Expected to Aid in Solving Submarine Peril.

Representatives of the United States, British, French, and Russian Governments have for some time been watching the performances of a fifty-three-foot motor boat equipped with a gasoline engine of new design invented by an American which it is hoped will aid in solving the problem of putting power enough in submarine chasers to make them cope in speed with the swiftest German submarines. The motor has a capacity of 400 horsepower, and in a run on the Sound yesterday it drove the boat at forty-one miles an hour. On board was Commander Constantin A. de Veyher, a naval architect in the Russian Navy. Nearly every day the boat, which has an anchorage at the Larchmont Yacht Club, has taken some Government representative out on a trial trip.

The inventor is C. D. Holmes, who designed the motor now widely used in the United States Life Saving Service. He started to work on the motor soon after the war began in Europe, with the aim of a design specially suited to the submarine chaser.

Gives Three Times the Power.

With this engine three times as much power can be placed in a submarine chaser in the same space, and at practically the same weight, as is possible with any engine in present use, according to the inventor. At present, according to reports from Europe, the newest German submarines have a speed several miles an hour faster than submarine chasers, so that the addition of five miles in speed to the chasers would be a great advantage in the campaign against enemy submarines. Saving of space is also a prime item, as every foot available is needed for living room and ammunition. The new engine can also be adapted for airplanes and armored tanks.

The engine is of the twin six V-type, and is the first application of this design to this kind of motor. It weighs 3,400 pounds, is eight feet four inches long and three feet ten inches in height. The test boat is equipped with two of the engines.

"A distinctive feature of our design," said Mr. Holmes, "is the taller crankcase, which not only greatly increases the accessibility to parts, but also adds to the rigidity and strength of the mechanism. All working parts are inclosed, yet every part is accessible by covered hand holes, through which the working parts can be taken out without removing the motor from its base. The use of the twin-six design, with its practically continuous impulse, reduces vibration to a minimum.

Greater Steadiness Required

"We have speed, but that has not been the chief aim, as there are other demands of equal importance. One is steadiness, an engine that will go all day and is not capable merely of short spurts. The need of this quality in hunting submarines is readily seen, as is also that of getting at the parts quickly if anything goes wrong. At 1,000 revolutions per minute this engine will turn off 500-horse power, without any strain whatever, and it can be speeded up to 1,400 revolutions, producing 400-horse power, with very little evidence of extra effort. We think a 110-foot submarine chaser, the type now used by us, would make a speed of something like twenty-five miles an hour equipped with our engines, that is two on a shaft. We produce a horsepower to every nine pounds of engine, while the ratio of those now in use is about one to twenty."

The maximum speed of submarine chasers now in use in European waters is about twenty or twenty-one miles an hour, according to the figures given out by American manufacturers of the craft, while the surface speed of a submarine has been variously given as between fifteen and twenty miles an hour. American-made chasers that were said to be capable of making twenty knots an hour were equipped with two gasoline engines of 250-horsepower each, and making 450 revolutions a minute. There has been much controversy over the seaworthiness of the chasers, although the speed has not been considered sufficient. Most of the chasers now used are 90 feet in length.

COL. HOUSE STUDYING AFTER-WAR TRADE PLAN

President Wilson Annoyed by Reports that a Peace Move is Being Considered.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—For the first time authoritative information from a high quarter was obtained today with reference to the reported undertaking of Colonel E. M. House of New York, President Wilson's friend and adviser, to gather material for use as a basis of American participation in the peace negotiations that will follow the cessation of hostilities.

President Wilson is greatly annoyed, it was learned, over the interpretation placed on the work of Colonel House that it is in line with a peace move by the United States. The President was never more determined to go forward with the war. Those close to him testify that he is firm in the intention to keep the United States in the fight until the objects for which this Government and its allies are at war are obtained.

The President has laid down the dictum that the United States will have no dealings with the German Government until the German people have a greater part in the determination of policies, a part sufficient to enable them to furnish adequate peace guarantees. The Entente Powers have accepted this attitude of the President as their own. No doubt exists in the minds of those best acquainted with the President's disposition that, much as he would like to see the war ended, he would never consent to a cessation of hostilities until he saw in prospect the realization of his fixed purpose to make the world safe for democracy.

It was denied explicitly and emphatically today in the authoritative quarter mentioned that Colonel House was engaged in preparations that contemplated any peace move by the United States. The explanation was offered that about two years ago reports began to come to this Government from its agencies in Europe with reference to conditions that would confront the trade of the world after the war, and these reports, which continue to be received, are being collated and studied by Colonel House with a view to utilising them in a practical way when trade conditions must be adjusted after the great conflict is over.

In the course of these two years many men have come to America with knowledge as to probable trade problems growing out of the war, and the President has asked these men to lay their information and views before Colonel House.

That Colonel House has called upon Justice Brandeis of the United States Supreme Court to assist him in the work he has undertaken for the President has not been made known to the President, and it is not believed by the highest officials of the Administration.

The indignation expressed today in authoritative quarters over the effort to make it appear that President Wilson was preparing for a peace move left the impression of sincerity.

COMMENDS HOUSE'S TASK.

Paris Temps Says President Wilson Governs by Foreseeing.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—The Temps, commenting on the mission given to Colonel E. M. House by President Wilson, says:

"President Wilson thinks it is impossible to govern without foreseeing and that one cannot foresee without studying. While the United States is still engaged in building its powerful war machine, its President creates an instrument that will serve later to prepare for peace. This department of study is confided to Colonel House, a sagacious man who keeps himself outside of politics.

"Thus the knowledge of all the specialists may be centralized and elaborated in accord with the national interest and placed in the hands of the Government. Happy organizers are they who will build the future."

Are A War-Time Necessity

New York's 121,000 horses devour 665,500 tons of hay and 21,780,000 bushels of oats. Horse fuel, plus "keep," to the tune of $39,659,500 annually.

Approximately $9,680,000 worth of electricity per year would drive the 24,200 electric trucks necessary to supplant these animals, thus saving $29,979,500 in "fuel" alone each year. Horses represent bread. Gas is precious. Night-made "juice" is practically a by-product.

Gasoline trucks can take the place of Electrics as well as city horses but in this case 24,000 gas trucks would require 36,300,000 gallons of gasoline per year, more expert drivers, and more repair work. Keep your gas trucks for the long hauls.

G. V. Electric Trucks are a war-time necessity in city trucking.

MEXICO PROTESTS AGAINST DRAFT LAW

Ambassador Makes Formal Representations to the State Department.

CONSUL GENERAL DEFIANT

Says if Local New York Board Examines Martinez It Must "Come and Get Him."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The Mexican Ambassador, Ignacio Bonillas, has made formal representations to the State Department against the drafting of Mexicans into the national army, particularly in the border States. In some cases where it is shown that Mexicans have been taken through irregular practice of the exemption boards, the State Department has had the men released.

Other cases are complicated because of the difference in the Constitutions of the two countries. Mexico holds that a man born abroad of Mexican parents is a Mexican unless he voluntarily forfeits his citizenship. The United States holds that a person born here is an American citizen.

Juan T. Burns, Mexican Consul General in New York, who in a statement given out on Monday denounced the American selective draft law and compared the members of the 189 local exemption boards in New York to the "savage hordes of Villa," is still defiant, and Jesus Martinez, the Mexican Vice Consul, whose call for examination by Board 145 made Señor Burns angry, was still unexamined late yesterday afternoon. Burns in a letter to the board, which letter has been forwarded to Secretary of State Lansing, informed the board that he had instructed Martinez to ignore the law, and added that if the board examined Martinez it "will have to come and get him."

Mr. Burns would not add to his statement made on Monday, and Vice Consul Martinez said he had been forbidden by Mr. Burns to say anything. Mr. Martinez did not appear angry about being called, and a friend of his said he was willing to comply with the law if the Consul General would permit him to do so.

Mr. Martinez will receive a notification from Board 145 today instructing him to appear for examination at the headquarters in City College at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. The letter will inform him that under the law he must be examined and that as soon as he files the proper papers which prove him to be a citizen of Mexico he will be exempted from liability. He will also be informed that if he fails to comply with the law the matter will be turned over to the Department of Justice for such action as the case may demand.

Sixty-six men who failed to respond when called to the colors, and whose places had to be taken by alternates, were sent under guard to Camp Upton yesterday. There are still more than 400 missing, and orders have gone out to the police and the Department of Justice to round them up without delay, and turn them over to the military authorities.

It was stated yesterday that there are now more than 100 members of the New York Police Department in the military and naval services of the country, many of them soldiers of the national army.

The first indictments returned under the criminal section of the Espionage act were handed down by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday against Louis C. Fraina and Ralph Cheney, the latter a son of a professor in the University of Pennsylvania. The indictments charge that at a recent meeting in this city the defendants wilfully attempted "to cause insubordination, disloyalty, and mutiny and refusal to perform service in the military and naval forces of the United States." Both Fraina and Cheney style themselves conscientious objectors.

In a letter to THE TIMES, received yesterday, a friend of George P. Eller, reported by Local Draft Board 20, the Bronx, as having failed to report for duty when called, said that Mr. Eller had enlisted in the Tenth Engineers some time ago, and was either in France or on the way.

MEN OF OLD SEVENTH FIVE POUNDS LIGHTER

And Work at Spartanburg Camp Has Made Them 60 Per Cent. Harder.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Oct. 2.—A thorough physical examination was made of all the men and officers in the 107th Regiment (the old Seventh, N. G. N. Y.) this afternoon by Lieutenant Bancel, M. R. C. This showed that each man had lost an average of five pounds since arrival at camp from New York. This Lieutenant Bancel attributed to the working off of surplus fat. In his report he stated that the men were 60 per cent. harder than they were when they marched in the send-off parade. The severest case of illness which has developed in the regiment since the intensive training started lasted two hours and was due to the consumption of half a watermelon and five apple pies.

Tomorrow, however, the entire 107th and the Third will be "invalids," for the first thing scheduled for the morning is "typhoiding." As the men's arms will be sore and slightly swollen for a couple of days, only the lightest sort of drill is programmed.

With the arrival today of the Twenty-third and Seventy-fourth Regiments the only infantry unit still to get in is the Fourteenth, which is due Thursday. The trips of both regiments arriving today were accomplished without mishap. The Twenty-third was assigned to quarters alongside the Second, while the Buffalo unit was stationed next the First.

SAYS HE HIRED THUGS ON ORDER FROM VARE

Detective Names State Senator as Man 'Higher Up' in Bringing Gunmen to Philadelphia.

PROMISED $1,000 AND GOT IT

Samuel G. Maloney of O'Farrell Agency Gives Startling Testimony—Mayor Also Accused.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—State Senator Edwin H. Vare was named today as the man higher up who was to furnish the money to bring gunmen from New York for election work in the Fifth Ward here on primary day, Sept. 19, when a policeman was killed. Congressman William S. Vare, the Senator's brother, was named as giving assurance that the money would be forthcoming from Isaac Deutsch, the man who is alleged to have engaged the gangsters.

The Vare brothers, who have made millions in city contracts, were brought into the case through the sensational testimony by Samuel G. Maloney at a hearing given to Mayor Thomas B. Smith and eight others charged with conspiracy to murder and other crimes in the connection with the Fifth Ward killing. Altogether seventeen men are under arrest here and in New York in connection with the political feud.

Maloney, a former Republican factional leader in the Fifth Ward and now head of the local branch of the Val O'Farrell Detective Agency of New York, was the star witness at the hearing.

Tonight Senator Vare, who is a Republican factional leader here, gave out a statement in which he said that everything Maloney swore to, so far as it concerned the Vares, was an "absolute lie" and was only part of a general frame-up which he warned the people of Philadelphia about in a public statement two days ago.

Warned Mayor Smith.

Prior to Maloney's appearance on the witness stand, Isadore Stern, a member of the Legislature from the Fifth Ward, told how he had warned Mayor Smith on the night before the primary on the long-distance telephone of possible bloodshed; how he had engaged a special train to bring the Mayor from Atlantic City to restore order, and how the Mayor replied that Stern could not "put any stuff like that over on him."

James A. Carey, the McNichol leader in the Fifth Ward, who was a candidate for renomination to the City Council, and was opposed by Isaac Deutsch, the Vare candidate, appeared on the witness stand with his head swathed in bandages as a result of the blackjacking he received in the fight in which Policeman George A. Eppley was killed. Carey told of an interview with Mayor Smith, in which he said the Mayor told him he was against him and would "go the limit" to beat Carey, because he, the Mayor, wanted a council favorable to him. Carey described the assault upon himself and the action of the negro policeman in arresting him instead of apprehending the man who blackjacked him.

Virtually all of Stern's testimony concerned Mayor Smith's political activity and his alleged failure to stop "strong arm" work in the Fifth Ward, and the action of certain policemen in helping Deutsch.

Maloney testified that Deutsch came to his office and wanted to engage eighteen "husky" men for work in the Fifth Ward. Deutsch, according to Maloney, said a gang of men was coming from the Tenth Ward to "rough things," and he wanted to protect himself and his followers. The Tenth Ward is the home ward of State Senator McNichol.

Maloney said Deutsch informed him that Senator Vare would furnish the money, and when he went to Vare's office he saw Congressman Vare, who told him, the witness said, that Deutsch was well supplied with funds and everything would be all right. Maloney testified that William E. Finley, chief lieutenant of the Vares and Executive Director of the Republican City Committee, who was in Vare's office at the time, told him the same thing.

Maloney also said he met Senator Vare on the street and was told by him to see Captain Tate of the City Detective Bureau and arrange to have detectives sent to the ward on primary day. Tate, according to the witness, sent a man to see Maloney and asked him what detectives he should send into the ward.

The witness, after telling of the events of primary day, described his efforts to get the alleged gunmen out of the city and to obtain money to pay the expenses of bringing them here. He saw Finley in a hotel late on primary day and also the next day. Maloney said he wanted $1,000 to pay the expenses, but Finley did not have it. Two days after the primary, Maloney said, he received a special delivery letter containing a $1,000 bill.

Maloney said after talking with O'Farrell he told all he knew about the affair to Mr. Gordon and District Attorney Rotan without any promise of immunity.

SAYS NEW ENTERPRISES SHOULD AWAIT PEACE

Baker Declares Nothing Should Be Undertaken That Is Not Fundamental to Victory.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—New enterprises, "not fundamental to the efficient operation of the country's necessary activities" in winning the war should not be undertaken now, in the opinion of the Council of National Defense.

In a letter to the Indiana State Council of Defense, signed by Secretary Baker as Chairman, and made public tonight, the council says such a policy will not result adversely upon business or conditions of employment "because every man and every resource will be needed during the war." Transmitting the council's opinion on a question raised by the Indiana Council, Secretary Baker wrote:

"Every effort that this country is capable of making should be applied to bring the war to a speedy and successful conclusion. The resources of the country in a general way may be said to consist of men, money, and material, and during the period of the war any new enterprise or undertaking should be tried and justified by the test: Will the men, money, and material so applied best contribute in this way to the winning of the war?

"New enterprises which are not fundamental to the efficient operation of the country's necessary activities should not be undertaken. This will not result adversely upon business or conditions of employment because every man and every resource will be needed during the war. All effort should be centred to help win the war."

Tells a Story of the South During and After the Civil War.

"Mr. Harben, who knows his Georgia as Harte knew California or Hawthorne the Puritan New England, has written what we know to be an interesting and believe to be a truthful tale of the time and region in question, with a logical continuation into Reconstruction days. . . . a story which will command and hold the attention and which will give the average reader a more just and vital conception than he has had before the state of mind which ushered in the greatest civil conflict of our history."—*N. Shall we have a German Peace?

A world armed to the teeth until a bloodier war settles the fundamental questions left open by our weakness in accepting such a peace?

An America infested with spies and German-bought traitors working every minute to weaken our national structure in the interest of a foreign government and people who lie in wait to steal away our precious liberty when their poison has rendered us helpless?

Shall we be lulled to sleep by lying rumors circulated by the most faithless Foreign Office God's bright sun ever shone upon, for the sole purpose of delaying our war preparations?

Shall we fail a President who has called us out to "make the world safe for democracy," because we are too stupid to see through the clumsy machinations of our would-be seducers?

Shall it be said that Yankee wits are no match for German?

Or shall we make every sacrifice, utilize all our skill, mobilize all our power and strike this curse that has come among us from the face of the earth that a just and lasting peace may bless our descendants to the end of time?

Walk-Over SHOES

GIVING women the proper style in footwear is something that the Walk-Over Boot Shop is specially prepared to do. The style in Walk-Over Shoes for women comes from Paris. In that city, a style-expert from the Walk-Over factory not only studies the prevailing modes, but collects information from the makers of women's gowns. This last is a direct clue to what the coming shoe-styles are to be, because shoe-styles always follow close upon the styles of dress.

As a bit of interesting fashion news, we will advise our customers that the trend of fashion seems to point to another year of tan and brown shoe popularity for both men and women. The large number of men, and women too, who are wearing khaki, together with the tendency toward the military colors in all clothes, are increasing the vogue for tan and brown leathers.

We offer our customers in Walk-Over shoes, styles that are correct, in shoes that are designed by experts to afford the utmost ease and comfort, while conforming naturally to the lines and movements of the feet.

PERKINS REJECTED; MITCHELL CHOSEN

offered," he said, "and that everything has been done to put Perkins, toward whom I personally feel a deep distrust, in this place. It is remarkable that the Senators have withstood it. The Governor is in the position of Santa Claus, and has made the most of it. He has sugar plums in one hand and a whip in the other. The Senate has said that Perkins is unfit. I trust that from now on it will continue to show a little self-respect."

Senator Graves of Buffalo, who followed Senator Sage, referred to the delays in getting action on food control.

"The members of this Senate have known for months of the hardships the people have endured, and yet we find the majority leader of this body conspiring with Tammany to defeat the effort of a Republican Governor to protect the people from the extortions of the food speculator, and in many cases doubtless from starvation," he said. "Such conduct cannot be justified.

"Calm and liberal reflection satisfies me that there are two motives impelling and supporting this dispute. One is the selfish expression of well-known political rivalry. The other is deliberate attempt to bedevil the Food Control Board and defeat its purposes. It has been a campaign of sham and hypocrisy. There was not a single argument presented here that would convince a man around this circle. The only thing that had even a suggestion of plausibility was said by Senator Sage, whose poetic soul revolted at the extravagant use of money. But his own people had taken the sting out of that criticism by using the same dirty money on the other side of the question."

This reference to money spent by Mr. Perkins to pay for advertising directed against himself, brought Senator Sage to his feet.

"May I ask what the Senator means by that?" he demanded.

"The Senator said that one of his chief objections was the promiscuous use of money by Mr. Perkins's advertising. Now, I am not afraid of the man who will advertise in the public press. It is the secret use of money that the State and the public have to fear."

"I did not say anything about the money used for advertising," retorted Senator Sage.

"The use I objected to was the use of money by Mr. Perkins in buying people, and that is what I stated."

"Does the Senator think he bought anybody in this Senate?" asked Senator Graves.

"The Senator knows well that I did not," was the reply.

Senator Robinson, who not long ago was closely related with Mr. Perkins in the management of the Progressive Party in this State, broke into the debate at this point.

"Perhaps Senator Sage does not mean he actually bought anybody, but he has invested a good deal of money and has a first mortgage on a good many people by investing in their primary campaigns," he said.

"I would like the Senator to give a bill of particulars," exclaimed Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara, head of the late committee that investigated the Public Service Commissions. "These charges are beginning to get serious. Who is it he has an option or first mortgage on? Is it on me?"

"I understand Mr. Perkins paid $45,000 to publish the White Book," said Senator Robinson.

It was stated at the Executive Chamber tonight that Mr. Mitchell would continue as a member of the Industrial Commission, the Food Control law making specific provision to enable its members to hold other public offices. As head of the Food Control Commission he will draw no salary.

Final adjournment of the extraordinary session of the Legislature was taken immediately after the confirmation of the Mitchell nomination.

PERKINS CHARGES BETRAYAL.

Says His Opponents Acted in Interest of Dairymen's League.

George W. Perkins, whose appointment as head of the new State Food Commission was rejected by the State Senate yesterday, said that the men who voted against him had betrayed their constituents in this city and had sided the Dairymen's League, to whose methods he was opposed. Mr. Perkins issued a statement, reading in part:

"Twelve up-State Republicans, three New York City Republicans and ten Tammany Democrats from this city voted against my confirmation as Chairman of the State Food Commission. The upstate Republicans said they were against me because the farmers and the Dairymen's League were opposed to me. If that be true, it would be interesting to know on what grounds the New York City Republicans and the Tammany Senators based their objections; for their constituents are consumers, and if the producers are against me, the consumers should be for me.

"The bi-partisan combination at Albany represents the very worst element in the food traffic in this State. The sole reason for these Republican and Democratic Senators being against me is that they know I would have enforced the law to the limit. Their real constituents up-State and down-State are not the actual producers and consumers, but the gambler, the speculator, and the hoarder of foodstuffs."

CUTTING EXPENSE without sacrificing mileage

The Efficiency Standards of the Franklin Car

THERE has never been, and there likely never will be, a complaint against the motorist using his car freely for business and health. The criticism is against waste.

Before the war, in this country of plenty, waste was rather an unconscious habit. But the needs of war are correcting it and the lessons we are now learning will undoubtedly govern buying for personal requirements, as well as curtail the extravagance on necessities, for years to come.

During these days when every man, woman and child is cooperating with the call for National Thrift, it is hard—mighty hard—for a motorist to justify the extravagance of the car that gives but 10 or 12 miles to the gallon of gasoline and 5000 to 6000 miles to the set of tires.

The motorist who used to be indifferent about excessive gasoline and tire bills is now looking for the way to maintain his mileage at about half his present cost. But it means less taking of claims for granted, and more investigation of facts that stand ready to be demonstrated any time.

An Interesting Demonstration for Thinking Motorists

Let the car owner, or the man about to select a car, ponder a minute over the significance of the Franklin National Efficiency Demonstration held July 13. Here 179 Franklin Stock Cars, scattered all over the United States, established the remarkable average of 40.3 miles on a single gallon of gasoline.

There's a significant message in this national performance.

It proves once more how waste ends when scientific light weight enters.

How Franklin Direct Air Cooling, by the elimination of the regular 177 complicated water cooling parts, curtails fuel waste and, incidentally, avoids all cooling troubles.

How Franklin scientific construction brings to a negligible minimum all gasoline consuming friction and drag, with its wear and tear—responsible for the heavy annual depreciation in the average car. The Franklin is the easiest-rolling car in America.

How fine materials and fine workmanship mean all-around economy in the long run.

The Reasons for Franklin Efficiency are built into the Car

Take tires. Over ten thousand miles to the set, over a five-year period, is the actual experience of Franklin car owners—according to their own reports.

And the long life of the Franklin is best demonstrated by the absence of the Franklin in the volumes of used-car advertisements in daily newspapers.

Is any other car efficient enough to travel 1046 miles on a single gallon of oil, as the Franklin did last year on its run from New York to Chicago?

There's nothing vague about motor car thrift. It is as tangible as any other quality of the car.

Economy is with us to stay. You can't get it by accepting claims. Real economy is the result of efficient performance. Such performance is the reason, and the only reason, for Franklin Thrift.

To the motorist interested in cutting expense without sacrificing mileage, right now is the time to investigate the Franklin Car.

At this time of the year, when motorists turn their thoughts toward Enclosed Cars, it is well worth to bear in mind that every Franklin fundamental applies equally to the Franklin Enclosed Models.

STOCK VOTE TO PASS ON DU PONT DISPUTE

Shareholders to Say Whether Company or Present Owners Shall Control $56,000,000.

COURT ORDERS MEETING

T. Coleman du Pont Declares That He Never Offered His Stock to the Company.

A special stockholders' meeting of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., makers of munitions, will be held at Wilmington, Del., next Wednesday, at which the future control of stocks and bonds, worth, it has been estimated, approximately $56,000,000, will be determined. By their vote upon a resolution which will be presented at the meeting, the stockholders may secure for the corporation control of this huge block of securities, or they may confirm the present holders in its ownership. The stock and bonds are held at present by the du Pont Securities Company, which was organized by eighteen Directors and stockholders of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. as a holding company and depositary for the stock and bonds which will be contended for at the meeting on Oct. 10.

The special meeting will be held under a decision by the United States District Court for the District of Delaware and will be presided over by Daniel O. Hastings, appointed Special Master by the Court. The form of the resolution to be voted on has been prescribed by the Federal Court, as has the form of proxies and of procedure at the meeting. When the meeting is held it will have had its absorbing prelude in the Federal Court, and there is every reason to believe that there will be a postlude, too, for both the contending factions of du Ponts and their kin involved in the fight over the stock have taken steps to retain eminent counsel and take their fight again into the courts, in the event that the decision at the stockholders' meeting on Oct. 10 should go against them.

The stock and bonds in dispute represent the former holdings of T. Coleman du Pont. Until March 13, 1915, when he was succeeded by Pierre S. du Pont, a cousin, T. Coleman du Pont was President of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. and its biggest stockholder.

The block of securities includes 63,314 shares of common and 14,599 shares of preferred stock of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, which has been absorbed by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. Under the resolution, framed by the court for presentation at the stockholders' meeting, there will also come before those entitled to vote the question whether the du Pont Securities Company should not be required to turn over to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. as well 126,828 shares of its common stock received as dividends on the stock of the powder company by the persons controlling the securities company, together with such other stock and bond dividends and cash as have been realized by them on the big block of stock acquired from T. Coleman du Pont.

The stock was purchased from T. Coleman du Pont by Pierre S. Du Pont before the latter became President of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., but while he was Chairman of the Finance Committee of its Board of Directors. In the court proceedings leading up to the special stockholders' meeting which were brought by Philip F. du Pont as a stockholder with other stockholders, of whom a majority bore the name du Pont, joining in, the plaintiffs claimed that the stock of T. Coleman du Pont had been secured by Pierre S. du Pont as the result of a betrayal of his trust to the company, that he had secured for himself and the others who joined in the formation of the du Pont Securities Company these securities which the plaintiffs claimed should have been acquired for the stockholders of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., by using the knowledge he had acquired of the company's affairs and prospects as one of its principal officers, as well as its credit. In these views, the plaintiffs were sustained by the court.

This charge grew out of the allegation that T. Coleman du Pont, who while the negotiations for the stock were in progress was in Minnesota recovering from an operation, had offered to sell to the company for distribution among some of its more important employes 20,700 shares of his holdings of common stock. The Finance Committee, of which A. I. du Pont, who, it is contended, inspired the court proceedings, was a member, turned this offer down on the ground that the price asked by T. Coleman du Pont, $160 a share, was too high to justify the investment of the company's surplus in the securities.

Pierre S. du Pont, as Chairman of the Finance Committee, was instructed to convey the information to T. Coleman du Pont, but testimony was adduced before Judge Thompson to show that, while he communicated to him the fact that the offer had been rejected, he never informed him that it was on account of the price of the stock being fixed at such a high figure. On the other hand, T. Coleman du Pont has said over his signature that Pierre left unreported no material fact in regard to the rejection of the proposition. The plaintiffs in the case claimed that the purchased by Pierre S. du Pont and his associates in the du Pont Securities Company was the direct result of the earlier negotiations and that Mr. du Pont had turned an offer made to the company of a limited amount of the stock into an opportunity to enrich himself and the other men in the securities company at the expense of the other stockholders. The court so held, although the defendants in the proceedings contended that this claim was not justified.

The whole question as to the propriety of the acquisition by Pierre S. du Pont of the T. Coleman du Pont holdings, according to the contention of the defendants, hinged on whether the opportunity of acquiring the stock would have been open to the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company as well as to Pierre S. du Pont and his associates. They caused T. Coleman du Pont to be summoned as a witness, and while he was on the stand he was asked: "Did you at any time make an offer to sell this stock to the company?" To this he answered: "I did not." He was then asked whether he would have been willing to sell out to the company instead of to his cousin and the latter's associates who later formed the du Pont Securities Company. At this point his testimony was shut off by an objection from the counsel for the plaintiffs, which the court sustained.

Coleman du Pont Acquits Pierre.

In the canvass for proxies for the special stockholders' meeting, which has been in progress ever since it was ordered, both factions have sent letters to the stockholders presenting their side of the case. Attached to a letter sent out by the defendants in the proceedings was a communication to Pierre S. du Pont by T. Coleman du Pont, directed to the stockholders of the company. This communication follows:

Wilmington, Del., May 11, 1917.

To the Directors of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Gentlemen: In view of the decision of the United States Court in the suit of Philip F. du Pont et al. vs. Pierre S. du Pont et al., I think it proper that your stockholders should be advised of the following facts:

In December, 1914, I proposed a plan of interesting those in responsible positions in E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company as stockholders, and suggested that the company advance money from its treasury to help carry the stock for those men. Under this plan I offered 20,700 shares of common stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company for distribution.

When this proposition was discussed by the Finance Committee of the company I was absent from Wilmington, and during my absence it was reported to me that the Finance Committee of the company had not accepted the proposition.

Mr. Pierre S. du Pont, then Vice President of the company, wrote me fully of the affairs of the company during my absence, and, on again reading his letters, I find that he left unreported no material fact in regard to the proposition made by me nor to its non-acceptance by the Finance Committee. On Jan. 17, 1915, I finally withdrew the proposition in a telegram to Pierre S. du Pont. I confirmed this withdrawal in my letter of Jan. 19, 1915.

About this time I authorized Mr. L. L. Dunham (his counsel) to sell from twenty to forty thousand shares of my common stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company at $200 per share. I also expressed my willingness to sell stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company to Mr. P. S. du Pont for distribution among men in responsible positions, arranging for a financing of the transaction through bankers.

On Feb. 20, 1915, I received a proposition from P. S. du Pont personally offering to purchase my holdings of stock. I was fully aware at this time that the purpose was for his personal account and his associates. I agreed to sell my entire holdings to him.

At no time did I offer more than 20,700 shares of common stock to E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company or its Finance Committee, and that offer was with the sole purpose of resale to the principal employes of the company, and the proposition so stated. I never offered to sell or expressed willingness to sell more than forty thousand shares to anybody until receipt of Mr. Pierre S. du Pont's offer to purchase these shares. I never sold any stock to anybody if I did not sell to Mr. P. S. du Pont.

These statements put forth by the attorneys for the plaintiffs in the above case, in which they claim that Pierre S. du Pont deceived me in the transactions relating to the purchase of my stock, are entirely unwarranted and are untrue in every particular.

I think it fair that the stockholders should know directly from me that I believe that they have no right or interest whatever in the stock which I formerly owned, and that, if for any reason the sale to Mr. Pierre S. du Pont was not effective, then title to stock is properly mine. Yours very truly,

(Signed) COLEMAN DU PONT.

For the entire T. Coleman du Pont holdings, with their earnings to date, estimated at about $56,000,000, Pierre S. du Pont and his associates paid $13,903,715. There were interest charges, according to the estimate made by the court, of $1,803,165.68, a total of principal and interest of $15,706,880.66.

In the opinion filed by the court it was held as a foregone conclusion that the acquisition of the stock would be of enormous profit to the company, but that to determine that question was properly a function of the stockholders and not of the court, as it was a matter of business policy.

Pierre S. du Pont and those associated with him in the deal for the T. Coleman du Pont stock—and they include the men who have been in active control of the affairs of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. during its years of highest efficiency and greatest prosperity—have urged upon the stockholders that serious business consequences might follow a vote resulting in the acquisition by the company itself of the stock now controlled by the eighteen Directors and stockholders who participated in the benefits from the T. Coleman du Pont transaction. While the control of the corporation, with its assets of $250,000,000, is not directly involved in the contest, a vote to take over the stock and possibly retire it, or place it in the company's treasury, would not only, in their opinion, weaken control, but reflect a lack of confidence in the present management that might react against the company in a manner far outweighing any gains the stockholders could derive from taking the stock for the company.

Testimony for the Defendants.

Certain portions of the testimony taken at the trial and not hitherto published in THE TIMES, it is contended, on behalf of the defendants, put them in a much better light than that thrown upon them by the court's decision. Two extracts from this testimony follow:
